The toast to the soccer team was proposed by Mrs. W. R. Morris, who said she greatly enjoyed all sports and took great pleasure in presenting the cup to the King Edward champions.

The response to this toast was made by Fred Thompson, who also thanked the ladies for so splendidly entertaining them at this banquet.

Teacher Leaving

James Price, in presenting a gift, read an address of farewell to H. Langford, who is soon to sever his relations with the King Edward School staff, wishing him success in his future and expressing the deep regrets of the students at their loss of this popular teacher.

In a few words, Mr. Langford thanked the boys for their thoughtfulness and the spirit which prompted the gift, saying that he would carry away many pleasant memories of the good times spent here.

In closing, Mr. Bolton voiced a hearty vote of thanks to the ladies of the Home and School Association for bringing about this very enjoyable evening and for doing so much toward promoting the school spirit by their co-operation with both pupils and teachers.

In responding, Mrs. Andrews, the president, thanked the members of the staff, who had shown this same spirit of co-operation.

Community singing interspersed the other numbers, with Miss Isabel Connolly as accompanist.

Delore Troop.

MARMORA, December 1. — The end of the week will see the close of the November Patrol Contest, with a fire lighting test and games to decide which patrol will win.

The Eagle Patrol, consisting of Patrol Leader Will Simmons, second Fred Callery, and Scouts Dan Paquet, Vincent Callery and Charlie Shannon, earned a total of 173 points to date, while the Loon Patrol, consisting of Patrol Leader Maurice Barlow, Second Percy Gray, and Scouts Ray Loveless, Dick Smith and Eugene Paquet, earned a total of 225 points to date. As there are 80 points to be awarded for games not yet played and 50 points for scouts lighting a fire without matches, and 25 points for the best patrol room, it is still impossible to say which patrol will win.

The troop is working hard towards putting on a concert and display, which it is hoping to present some time early in January, thereby raising some funds for equipment of which the troop is much in need.

As soo nas this equipment materializes the Scouts hope to install a telegraph instrument between most of the houses and on a cold winter night too stormy to go out, a lot of fun will be had sending messages from one Scout to another, and unless the rest of the house learn the code they will not know just what is being talked about.

Now the snow is here again, a good tracking game will be just the thing, and a trail wil lbe laid on Saturday, to make a real test of the observant powers of each patrol.

Unless some other Scout manages to win extra points on Saturday Patrol Leader Maurice Barlow will be the chief games chooser for December, as he is leading all other Scouts by one point.

"In the development of the country," continued Sir Henry, "our policy must be somewhat different to that of a private corporation, for in addition to solving our own problems we owe a responsibility to all the municipalities that we serve. We sometimes, in the interest of public welfare, are obliged to take over lines which, while not profitable in themselves, are allied to our lines to give service and help to develop certain sections of the Dominion to become productive areas. That aspect of our relations should commend itself to any sensible citizen, but in so doing we also must have due regard for the state of our finances and not be an undue burden upon the state.

Centuries to Complete.

"It must not be forgotten that we as Canadians, are erecting a great edifice which will require centuries to complete. We who are active in finance, commerce, industry, and other phases of business and professional life, are now laying the foundations of this great structure. If we review the achievements in the past, examine our own country, and then contemplate what has been accomplished, we must admit that we have worked well. But what lessons do we learn from this? That the laws and legal enactments be such that offer private enterprise an opportunity; that able educational facilities be offered the young people along sound lines; that religion be prominent, prosperous but tolerant; that immigration be prosecuted vigorously and efforts made to make the immigrant comfortable and happy, and his children given every opportunity to become good, intelligent citizens of Canada; that the natural resources of the nation be dedicated to and developed for the people of Canada, and not exploited elsewhere, and that steps and gestures be made to draw closer together the two great races of Canada, so that we may profit to the full the thrift of the French-Canadian peoples and their glorious traditions and all the knowledge and wisdom that the Anglo-Saxon race has accumulated throughout the ages, for in the development of practical aspects we must not be blind to that fact that culture and progress go hand in hand. Were we to develop along these lines, we can do more to advance the cause of civilization than in any other way."

RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED

Executive of Ontario Associate Board Endorses "Summer Time" Proposal.

PETITION GOVERNMENT.

J. J. Duffus, past president of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, and of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, with the Secretary of the local Chamber, attended in Toronto on Friday an executive meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards held in the council room of the Toronto Board of Trade, Royal Bank Building.

The meeting was largely attended, directors being present from as far east as Ottawa and Belleville, and as far west as Collingwood and St. Thomas.

Business before the meeting, which was the first since the annual conference in North Bay this past October, included the disposition to be given resolutions passed at the annual conference. Such resolutions as:

Standardizing Wheel Gauge of Vehicles;

Settlement and Development of Northern Ontario;

Daylight Saving;

Collection of Interprovincial Debts, and

Development of St. Lawrence River, came before the attention of the meeting, and a delegation from the Ontario Association of Architects was also heard. The Peterborough Chamber of Commerce resolution on Daylight Saving, which at the annual conference was referred to the executive, was unanimously endorsed by the executive of the Ontario Associated boards after some slight revision and discussion.

Called "Summer Time."

The term "Daylight Saving" was deleted and "Summer Time" substituted. The resolution found unexpected support in K. J. Dunstan, vice-president of the Bell Telephone Co., of Canada, Ltd., who pointed out that most of the criticism levelled at what we term "Daylight Saving," was caused by the unfortunate choice of a name. He advocated that it be termed "Summer Time" for the reason that during the summer months dawn of course is earlier. Mr. Dunstan pointed out that in Great Britain and on the Continent the term "Summer Time" is used, and that in its earliest inception the measure was endorsed by many public bodies such as the Medical Association which felt that it is in the best interests of the health of the people that they enjoy the additional hour of sunlight.

Accordingly the resolution from Peterborough, when presetned to the Provincial Government, will read as follows:

"Whereas, adoption of Summer Time has in the past been anything but universal, and

Whereas the whole situation as we experience it each summer, is perplexing and confusing,

Therefore, resolved, that the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, petition the Provincial Government to bring legislation into effect, which will make Summer Time (one hour ahead) operative throughout the Province."

K. J. Dunstan promised that he would be an advocate along with Mr. Duffus and the Secretary of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce in promoting the resolution before the Prime Minister at the proper time.

TIGERS EASILY WIN SENIOR RUGBY TITLE

REGINA FALLS FOR 30-0 COUNT

LISTLESS GAME.

HAMILTON, Dec. 3.—Tigers are monorchs of all they survey in the Canadian senior rugby jungles, arriving undefeated after an absence of 13 years, Saturday afternoon they monarchs of all they survey in the humbled Regina Rough Riders, champions of the great open spaces west of the head of the lakes, in the C.R.U. intersectional final by the significant score of 30 to 0. As the figures indicate the Bengal band was always the better team.

Tigers' superiority was so apparent, the play at times so apathetic, and errors of omission and commission so frequent that Saturday's final was in the nature of an anti-climax to a season which provided more than the usual number of upsets and uncertainties. Though the Jungle Kings were only six points in front at half time the fans were given little opportunity to enthuse over the prospect of a Western threat, for the Rough Riders during that first 30 minutes were forced to wage a stubborn but steadily weakening defensive action, mostly in their own territory.

It was only in the later stages, when the Tigers were safely ensconced on a pile of points, that the Western invaders drove into striking distance, and then it was as a direct result of Bengal misplays. Twice in the fourth period the Maroon machine marched under the Tiger goalposts. The champions' defence shed some of the listlessness, and the fans knew that the Rough Riders could not batter through for a major score, but did expect them to a avert a "whitewash" by booting for singles. On the first occasion "Huck" Welch weaved his way out of the goal zone after receiving a punt and on the second "Pep" Leadley pulled a Regina onside kick out of the air and plunged over the safe side of the goal strip.

CHICAGO WINS ROUGH TUSSLE

DEFENCE WEAK.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The Chicago Blackhawks won their first National Hockey League game here Saturday night at the expense of Benny Leonard's Pirates by a 3 to 2 score. Outplayed in every department of the game, the locals staged a belated rally in the final stanza which fell one short of knotting the count.

The Pirate defense was awry. Time and again the Blackhawk skaters got by the final brace of defence men, to have open shots at the goal. The game was fast and at times exceedingly rough.

In the final period the Leonard colors came close to flying from the top of the mast, but one goal, practically a gift, and scored by Arbour, gave Chicago the edge.

Pittsburgh.—Goal, Miller; defence, Smith, Holway; centre, Milks; wings, Darragh, Cotton; subs., McCurry, Drury, White; J. McKinnon, Mackay.

SARNIA STUDENTS IN SCHOOL TITLE

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—Sarnia's well-drilled wing line working in front of a brilliant backfield blasted Bloor's hopes of winning the O.R.F.U. Interscholastic championship at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon by a 12-to-0 score, and left no doubt as to which was the better team. From early in the game, when Louie Wettlaufer, star of the local students, was equalled by the Sarnia kickers, the final result was evident, for Bloor's line was torn to shreds by the Westerners' thrusts. The champions of the W.O.S.S.A. were easily the best of the season, and all who saw them in action on Saturday will admit their superiority.

Sarnia was strong in every department of the game, and their ace card was in knowing what it was all about. They went about their play with assurance, and confidence, and never hesitated for a second to do the right thing. Moore and Patterson formed a star rear guard that caught faultlessly, kicked almost perfectly, and made sensational gains in the open field, while on plays from scrimmage the Westerners had Bloor beaten from the star, with powerful plunges through the line and big advances around the ends on extension runs. The strength of the Sarnia students defensively is proved by the shut-out score, but is emphasized more by the fact that the locals did not make yards at any time during the game

SPRINGFIELD AND NEWARK BATTLE TO EVEN COUNT.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Springfield and Newark waged a 1 to 1 tie here Saturday night in a Canadian-American League game before the largest crowd of the season, 6,000. The Buff Dogs took an early lead when Wasnie took a long shot which got by the local goalie after a little more than four minutes of play. After being scoreless in the second period, Springfield came back in the third and Cecil Dillon shot a pass to "Scotty" Cawkell, who shot the puck past the Newark goalie to tie the score. The overtime found both teams tight on the defence.

Western University Granted Admittance To Senior Interc ollegiate Rugby Series

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Formal admittance of Western University to the senior inter-collegiate rugby series, was made at the semi-annual meeting of the Canadian Inter-collegiate Athletic Union, held here on Saturday, and at which Prof. J. C. Simpson, of McGill, presided.

The formal application came before the union, and unanimous consent was given. The question of the drawing up of a new schedule for next fall was left to the athletic managers of Varsity, McGill, Western and Queen's, and they will report to the C.I.R.F.U. Arrangements will be made whereby there will be no necessity for a draw in the event of a tie in the rugby series, and it will be understood by all teams before the schedule starts just where play-offs will be held.

Saturday's meeting was comparatively brief, though there was considerable discussion on various matters. Application was made by Loyola of Montreal and Osgoode Hall of Toronto for admittance to the senior intercollegiate hockey series, but this was referred to the hockey union for consideration.

The four-year rule was discussed, but contrary to expectations, there was only a mild interest shown in it, and no action was taken by the union regarding a change in the rule. It now appears as though the rule is in to stay.

Authority was given for the issuing of medals to the winners of the intermediate track meet, which was started last fall in London

RANGERS AGAIN DROP DECISION

BENEDICT GOOD.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—The New York Rangers and the Montreal Maroons, last season's Stanley Cup finalists, met for the second time this season, at the Forum Saturday night, and for the second time, the cup holders were forced to bow to the local Maroons. In the first game between the two teams, at New York, the Montrealers scored a 1 to 0 victory, while Saturday night's score was 3 to 0.

A weakened defence, which failed to hold during the last half of the game, caused the Rangers' downfall. The teams battled on even terms during the first period and half of the second, b:. when big Ching Johnson, Ranger defence man, crashed into the boards behind the Montreal net, and was forced to retire with a broken ankle, the Montreal offensive took on a real dangerous aspect. A few minutes after Johnson's retirement, a three-man Montreal attack swept in on the Ranger defence. Smith, at centre, had the puck. He cut over to the left wing, and Stewart dashed towards centre. Ward was on the right wing. As they reached the opposing defence, Smith passed over to Stewart, and the latter, although closely covered by the Ranger defence, drove a burning shot past Roach for the first gaol of the game.

Net Second Goal.

Early in the second period, another Smith to Stewart attack netted a second Montreal gaol, the big local left winger beating Roach with another fast drive, this time from the left side of the Ranger net. Eight minutes later, Dutton swept down the ice alone, and beat the Gotham goalie with a hard shot from just outside the defence. That ended the scoring, and although the visitors tried hard to cut down the locals' lead, they could not fathom the tight defensive system thrown up by the Maroons. Several times during the game, they did crash through, but Benedict, the veteran goalie, was in top form. Once during the first period, Boucher and the Cook brothers broke through, and seemed headed for a goal, but Benedict stopped the puck and sat on it to keep the blue-clad players from poking in the rebound. The Rangers claimed a goal, stating that Benedict fell on the puck, it was over the line, but the goal judge ruled otherwise. Benny had another close call in the final session, when an unexpected long shot caught him napping. The puck, luckily for Benedict, hit him on the gloves and bounced in front. He did not see the disc until it had hit him.

Herb Gardiner Will Play With Chicago

MONTREAL, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press)—Herb. Gardiner, former defence star of Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League, will be seen on the ice for the Chicago Black Hawkes shortly, according to Leo Dandurand, managing director of the local club.

When Canadiens released Gardiner to the Hawks, it was on the understanding that Gardiner would be a bench manager only. However, Canadiens have agreed to dispense with that stipulation and the tall westerner will be seen as a defence player again. Gardiner is rated one of the most astute guards in the game and should materially stiffen the Chicago team.

CURLERS MEET AT MILLBROOK

Dr. N. H. Young Is New President of Club For Coming Year.

OTHER OFFICERS ELECTED.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 3—(Examiner Correspondence). —A well-attended meeting of those interested in curling activities for the current season was held in the council chamber on Thursday evening, past president, P. Stinson, occupying the chair.

The retiring president's address showed appreciation of the loyalty and good sportsmanship which characterized the curling club last season, and which are, indeed, features of its membership every year, and the fine record made by the rinks which attended the various bonspiels at Peterborough, Lindsay, Toronto, and other points, was also mentioned.

The election of officers for 1929 resulted as follows:—

Honorary Presidents—R. M. Waddell, Peterborough, and J. Steele, Millbrook.

President—Dr. N. H. Young.

Vice.Pres.—H. R. Scott.

Secretary-Treasurer — J. Arthur Vance.

Executive Committee—The officers and W. G. Hetherington, V. C. Lambert, W. E. Ball, T. H. Collins, P. Stinson.

Membership Committee—J. E. Allen and W. E. Ball.

The local curling club has twenty-two members listed on the membership roll of the Ontario Curling Association, and the secretary may probably have more signed up in the immediate future.

The rink skipped by Ross Edmunds won the Allen trophy last season; H. Lancashire won the Waddell Trophy, coming out first in the Scotch Doubles; and T. H. Collins headed the list in the thirteen point games for the W. J. E. Gillett Trophy. These cups will all be up for competition again this season.

Worters' Suspension Temporarily Lifted

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Roy Worters, suspended Pittsburgh Pirate goalkeeper, can play for the New York Americans until such time as the Board of Governors of the National hockey league passes on a deal between the Pirates and the Americans, by which Worters goes to the latter club, a deal which President Frank Calder has refused to ratify. President Calder early last night announced that the suspension on Worters had been temporarily lifted, and that pending a meeting of the governors in New York early this week, Worters could guard the New York American net.

LES CANADIENS IN SECOND PLACE

SENATORS AT BOTTOM.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press)—Canadiens climbed into a triple tie for second place in the Canadian division of the National Hockey League and dropped Ottawas to the bottom rung of the league ladder by conquering the locals here Saturday night by two goals to nil. Eight thousand four hundred people, establishing the second largest crowd to witness a major league hockey match at the Ottawa Auditorium jammed the huge structure to see the flaming-shirted "Habitants" sweep through to their impressive victory that sent the Senators down to their second straight defeat of the season. The high-water mark for attendance at a local N.H.L. fixture was set in the season of 1923-24, when Canadiens were again the attraction.

Impressive Triumph

The "Flying Frenchmen's" triumph was impressive in every sense of the word. They outplayed Ottawas in every department of the game, and while they did not register their two goals until the final period, they always looked the better team and would have accumulated a larger scoring total but for the skilled goaltending of Alex. Connell, who rose to the heights when the visitors stormed the local citadel two and three-men abreast. The Canucks quickly solved the Senators' passing game and excelled them in this branch of the sport, while their back-checking and defensive work stood out over what the local exhibited in this respect.

The line-up:

Ottawa.—Goal, Connell; defence, Boucher, Clancy; centre, Neighbor; wings, Finnigan, Touhey; subs., Grosvenor, Halliday, Smith, Shields, Elliott.

Canadiens.—Goal, Hainsworth; defence, Mantha, Burke; centre, Morenz; wings, Gagne, Joliat; subs, Patterson, Leduc, Gaudreault, Carson, Lepine.

Officials—Lou Marsh and Dave Ritchie.

Summary

First Period:—

Penalties—Mantha, Nighbor, Gagne, Leduc, Smith, Gaudreault.
Second Period:—

Third Period:—

LEAFS BLANK AMERICANS 3-0

Blair, Cox and Arbour Are the Scorers in Victory.

HIMES GUARDS NET.

TORONTO, Dec. 3—Although weakened by the absence of Bill Carson, who was kept out of the game by an aggravation of the injury to his elbow received in the game at Ottawa nearly two weeks ago, the Maple Leafs accomplishing something at the Arena Gardens on Saturday night that the Ottawa Senators could not do in two attempts and the Canadiens, Rangers and locals failed to do in one effort; they defeated the hitherto undefeated New York Americans and what is more, they blanked the team that has surprised major hockey league followers by setting the pace from the start of the season.

Once again it was the newcomers to the team that provided the greater portion of the scoring punch on the attack, as Andy Blair and Jack Arbour scored on individual rushes and Blair gave Danny Cox a pass-out from behind the Americans' goal that permitted the left winger to count. The Leafs had many more scoring chances than had the visitors and on the play deserved more, but Duncan, Cox, Lowrey, Horne and Bailey were turned aside on a number of promising excursions while on the other hand the Star Spangled crew showed little beyond a sniping style of attack which might have been more successful against a less alert custodian than Lorne Chabot.

There was quite a lot of excitement before the game got under way owing to the purchase of Roy Worters from the Pittsburg club by the Americans and an attempt to play him in face of the suspension which still confines his interest in the game to that of a spectator. Worters went on the ice with the Americans for the preliminary warming up, but was ordered off by the referees and Normie Himes had to make a quick change and then fill in as the goalie.

Americans Lose Again

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 3—Although the New York Americans had Roy Worters, sensational goalie, they lost their second National League hockey game in as many evenings here last night when the Detroit Cougars, led by Carson Cooper, broke through to win by a 2 to 1 score. The Americans dropped a game to Toronto last night. Nine thousand people saw the game.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

While no attempt will be made to publish this series of famous Peterborough hockey matches in chronological order it is fitting perhaps that it should begin with the story of the first hockey championship won by a local team and so we will take a long jump into the past over a span of nearly 35 years and see how, on the night of February 19, 1894, the Peterborough hockey club defeated the Toronto Granites I, 15 to 0. With the victory went the Junior O.H.A. championship and while the exploit did not mean as much hockey as it involved in a championship nowadays for the team only had to play two or three rounds, it caused just as much excitement in the home town of the new champions for we read in The Examiner of the next day that the game was played "before a gathering of the best and most prosperous citizens of Peterborough, an assembly so large that it was difficult for a late-comer to obtain a nook or corner from which he might be able to view the game with any degree of satisfaction to himself or comfort to those around him.

As a contest the match evidently left something to be desired for the report says that "the spectators at the rink last night were disappointed—disagreeably so—they went with the sole thought of seeing a closely contested and evenly played game but as the 'Chicagoing' (the used slang on the sport page even in those days) given the Granite boys shows their expectations were not fulfilled. Hence the match was not so exciting as the Queen's-Peterborough fray but it was more gentlemanly, less rough, faster, prettier, easier and more graceful." Altogether quite a game.

The Peterborough line up on that team of long ago contains names that, with an exception of one or two, are remembered by only the old-timers. Walter Phelan, one of the forwards is an uncle of Ald. Nagle. Phelan, and is frequently in town, while the late Dr. Lionel King who also played on the attacking division that night, was a brother of Dr. D. C. King and was a famous athlete in many lines of sport. Several of the others were bank clerks, whose residence here was not of very long duration.

It should be remembered there was age limit in the junior series back in 1894. So long as a player did not enter the senior ranks he could remain in the junior all his life and doubtless many of those engaged in the battle were over the present age limit.

Peterboroughs were superior at all points. They led by 9 to 0 at half time and playing six men aside in the last half added six more goals. They had scored six times before the Granites got a shot at goal keeper Dixon. The big scorers of the night were Phelan and Hedley, each of whom registered five times.

To reach the finals the Peterborough team first defeated the local Edison seven and then triumphed over Queen's second 8 to 3 in the semi-finals.

The line up:

Peterborough — Goal, G. Dixon; point, W. J. Montgomery; cover point, J. Parsons, forwards, L. King, H. C. Worham, J. Hedley, W. Phelan.

Toronto Granites—Goal, H. Livingstone; point, C. McArthur; cover point, B. Holland; forwards, W. Dixon, W. Crothers, W. Lillie, J. McBrien.

Goal umpires—W. D. Parker, G. Crawford.

Referee—G. Anderson, Osgoodt Hall, Toronto.

Time-keeper—T. Sullivan, Toronto.

Fans were evidently much the same as they are now for the scribe of '94 reports "some precocious youths thought that blowing horns and hitting the side of the rink with huge sticks manifested a true spirit of rejoicing. It certainly did not and there should be some consideration extended by these 'smarties' for the other and older and quieter spectators' nerves and feelings."

To-morrow, the Peterborough-Granites game of 1895.

PHILADELPHIA INCREASES LEAD IN LEAGUE RACE

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Dec. 3—(Canadian Press).—Philadelphia increased its lead in the Canadian American League hockey race by defeating Providence Saturday night before more than 4,000 persons at the Rhode Island auditorium. The score was 3 to 1

Philadelphia outplayed Providence throughout the contest.

Whyte of Philadelphia in the second period scored the first goal of the game. In the first four minutes of the last period Bryden and Andrews of Philadelphia each scored one goal. Chapman scored Providence's only tally.

The Varsity Orphans made a gallant fight against superior odds in the Eastern Canada football final at Hamilton on Saturday and it was not until the final period that the students succumbed to the battering-ram tactics of the Tigers. The superb tackling of the Varsity Orphans was one of the features of the game. In the photograph from left to right are Jack Sinclair, the kicking half-back; Art Snider, the great little tackler; Ralph McIntosh, the manager of the team, and below, the original Orphan mascot.

SNAPPIGRAMS OF LAST WEEK'S SPORT CALENDAR

And to-day we ring down the curtain. West meets East in the Canadian rugby finals, and the 1928 gridiron season passes into history, whether amidst the usual medley of mud, mist and flying flakes remains at this writing to be seen. Sad it is but true, that the weather seldom favors superlative rugby at this advanced season, though looking back across the years one can recall several mighty championship battles which have been fought under mellow and almost ideal conditions. From the spectators' point of view the present year has furnished few striking high lights. The "impudence" of the gritty "Varsity Orfuns", regarded at the outset as a bunch of hopeless discards, in wading through the stiffest opposition into the eastern semi-finals, probably provided the paste-board holders with their biggest thrill. Montreal atmosphere continues to be charged with rumors that the elusive Dave Trottier will bestow himself on Eddie Gerard, manager of the Marcons, as a Christmas present. Guess Santa may have something good in his bag for the Men of the Mountain. On Monday eve the Seattle puck-chasers will try to twist the tail of the Vancouver lion, in the latter's own lair. And that's one Pacific Coast League fixture which will give the Vancouver rail birds something worth shouting over. These coast lads know how to rip things loose with the best of 'em. Another game worth seeing will be the Maple Leafs at Montreal, seeking next Tuesday to stem the lust for revenge which the hot blooded Canadiens demand, in order to efface their recent failure in Toronto. Some say the pro-hockey player is little better than a slave. Poor lads; rolling about in limousines with a pittance of about $250 weekly salary in their pockets, they have a pretty pinched and penurious time of it. If this is slavery, bring on your shackles. Rome at its palmiest was never like this.

"TWO LOVERS" PRIZE WINNING STORY, WITH RONALD COLMAN AND VILMA BANKY, THE BIG FEATURE ATTRACTION AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT. MR. HAROLD CLUFF OF TORONTO WILL SING "LENORA" THE THEME SONG AT EVERY PERFORMANCE.

The story of "Two Lovers" the big attraction at the Capitol to-night, which features Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky was the prize winning story in an international contest that had 40,000 entries. Mr. Harold Cluff of Toronto will sing "Lenora" the theme song at each perfomance.

More than a year ago, shortly after Mr. Goldwyn had decided to split his famous team of stars, he announced that a prize of $2500 would be paid to the film fan suggesting the best idea for the final Colman-Banky picture. Original stories were not invited; what Mr. Goldwyn wanted was the suggestion of a published novel or produced play that might make a picture big enough for the final joint effort of Mr. Colman and Miss Banky.

Mr. Goldwyn engaged a staff of twelve readers to take care of the flood of replies. Every answer was carefully acknowledged, recorded and filed. The books and plays suggested were procured, regardless of cost, and read and analyzed. Postage on the cost is estimated to have cost more than $4,000, the clerical expense probably twice that amount.

After six weeks, during which his specially improvised scenario department worked eighteen hours a day seven days a week, the tabulation showed that more than thirty contestants had suggested the Baroness Orczy novel, "Leatherface," a best seller some fifteen years ago. When an examination of the records was made, it was found that Betty Osborne, a 16-year-old schoolgirl of Milwaukee, Wis., had been the first to submit the idea.

The working script of the novel was quickly arranged by Alice D. G. Miller, who later made the scenario. Both Mr. Colman and Miss Banky, and also director Fred Niblo, enthusiastically endorsed Mr. Goldwyn's selection. Accordingly, a representative was dispatched to Milwaukee with Mr. Goldwyn's check for $2500 and duly paid to the surprised youngster. A week later, the picture was in the throes of production at the Goldwyn studio under Niblo's direction.

AT THE REGENT.

ADDED ATTRACTIONS: HAROLD CLUFF OF THE LEO. FEIST MUSIC CO. WILL SING AT THE EVENING PERFORMANCES.

Most Thrilling of Gene Stratton-Porter's Works, Freckles, Now at Regent.

Introducing on the screen the best known book of a famous authoress "Feckles," by Gene Stratton-Porter, will open at the Regent Theatre to-night. It is an FBO production made under the direction of Leo Meehan, who has directed many screen successes based on the works of Mrs. Porter.

"Freckles" deals with the simple and charming love affair between an orphan boy and a wealthy girl who meet through their mutual love of the great outdoors and the mysteries it presents.

Laid in the Limberlost Forest, made famous by Mrs. Porter, the thrilling story is presented against a background of woodland dells and giant trees which will appeal to every true lover of Nature.

A one-armed boy, an orphan, without a friend, is given the hazardous task of guarding the valuable timber in the Limberlost. Through a marvellous collection of moths he accumulates, he makes the acquaintance of the Bird Woman and her daughter, whom he likens to an angel.

The boy's bravery in dangerous situations and several breath-taking encounters and his open-hearted frankness win the respect of the elder woman and the love of the girl, who, when her lover gets in trouble with timber thieves, comes gallantly to his aid.

But the timber guard realizes the difference in station between himself and his love and is afraid to propose. Only an accident in which he almost loses his life to save hers brings them together in a sweet and charming finale.

A remarkable cast was assembled by Meehan to make "Freckles," and it includes John Fox, Jr., Gene Stratton, Hobart Bosworth, Eulalie Jensen, Billy Scott, and Lafe McKee.

SEVERAL OF MINOR LEAGUES WILL MEET IN FORMAL SESSION BEFORE OPENING OF CONVENTION

Will Prepare Resolutions To Be Presented Before the Conclave as a Whole.

OPENS ON WEDNESDAY.

Draft Agreement Between Major and Minor Leagues is Vital Question.

TORONTO, Dec. 3 —(Associated Press).—Baseball men from many sections of the United States came to Toronto to-day for the annual convention of the National Association of Baseball Clubs to open Wednesday. Before the convention holds its first session ,several minor leagues will meet in formal session and committees will prepare resolutions to be presented before the convention as a whole.

Two of the big minors, the American Association and International, both A.A. circuits, will meet to-day.

The National Board of Arbitration, the Supreme Court of Minor League baseball, will convene to-day after several informal sessions in which no business was transacted.

Big Problem

Another committee which has canvassed the situation but held no regular meeting is a body charged with recommendations as to the draft agreement between the major and minor leagues, a vexed question at this time.

The word "draft" was heard at one time or another in nearly every conversation last night in hotel lobbies as the baseball men stopped to chat. The name used in baseball resolutions for the "draft" of a player is "selection" under the existing plan players may be "selected" for promotion to leagues of higher classification on the payment of specified sums for assignments of their contracts.

However, some leagues permit only a modified or limited draft of their players by the majors. Only players who have been sent to these leagues from the Majors can be drafted.

Different Opinions

The majors are understood to prefer that the restrictions be removed to make the unlimited draft apply to all leagues. The minors so far as can be learned from expressions of the early arrivals for the convention are not in complete agreement. Some agree that there should be no "limited selection" while others are content with the prevailing plan.

It was generally agreed that the discussion of the draft question will be the most interesting development of the approaching convention.

Representatives of major league clubs are here as interested bystanders. Many of the National and American League managers, executives and scouts will be on hand by the time the convention is called to order.

WEST TRIUMPHS OVER THE EAST

Boston College and Detroit Winding Up Unbeaten Season.

CRUSHING SETBACKS.

(By Alan J. Gould—Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Whether or not the brand of football played in the Far West is essentially better than that played east of Old Man River, the fact to-day is that after a three-day period of spectacular intersectional rivalry, the score stands:

Pacific Coast, 80; East, 27.

Three smashing triumphs, two on eastern soil and one on the west coast, offer by far the most striking accomplishment by the college gridiron forces of any one sector in a season fast drawing to a close.

Not even the fact that Boston College, alone of the eastern clan, and Detroit, alone of the middle-western troupe, were winding up unbeaten seasons in brilliant fashion Saturday could take away the spotlight from the far western avalanche.

Crushing Setbacks.

Southern California's defeat of a somewhat subnormal but dangerous Notre Dame team at Los Angeles was anticipated but the drubbings administered by Oregon State to New York University Thanksgiving Day, and by Stanford Saturday to the Army represent the most crushing setbacks the east has ever received in so short a span and by foes who came some 3,000 miles to do it.

Less than a week after eastern critics were acclaiming New York's Violets as one of the greatest in the country, following their triumph over Carnegie, New York was being smothered by an Oregon team led by Chunky Howard Maple. Exactly a week after the husky Army team had walloped the formidable Nebraskans, the Army was being routed disastrously by the white-shirted Stanford host coached by "Pop" Warner and led by Biff Hoffman, who earned his nickname by the way he smashes a line.

Out of the Running.

Neither Oregon State nor Stanford were good enough to win the Pacific Coast conference championship. The Beavers were beaten by California, Washington State and the University of Oregon, yet they had enough stuff left to come 3,000 miles across the country and trim the mighty Violets. Stanford was beaten by Southern California, thereby being put out of the running on the coast, but the Cardinals looked as powerful Saturday as any team in the country.

BRITISH BOWLERS SWAMP AUSTRALIA

England Scores 102 Runs For Just Two Wickets in Second Innings.

BRISBANE, Australia, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—The Australian cricket team collapsed before the English bowlers and were to-day all out in their first innings of the test match being played here for the trifling score of 122 runs. England scored 521 in their first innings. England had scored 102 for two wickets in their second innings at the close of to-day's play.

Only a small crowd of 10,000 attended the play to-day, the poor exhibition of the Australians on Saturday, when four wickets were lost for only forty-four, evidently affecting the gate. Those who watched the match were obviously deeply depressed.

Worse disasters were announced before the play began. Gregory, Australia's fast bowler, it was officially stated, has broken down and cannot play because of knee trouble. Kelleway was also absent, being in bed with ptomaine poisoning.

Hendry fourteen and Ryder nothing, continued the Australian innings. They tried heroically to settle down but the bowling of Tate and Larwood was too good. Larwood got Hendry out leg before wicket, when he had scored thirty, while Ryder was easily caught off same bowler.

The score, England's first innings, 521.

A Cause of Diseases.

Dr. H. E. Barnard, president of the American Honey Institute, and one of the principal speakers at the convention, warned those present against the use of highly refined foods. These foods he said, are causing diabetes, cancer ,and many other ills. Dr. Barnard, who is one of the greatest authorities on dietetics in America, said that honey is being increasingly used by physicians as well as by the baking industry. The Kellogg Cereal Co. has recognized the great value of honey by recommending its use with its cereals. This is done on every package and in all the advertising issued by that company. The tendency to-day, said Dr. Barnard, is for the public to take more interest in the common and natural foods, as witness the demand for whole wheat bread and similar products. "Honey," Dr. Barnard said, "is the ideal sweet to satisfy the natural craving of children for sweet things." "It may be used pure on bread, or as a specially delicious spread on children's lunches mixed with peanut butter or grated cheese."

The convention this year was largely devoted to plans for extending markets for honey. It was reported that because of the low prices realized for honey during the past few years, hundreds of beekeepers have gone out of the business.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the "Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—I would be very grateful if you will publish this letter in Voice of the People column in the Examiner.

A journal, "The Fortnightly," edited by Mr. J. H. Burnham, was left at my door and others this week, in which are offered some criticisms of the Salvation Army. One feels it in order to correct certain statements made by the writer of this erroneous article.

1. Can Mr. Burnham show proof of the 10,000,000 dollar permanent fund? Is he also aware that a balance sheet is issued yearly for the Salvation Army and obtainable from International Headqaurters, London, England on application?

2. (a) That the Empress of Ireland to which Mr. Burnham refers to in "his evidence of divine wrath" was not chartered by the Salvation Army.

(b) That loss of life was 148, not as he asserts, 1,000. Incidentally some of the cream of Canada's men and women were amongst this number.

(c) That the congress referred to "as practically broken up" was the most successful congress of the Army's history and though the disaster was a cloud over the proceedings the gathering was a wonderful success.

A band of men representing this city were present at these gatherings and to any of that number I would refer Mr. Burnham and he will doubtless have fresh light on the question.

We who are members of the Salvation Army have sufficient confidence in God to be unperturbed by the newspaper talk of recent date, and He who raised up the Salvation Army and has blessed it to the extent that right round the world the Army colours are waving, will continue to bless the Salvation Army.

Thanking you for the space this letter has taken up and to the general public who may have read Mr. J. H. Burnham's article, I trust the above lines will correct the misleading information of that article, I am, sir,

Yours respectfully,
G. HOWARD YOUNG.

CATHOLICS ASKED TO PRAY FOR KING

Bishop O'Brien Exhorts Congregation To Pray For His Majesty's Recovery.

During the course of his address to the congregation at the High Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday morning, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien exhorted his hearers to pray for the recovery of His Majesty, King George.

"According to all reports," said the Bishop, "His Majesty is very ill. His loyal subjects should pray for his recovery, if it be the will of the Almighty, or else that God may grant him the grace of a happy death.

"We should pray for the King because of the authority invested in him. He represents the highest secular authority in the land and on everyone of his loyal subjects devolves the duty of according him the respect and devotion that his high office demands. We can do this by praying for his health, much better than by a great deal of flag-waving and ballyhoo.

"Catholics can pray for King George with a great deal of real affection, because of his refusal, at the time of his coronation, to take the oath which declared his belief that the Mass was a blasphemous superstition. Up to that time, all sovereigns of England had been required to make such a declaration, but King George refused to do so. On account of his refusal, these words were eliminated from the Coronation oath and millions of his loyal subjects were thus spared an insult to their religious beliefs."

VIEWS ON SPORT

The Hamilton Tigers defeated the Regina Rough Riders, 30 to 0, for the senior championship of Dominion.

The Rough Riders showed in their game on Saturday that the West still has a great deal to learn about the Eastern brand of offensive rugby. Defensively and individually they were very good, but their teamwork offensively was poor. Their plunges were not masked in any way, their interference was very poor and as a result the team from the West was never much of a threat against the heavy and experienced Tigers.

The Maple Leafs broke the winning streak of the New York Americans over the week-end by defeating them, 3 to 0, in the Mutual Street Arena on Saturday.

* * * * * * *

Last night the Detroit team, following up the Leafs' victory, pulled out a victory over the former unbeatable Americans. The Gotham team had Roy Worters, the Pittsburgh hold-out goalie, in the net. Worters went into the game when President Calder temporarily lifted his suspension. The Americans were badly in need of a goalminder, and they so impressed that necessity on Calder that he allowed Worters to play. Calder, in a statement, made it clear that it was only a temporary lifting of Worters' suspension. The Americans are said to have paid Pittsburg $20,000 and a player for Worters.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Rugby Union, when representatives from the big universities gathered at Kingston last Saturday, Western University of London was unanimously welcomed into the senior intercollegiate ranks. The addition of Western University will make a much stronger, four-team league.

The magnates of the minor baseball leagues are holding a gigantic convention in Toronto this week, and many matters will be considered. It is rumored that President Toole of the International League may be unseated. This was attempted on a previous occasion, but Toole, when it came to a vote, received a large vote of confidence and an increase to $12,000 in salary.

COLLEGIATE NOTES

President Reginald Howden, of the Literary Society, asked all those interested in a Glee Club to remain in the Assembly Hall one morning recently. To his astonishment there were nearly seventy-five pupils remained instead of only twenty-five as in former years. Thus the Glee Club has been formed and the next operation will be to give the assistance possible.

On Friday after school the first literary meeting under the new leaders will be held.

Why Hockey Players Prefer the C·C·M· SPECIAL

C.C.M. Skates are used by over 80% of the leading hockey players. This statement has been verified by a careful check of skates in actual use on leading hockey teams in Canada and the U.S. The King of all skates for fast hockey is the hand-made C.C.M. Special, for the following reasons:

2. THE ICE LAY.
The C.C.M. Special has the correct ice-lay preferred by the fastest hockey players in the world.

3. THE BALANCE.
A new position of heel and sole plates gives an improved balance resulting in easier, faster skating and relief from leg-weariness.

4. THE TUBE.
Reinforced tube and rocker blade, with lower side of tube specially shaped to allow all the rocker you like. The main body of the tube is perfectly straight—not rockered—thus retaining all its original strength and rigidity.

5. WELDED and REINFORCED.

PETERBORO' CANOE COMPANY MAKES LARGE PROPORTION OF SKIIS NOW USED IN CANADA

New Industry Has Developed in Local Plant in Past Few Years.

BEGUN AS A SIDE LINE.

Company Has Found It Necessary To Erect New Storage Warehouse.

One of the city's oldest industries and one which has made the name of Peterborough known to the farthest corners of Canada, the United States and Europe, the Peterborough Canoe Company, is making great strides in a new field.

Five years ago nearly ninety per cent of the skiis used in Canada were imported from other countries. Now ninety per cent. of the skiis used are made in Canada and a large proportion are made in the plant of the Peterborough Canoe Company here. The growth of this baby industry, which was only begun as a side-line to fill in the off-season in the canoe and boat building program of the company, has been amazing. Along with the manufacture o skiis the company makes toboggans, dog sleds and ski poles.

The company has found it necessary to put up a new warehouse in which to store their increasing products while awaiting shipment. The new building is a three story frame structure 60 feet by 100 feet. It is nearly completed and will be a great aid in handling the ever increasing volume of business.

Gift of Indians.

The canoe, an invention of the Indians, was the Redman's greatest gift to the White. The canoe conveyed the early voyager, explorer and settler through impassable forests and made it possible to open up districts that otherwise could never be reached. Even to-day miners and hunters still use the canoe, as did the early settlers, to reach deeper into the northland on prospecting and hunting trips. Too, the canoe has become one of the greatest enjoyments in the summer life of Canadians.

The Peterborough Canoe Company was one of the first to begin the manufacturing of canoes for the use of the hunter, prospector and pleasure seeker. Through the fine quality of workmanship and sturdiness of their craft the name of the Peterborough canoe spread across the whole continent and won first place in the hearts of all who used canoes. Peterborough canoes have been used in the far north, on the Athabasca and Peace Rivers, in British Columbia and throughout Ontario and Quebec. At the close of the Great War the company received a large order for Peterborough canoes from the French Army for use in Russia. This week the company received letters asking for information concerning the boats from Calcutta, Rangoon and Brussels. Considerable shipments have been made to South and East Africa.

Amalgamated in 1923.

The Peterborough Canoe Company amalgamated with the Chestnut Canoe Company of Fredericton, N.B. in 1923. Of late years the requests from the northern parts of the country have been chiefly for the light canvas covered canoe which the Chestnut Company specializes in. The Chestnut canoes are used more for commercial purposes and the Peterborough canoe more as a pleasure craft.

The local company has worked up a large business in the pleasure canoe, skiff and outboard motor boat lines. They make everything from the small twelve foot canoe to the largest stock-line motor boat thirty feet long and larger boats on special order. The demand for boats to be used with outboard motors has grown greatly in the last few years. These are not necessarily the small racing fleas, that are seen so frequently, and are only a small part of the trade, but the solidly built outboard boat for the use of the family. Among the best selling models of the outboard boats are the eighteen foot Admiral, which has a capacity of ten persons and the seventeen foot Kawartha carrying a load of six persons.

The greatest hindrance to doing business with European countries is said to be the high freight rates. The freight rates in Europe are much higher than they are in Canada. These conditions make shipping of boats almost prohibitive, but even under these adverse conditions the Peterborough Canoe Company has worked up considerable business with France and receives frequent orders from merchants in Paris.

Proud of New Industry.

The company is partitcularly proud of the great success of their new industry, the manufacture of skiis, toboggans, dog sleds and ski poles. The demand for skiis is increasing each year and this part of the business has grown to major portions. Previously the very best skiis came from Norway. They are made from a special grade of ash. Now these skiis of ash edge grain are made here and made from wood that has grown within a radius of 100 miles.

Trees that were considered of no worth by the farmers previously have been cut down and sold at high prices to the company for use in making skiis. There are fifty different and complicated operations in the manufacture of these and all are perfectly turned out in the local plant, which is considered the most up-to-date in Canada. They run in sizes from the small children's skiis to the tall skiis for the expert jumper.

The ski poles are made by the thousand in the plant. The pole is made from a high grade bamboo obtained from Japan. The rings are made by returned soldiers. The parts are all assembled in the local plant as the company does not follow the pratice of jobbing out any of their work, everything being done at home.

There are sixty men working in the ski and toboggan departments. A visitor views a busy scene of activity and efficiency at the plant. There are few waste movements. Each man has his own little part to perform and he is a specialist at his particular piece of the operation of turning out first class skiis.

Make Duck Decoys.

For a short time also the plant turns out duck decoys and this, too, is a new feature in its manufacturing line. Late in the summer and the fall a large shipment of duck decoys were sent out and this business promises to grow also. The decoys were sent mostly to Western Canada.

The dog sleds for use in the Far North as turned out in the local factory are of tafuanch construction and yet extremely light in weight. They are pulled by the husky dog teams and carry the hunter, prospector and miner on his many trips through the snowy fartness of Canada's north. Dog toboggans are made also and these too may be pulled swiftly over the snow by the husky teams. They are used more for transporting supplies and furs.

"We are betting on Canada going ahead," said William A. Richardson, second vice-president of the company, "and we are geting ready for that big advancement that is bound to come. "We don't propose," he continued, "to have it necessary for the people of Canada to import anything in our line. We have the manufacture of canoes, boats, skiis and toboggans done to an absolute science and we are not afraid of foreign competition, even if they completely do away with the tariff. We employ about 110 men in our plant and have a yearly pay roll of well over $100,000.

OFFICIALS CONDEMN STOCK SPECULATION

Present Speculative Wave Causing Grave Concern to Canadian Bankers.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Stock market speculation came in for severe condemnation at to-day's meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal. Sir Charles B. Gordon, in his presidential address, said the present speculative wave was causing grave concern to the bankers. The rise in prices could not go on forever, he said, and there was a well defined limit to bank loans on stocks.

Sir Frederic Williams-Taylor, general manager, said it was the bank's duty to keep loans within bounds in a situation like the present, which had an element of danger.

KNOX CHURCH CELEBRATES

hear My words and say 'Never man spoke as this man does.' He said in effect that the messenger was to return and tell John what he saw Jesus doing. Of course we are judged by our words as well as by deeds; we must bear witness for Christ. What the Church needs to-day is a band of great evangelical preachers. But this was not Christ's argument. The Church needs talk, not so much as deeds. The man outside the Church will form his opinions by what you are doing, not what you say.

"Jesus also appealed for vindication on the character of His preaching and not so much on the words. Jesus could not be called a society preacher and if He appeared on earth to-day in disguise He likely would not get the call to some of our big churches. He appealed to the poor in spirit and His preaching was in the spirit of the poor. Blessed are the poor in spirit. Blessed are the spiritual bankrupts. We are all poor and carry heavy burdens and to us Jesus holds aid."

The musical part of the service was of a very high order. Mrs. Mars Westington (nee Daisy Murray) sang beautiful solos both in the morning and evening services. The choir, under the direction of R. J. Devey, was heard to fine advantage in well-selected anthems.

The musical service consisted in the morning service of:

Organ solo, "Louree" (Bach); solo, "Repent Ye," Mrs. Westington; anthem, "Rejoice Ye" (Bennett); solo, "Turn O Turn," Mrs. Westington; organ postlude, "Concerto" (Handel).

And in the evening it was:

Organ solo, "Elegie" (Wouseross); solo, "Love Eternal," Mrs. Westington; anthem, "Holy, Holy, Holy" (F. C. Maker); solo, "Behold, the Master Passes By," Mrs. Westington; anthem, "Salvation, Glory and Honor" (Dr. Nicholl); organ postlude, "Minuet" (Handel).

M-NING B'EFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

When last heard from Grenada was crosscutting on three levels. It is rumored now that these operations have been suspended temporarily on the 375 and 625-foot levels so that the cage may be installed and pumps placed on both these horizons. Crosscutting should recommence about the middle of next week.

The physical condition of the Vipond Consolidated has been strengthened recently through favorable developments on the 500 and 600-foot horizons, according to reports reaching the city. This ore is said to run substantially higher in grade than that coming from the mine as a whole. Tonnage in sight is higher than one year ago and in the meantime production is said to be averaging approximately $2000 per day. It is rumored that there are prospects of a dividend being declared. During its lifetime the mine paid one dividend of three cents per share.

The winze at the Kirkland Lake Gold Mines is now said to be down some 700 feet with the last few feet passing through red porphyry which carried some gold values. This looks interesting as the formation is good.

A detailed geological study of the Lebel-Oro property at Kirkland Lake is proceeding under the direction of E. W. Todd, consulting geologist, formerly of the staff of the Ontario Department of Mines. Mr. Todd, through an extensive study of the Kirkland Lake field as a whole, is highly qualified to direct the survey on Lebel-Oro. The report will be available within the next couple of weeks. The property was extensively diamond drilled by the Nipissing Mines recently but results were not encouraging.

The Manitoba Goverment has taken action restraining Morris Rosenbaum and firm of Gordon-Morgan and Company, Limited, from selling stock of the Dixon Mining Co., Ltd. In a statement issued by the Attorney-General, it was shown that 500,000 shares had been unwritten at prices varying from 20 to 50 cents. A certain number were sold at 35 cents, and when the underwriters commence to ask 90 cents for the remainder a temporary injunction was taken out restraining them from any further sales efforts.

A shaft will be put down on the Olivet Gold Mines property in the eastern Kirkland Lake camp in the near future, according to officials of the company. This company was organized recently to develop a total of twenty three claims a short distance to the east of the Ritchie and Murphy. Considerable surface work has been carried out to date.

* * * *

Their decision hastened by recent results at the Aischbac, directors of the Grenadier Kirkland, it is reported, will shortly commence development of a group of claims adjoining the former company's property in Grenfell Township. The company is now in process of formation and it is understood no time will be lost in securing funds for development.

* * * *

In the area known as the Sudbury basin, an important amount of development was carried out both by diamond drilling and also by shaft sinking and drifts, principally on the Treadwell-Yukon and Sudbury Basin properties, which are zinc-copper-lead deposits. A pilot mill of 300 tons capacity has been operated during the period by the Treadwell-Yukon and the resulting flotation concentrates are stored at the company's railway siding near Larchwood station. The mill is now treating about 180 tons daily.

In general the metal mining industry has experienced a particularly encouraging year. A large metallic output together with an average production of non-metallics and a marked increase in the building and construction industries necessitating large supplies of building products, indicate a substantial increase in the total mineral production of the province for the calendar year of 1928.

* * * *

During the period, active exploration by drilling was carried on in Lebel township on the easterly extension of the Kirkland Lake Gold Belt. Important finds have been reported by the Bidgood-Moffat-Hall and Pawnee and in the neighborhood of these properties much surface work was performed. Further to the east in Gauthier township, which borders on Lebel the Murphy mine have also reported some important gold values by drilling and also in the shaft to a depth of 600 feet. In Morrisette township, immediately to the north of Teck, the Goodfish gold Mines are being actively developed. To the west of Kirkland Lake a spectacular discovery of free gold was made on the Trout Creek holdings about a mile east of Swastika or two and a half miles west of the Kirkland Lake mine. At the time of writing trenching has been done and a shaft started. The find has created considerable interest and has resulted in more extensive work being undertaken by other companies in the vicinity, notably the Pittsburgh Syndicate and Canadian Kirkland.

HOWEY.

According to recent reports, average widths of ore on Howey are exceeding earlier estimates. Official information a short time ago, which showed widths having increased to over 15 feet, has been followed by further pronounced trend in this direction. There is little or no fracturing in the rocks adjacent to the veins and as the ore is taken out it leaves a wall from which it is not likely there will be any dilution. Mining costs will be low due to the ore being confined to one main zone. In view of this there will be a minimum of cost attached to exploration work.

Scarcity Of Offerings Strengthens Wheat Values

CHICAGO, December 3 (Canadian Press). — Scarcity of wheat offerings December delivery in particular, led to early higher prices to-day for wheat despite the fact that the Liverpool wheat market had proved relatively unresponsible to Saturday's upturns on this side of the Atlantic. Opening at ⅛ off to ⅜ up, Chicago wheat later showed general gains. Corn and oats were easy with corn starting unchanged to ⅜ down, and subsequently holding near to the initial figures.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 116½, March 121. Corn, December 84½, March 87⅝. Oats, December 47, March 47¾.

Towagamac Leads List On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The market was easy at noon to-day on the Standard Mining Exchange. Towagmac regained its popularity of a week ago and gained 25 cents to 3.34 in active trading. Noranda ran into heavy selling and lost 4.10 at 61.25. Pend Oreille went down 40 cents to 11.60 and Abana 45 to 3.47. Sudbury Basin was down 30 cents at 8.30, Teck-Hughes 20 at 8.35, Kirkland Lake 7 at 1.33, Mining Corporation 10 at 4.00, Sherritt-Gordon 10 at 6.60, Ajax Oil 4 at 50, Amulet 6 at 2.95, Amity 2 at 31, and Bathurst 2 at 38. Central Manitoba lost 2 to 75, and Hudson Bay 5 at 20.20 Howey Gold was up 1 at 1.01, Jackson Manion 1 at 24, and Wright-Hargreaves 3 at 2.02. Barry Hollinger, Hollinger Consolidated, Lake Shore, Stadacona, Big Missouri and Mandy Mines were unchanged.

International Nickel Drops On Firm Market

TORONTO, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Prices were firm while trading was heavy in some issues on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. International Nickel dropped 6 to 210, while Hiram Walkers was down 1 at 79½. Massey-Harris was down 2 at 91, while Cockshutt advanced ½ to 35½. Canada Cement at 33½, and Canada Dredge at 66 were each up a half point, while Canadian Industrial Alcohol was down ½ at 45. Shredded Wheat gained 1 to 70½, and Canada Dredge lost 1 to 150.

The banks were stronger. Commerce and Imperial were unchanged while Montreal gained 2½ at 402, and Dominion at 295 and Toronto at 280 each gained one point. Goodyear Tire dropped 8 to 230 on the curb market where there was a general falling off in trading and a slight downward movement of prices. International Nickel New was down 1 at 26, Dominion Power 1 at 77, Northern Bakeries 2 at 47, Service Station 1 at 50, Canadian Marconi 1½ at 10, with low for the morning of 9, and International Petroleum 1¼ at 50½.

Losses Scattered Over Broad Industrial List

NEW YORK, December 3, Canadian Press. — Heavy liquidation for both accounts brought about a sharp reaction in prices on to-day's stock market. Net losses of from 1 to 4 points were distributed over a broad list of rails and industrials, with a s re or more of high priced issues down 5 to nearly 15 points. Trading showed further contraction in volume.

Cal lmoney renewed at 8 per cent, and advanced to 9 as banks called $35,000,000 in loans. Because of the necessity of strengthening their reserve positions, banks had a relatively smal supply of funds available making 10 per cent. call money again a likely prospect. There was nothing in the week-end developments to influence the selling movement. However the sharp break in Canadian Marconi on the New York curb, stiff money rates and indications of another huge increase in the stock exchange member loans, led to a widespread liquidation of the speculative accounts. Many traders also were scared at the rapid manner in which prices of some of the recent favorites mitted away under pressure.

Greene-Cananea broke 13 points on first sale. Radio ran off 10 1-2 points before midway but quickly recovered its loss. Canada Pacific droppd 9 1-2 points.

WHITEWATER.

Whitewater now have their electric power installed and mining and milling is being pushed along in an aggressive manner. An upward trend in the price for these shares is anticipated in the near future.

AMULET.

Recent drilling operations from the 150 foot level of Amulet has proved the downward extension of their "C" orebody to a much greater depth than was originally indicated. The recent work has also maintained the improved grade over what was believed when this body was first drilled.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting.

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found the remedy and called his prescription HEM-ROID. He tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvellous record of success in 96 per cent. and now it is sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID from McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store to-day. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and will do the same for you, or costs you nothing.

There were two calls sent into the Fire Hall over the week-end. At 8.45 this morning a call was received from a house in the suburban area. It was not answered as it was only a chimney fire.

IRISH FREE STATE SHOULD FORGET PAST

throughout most of this time, not so much by English statesmen as by English monarchs. But quoting Sir Horce Plunkett to the effect that "Irish history was something that Irishmen should orget and Englishmen should remember," the speaker maintained, that the people of Ireland should cease to live in the past and look squarely at the facts which were that Britain was much their nearest neighbor and by far their greatest customer and the tiem had come to get in closer touch.

The second mistake in policy was the attempt to teach the Irish language in all the schools. It was explained that President Cosgrave realized that Ireland could not compete with the world in politics and industry, and hoped that she would do so in the world of culture, hence the revival of the Irish language. Provost Cosgrave doubted the efficacy of the method, pointing out that not only was the Irish language being poorly taught in the schools, but because of the time devoted to that instruction the English language was also being inadequately taught.

Provost Cosgrave, in conclusion, remarked that he hoped to revisit his native land again next year, and he was looking forward to finding that the Irish people had recovered their sense of humor—they had never lost their wit—and were experiencing a period of prosperity and advancement.

Rotarian V. J. McElderry expressed the thanks of the Rotary Club to the speaker for his impartial summing up of Irish conditions, and for his most enjoyable address.

At to-day's meeting Rotarian Jim Matthews, who is leaving shortly on a holiday trip to the West Indies, was the recipient of a presentation from the clug, inspired by the back benchers, on whose behalf Rotarians Ross Dobbin and Chis. Graham did the honors. The recipient blushingly replied.

Rotarian Dr. H. B. Longmore, president of the Campbellford Club, who with Rotarian Bob McCulloch of the baby club of the district was a guest to-day, thanked Peterborough Rotarians for their attendance at various Campbellford functions, and extended an invitation to the members generally to dive in at the Campbellford meetings.

Other visitors to-day were Dr. G. Stewart Cameron and Fred M. Dela-Fosse.

TILLS ROBBED OVER WEEK END

Manning Garage and Simpson's Bicycle Shop Entered Saturday Night.

WINDOWS BROKEN.

Robbers or a robber broke into two places of business, Simpson's Bicycle Shop on George Street, north of Brock, and Manning's Garage on Brock Street, rifling the till in both places with small reward.

The time that the robbery occurred at Manning's Garage is quite definitely settled. William Blewett left the garage at 11.40 Sunday morning with everything as usual, and Sidney Rushton entered the garage at 12.20 to find the till rifled and empty. The robber entered the building from the back, breaking the window in the rear door to get into the stock-room and then he entered the office by breaking the glass panel in the door and lifting the latch. The reward of all his labors was twenty-five cents in coppers that he took from the till.

It is Mr. Ruston's opinion that the burglar was still in the building when he entered at 12.20, and that he made a hurried escape through the back door on Mr. Rushton's approach.

The robber who entered Carl Simpson's bicycle shop also broke into the building through a window at the back after he had smashed the glass. Here the burglar also eagerly rifled the till, but the till only contained a small amount of silver. Mr. Simpson thinks that the burglar may have taken some articles from the show case but is not positive of this.

That the robber is a man of some intelligence is proved by the ingenious manner in which he gained his entrance into both these places. Manning's Garage especially must have taxed his brain because he had two locked doors to break through.

WAR TROPHIES TABOOED.

Toronto, November 28, 1928.
The Editor, The Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—There is a difference between Britain, who suffered intensely in the war, and feels that every act which nourishes military feeling, must be taboo, and Peterborough. Britain has set her face to destroy the glamour of militarism and to make peace beautiful.

An Associated Press despatch from Sheffield, England, reports that Great Britain is tiring of her war relics. Just as eagerly as they were gathered for parks and other public places, ten years ago, battered tanks, massive cannon, bayonets, gas masks, helmets, whole museums of shells, machine guns and small arms by the dozen are being sold for scrap iron, and the proceeds given to the poor.

British cities say the relics are unpleasant reminders of the horrors of war, the Government War Office declares it has no further use for them, and no one except the junk dealers will take them.

At Tauntain the city councillors called the tank "a public nuisance, a disgrace to twentieth century civilization and a violation of Christianity."

Bapton in Devonshire gave its trench mortar away. At Holyhead a councillor advised that the city's tank be flung into the breakwater. The Edinburgh Town Council has agreed to sell its guns and relics for $1,000.

Aberdeenshire, favorite recruiting ground for the Gordon Highlanders, made so complete a sweep of its war relics that the beds of the Don and Dee Rivers are graveyards of bayonets and guns.

What does Peterborough think of the contrast of her war veterans' action?

NOT IMPRESSED WITH BUILDINGS

Spanish Royalty Making Tour of Canada and United States.

VISITS LONDON, ONTARIO.

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, Ont., December 3. (By D. L. McEachren). — Three "Royal" Highnesses visited London to-day — H.R.H. Infante Don Alfonzo, first cousin to the King of Spain, his wife, H.R.H. Infante Beatrice of Spain, born Beatrice, Princess Royal of England, grand daughter of Queen Victoria, and "baby sister" to Queen Marie of Roumania, and their son, H. R. H. Prince Don Alvaro D'Orleans Bourbon.

There was no fanfire. The Royal party travelled incognito in fact, if not in name. Eluding publicity is an art and it speaks volumes that the click of cameras was muted to a single "shot."

Keen on Hockey

Don Alfonzo, chief of instruction for the Spanish Military Air Forces, and the first man in Spain to fly, spoke highly of this continent, which he hopes to see in a flying visit of three weeks, but is not at all favorably impressed by sky scrapers, prohibition, and short skirts. He is very keen, however, on hockey, snow, hospitality and the rapid strides made by those promulgating air transport. Tall, straight-featured, with greying hair, he looks like an Englishman. "New York impressed me as being a very unhealthy place to live," was his first comment. "Those sky scrapers with millions of people and such narrow streets. No sunlight and so much activity. Why do they not erect their buildings to uniform height and roof the whole town over?"

In Canada he feels much more "at home." He is a hearty portoganist of hockey. "I have seen it played in Switzerland, but never with the nerve and skill of the players of the Montreal Maroons and the New York Rangers. It will never replace the bull fight, however."

First News Girl Is 85 Years Old

BERLIN, Dec. 3. (Associated Press. — Frau Pauline Bath, aged 85, is the first and oldest newspaper seller of Berlin. She recently celebrated her golden jubilee in her little stall in the busy city street known as Alt Moabit, where she has sat for 12 hours every day since October, 1878. Her reminiscences are mainly concerned with the growth of the city's street traffic.

The only thing that disturbs her contented mind is the increasing competition of other newspaper sellers in the neighborhood. "I have never asked for any public assistance in my life," she says. "All I hope is that the police won't allow any more news stands near my own."

LEGION STAGES SACRED CONCERT

Northumberland Regimental Band Assists Campbellford Branch in Concert.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 3. — Assisted by the Northumberland Regimental Band, the Campbellford branch of the Canadian Legion staged one of the most successful sacred concerts which has been given in Campbellford for some time. The Regent Theatre was filled to capacity when the curtains parted to begin the program. The proceeds will be in aid of the ex-service men of the community and general relief purposes. N. Alex. MacCall, as chairman, expressed the appreciation of the Legion to those who had given their services on the program and also for the large audience which was in attendance indicating the good will of the people of the town toward the ex-service men. In deference to the present state of the health of His Majesty King George V., the program was begun with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mrs. Stanley Windrim, soprano soloist, and Prynne Nesbitt, pianist, and organist of St. Andrew's Church, were the only two artists to be encored. Mr. Nesbitt, who appeared in fourth place on the program, played Durant's Waltz in E flat, and as an encore he played Beethoven's Turkish March. Mrs. Windrim sang as her first number, "The Stranger of Galilee," and for an encore an old familiar hymn, "I love to Tell the Story." Both were well received. The piano accompaniment for Mrs. Windrim was played by Mr. Hazell, organist of St. John's Church. Mrs. Fred Free was the third to appear. She sang "Beyond the Dawn," by Weatherly. Her accompaniment was played by Miss Gert Maynard. Miss Emma Meiklejohn and Mrs. Hazell sang "A Song of Praise," a sacred duet, which was received with much applause. E. C. Dolman played the accompaniment. Miss Meiklejohn also sang "Sundown." Mr. George Luey won much applause when he sang "I love a Little Cottage," by O'Hara. His accompaniment was played by Mr. Hazell.

The Regimental Band both opened and closed the entertainment. Since the band was first organized, a great many years ago, when it was known as the band of the 40th Militia Regiment, it has never failed to be a head line attraction at any concert where it has appeared on the program. Under the direction of Bandmaster William Pearson, A.L.C.M., the band played five selections. The opening number was a sacred march, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Their second number was the sixth item on the program, "Maronita," a Spanish valsette. While the silver collection was being taken, the band played a popular march, and as the eleventh number, they played an old favorite with the citizens of the town, "Echoes from the Opera." Their concluding number was also an old favorite, "Sweet Briar."

After N. Alex. MacColl had expressed the appreciation of the Legion, the concert was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

WOMEN ENTERTAIN ALL SAINTS' CHOIR

Second Annual Banquet is Held in Guild Room of Church.

On Thursday evening of last week All Saints' Women's Bible Class entertained the choir to the second annual banquet, given in the guild room of the church. The tables were decorated in pink and white streamers, potted begonias, with place cards and evening programs to each plate.

The lady members and their husbands, the men members and their wives, sat at the centre table with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Paterson (wardens), Mr. and Mrs. B. Ottewell, and Mr. and Mrs. T. Pitchford (ex-wardens), Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Hooper, and Mr. and Mrs. P. Hooper, Mrs. Logan (organist), and Mr. Logan.

During the serving of courses community singing of old and popular songs took place with Miss Irene Howarth as piano accompanist.

The rector's warden, B. Ottewell welcomed the choir and friends, followed by a vote of thanks by T. Pitchford (people's worden), to the convenor of the class, Mrs. J. Price, who responded with many kind words of pleasure in being able to help socially. Rev. Mr. Paterson, chairman of the evening, after saying a few words of appreciation to the choir, called on George Chandler, choir master. With a few words of regret at the absence of a member, Mrs. J. Davidson, who is ill, he thanked the rector and wardens for their help to the choir during the year, also to Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Hooper, who made their summer picnic at Idylwyld a huge success.

The rest of the evening was spent in laughter and fun, in playing games in which both young and old participated willingly. During the evening a young boy member, Master Griffin Young, was called to the platform and a Anglican Prayer Book was presented by Mrs. Stan. Willis, the donor, for the highest attendance and proficiency. Mr. Logan gave an interesting reading, "A Ride in a Flying Machine." Master Griffin Young gave a solo, accompanied by Miss E. Young. The choir made a wonderful impression in rendering "And the Glory," (Messiah), in which 22 sopranos, 6 contraltos, 8 tenors, 8 bassos and 12 boy voices took part, which was loudly applauded by the guests. All were asked to join hands and sing "Auld Lang Syne."

Frank C. Roberts, president of the choir, moved a vote of thanks to Miss Irene Howarth and her committee for the way they made the evening such a huge success.

FIVE DOCTORS IN CONSULTATION

TEMPERATURE IS LOWER ALTHOUGH HEART CAUSES GREAT DEAL OF ANXIETY

GETS MORE SLEEP.

Queen Shows Effects of Sunday Night's Vigil—Fails To Take Drive.

LONDON, Dec. 4 (Canadian Press) — Issued this morning, the medical bulletin by Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn read, "The King has passed a quieter night though the anxiety concerning his heart continues, the improvement noted last evening is so far satisfactorily maintained."

The neighborhood of Buckingham Palace during the early hours of today again gave proof of widespread solicitude and anxiety on the part of the public over the condition of King George.

During the night, a large number of persons returning from theatres and night clubs stopped their automobiles at the palace gate to learn the latest news. Many persons on their way to work, arriving at the railway terminal nearby from the suburbs made a considerable detour from their usual routes to read the latest bulletins and enquire for any additional details before going to the city.

It was learned that Sir Stanley Hewett had remained at the palace all night so that he might be in readiness if the King needed attention. While unusual, this was not unprecedented since Sir Stanley on previous occasions during the King's illness, had stayed at the palace for the night.

The morning was foggy but despite this, a considerable crowd assembled to read the forenoon bulletin.

The palace Guard was changed as usual while the crowd waited yesterday. The change was made without music, but to-day the band played during the ceremony.

"Quieter Sleep."

The temperature, to which this announcement alludes, was given in the 10.30 a.m. bulletin at 99.8, the morning bulletin also said that the King had three hours of "quieter sleep," and that there had been a slight improvement in his general condition.

The fact that the monarch is obtaining some quiet sleep, was considered favorable and it was hoped that this, combined with whatever measures the doctors could take to strengthen the heart, might enable the patient to surmount the crisis.

Queen Mary, for the first time since the King became ill, failed to take her usual drive this afternoon. It was understood that she had been up the greater part of the night and that those around her urged that she should obtain some sleep during the day in order to keep up her strength through the heavy ordeal.

Her Majesty was said to be bearing up with the greatest fortitude. She had been paying constant visits to the sick chamber, although she has taken no part in the actual nursing of her husband. This has been done by six trained nurses from London hospitals.

Stream of Visitors.

There was a constant stream of visitors at Buckingham Palace yesterday, the physicians appearing at frequent intervals. Several members of the Cabinet called, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary, entering the palace twice during the day. Just before his second visit he made a speech at the Constitutional Club's luncheon, in which he said that a feeling of "great hope" was coupled with the anxiety.

"The shadow which hangs over me is almost a personal one because I am brought into close personal touch with the King. I cannot conceive it possible in the whole wide world to find a constitutional monarch more devoted to his work and more adequately carrying out the duties of a constitutional monarch than the present sovereign."

The repeated visits which the physicians paid to their patient were probably necessitated in a great measure by the administering of heart stimulants, rather than because of any especially alarming symptoms. The evening bulletin was timed as of 8.15 p.m., and as the doctors generally have been arriving at the palace about 7 p.m. or later, no great delay in agreeing upon the wording of the announcement was evident.

COMMISSION IS APPOINTED

Will Transact Business During King's Illness Says Premier.

SIX NOMINATED.

His Majesty Makes Appointments This Morning at Meeting of Privy Council.

LONDON, Dec. 4 (Canadian Press) Premier Baldwin announced in the House of Commons to-day that a commission had been appointed to transact business on behalf of King George.

The Premier stated that the King in Council this morning nominated Queen Mary, Prince of Wales, Duke of York, Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor and the Premier to be Councillors of State for the summoning and holding of Privy Councils and transactation of other business on behalf of His Majesty.

Mr. Baldwin said in introduction: "I am glad to be able to inform the House that the King was well enough this morning to enable a meeting of the Privy Council to be held." The King, he said, had signed the order-in-council regarding Councillors of State.

Passes Quiet Night.

LONDON, Dec. 4.— (Canadian Press.)—King George to-day continued in that precarious condition which for many days has held his subjects in suspense. Official bulletin this morning said His Majesty had passed a quieter night and that improvement noted yesterday was being maintained. Doctors took care to point out, however, that anxiety concerning the King's heart must continue.

At present everything seems to centre on whether the over-taxed heart can withstand the strain imposed by the fortnight's grievous illness. It is understood that the present condition might continue for some time without material change.

The King's physicians issued the following bulletin at 3.30 this afternoon: "His Majesty passed a quiet morning, though temperature is now 100.2. Slight improvement in general condition noted in last night's bulletin is maintained."

Queen Mary who did not take her usual outing yesterday left Buckingham Palace in the Royal motor car for a brief constitutional this afternoon. She was accompanied by Princess Mary.

Five doctors were in consulation at Buckingham Palace this afternoon on the king's condition.

A bulletin followed their consultation saying that there was no need for alarm based on the unexpected appearance of the physicians.

FIRE REPORT SHOWS GREAT IMPROVEMENT

Sixty-five Calls Were Received By Local Department in Past Three Months.

DECREASE OF EIGHTEEN.

Chimney Fires Have Showed a Remarkable Decrease Under New By-law.

It has long been understood that most fires are caused through careless and neglect of proper precautions and Fire Chief Gimblett by a campaign of education and the enforcement of fire prevention precautions has been able during the last few month to reduce fires in the city to almost a minimum.

Last year for the three months, September, October and November, there were a total of 83 fire calls received at the fire station, with 25 calls in September, 30 in October, and 28 in November. This year for the same three months there has been a total of 65 calls, a decrease from that of last year of 18. There were 18 calls in September, 28 in October, and 19 in November.

The chief, during the summer, compelled householders to repair and fix faulty chimneys and clean them out. The low number of chimney fires this fall as compared with the same period last year, caused the chief to think that the results are worth the trouble. In the three months, September, October and November in 1927, there were 28 chimney fires. This year for the same three months there have been only 17. There wasn't a call to a chimney fire received at the station during the whole month of September.

The chief believes that the great decrease in the number of fires of all kinds and of chimney fires especially is directly due to the fire prevention campaign being carried on through the local fire office and the enforcing of the chimney by-law which compels the cleaning and repairing of chimneys.

Orders Issued

In connection with his fire prevention campaign, the chief issues a warning to those who received a number of fire prevention orders issued through the local fire office recently and had have failed to comply with the regulations set forth in them. These persons were given ten days in which to comply with the orders and as the time has now elapsed all those having taken no action to comply will receive summons from the chief.

These latter fire prevention orders were to force the placing of fire extinguishers in garages, service stations, gasoline, pumping station, and oil warehouses.

IMMIGRATION WILL IMPROVE

RETURNS FROM ENGLAND.

(By Henry Somerville—Special Cable Copyright).

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 4—W. J. Egan, Deputy-Minister of Immigration for Canada, sails for home to-morrow.

"My mission to England has been a success," he said. "I cannot give details until I have reported to my Minister, but important announcements will be made.

"There are new settlement arrangements in prospect and there will be closer co-operation between the bodies interested. Moreover, the whole attitude toward Canada has become better among prospective migrants. There is every indication of a decided increase of British migration to Canada during the coming year."

Boris, Lowest Paid King, Raised To $43,000; Gives Half His Salary Away; Too Poor To Wed

SOFIA, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press).—King Boris, who is the lowest salaried monarch in the world, received a 50 per cent. increase in his allowance, bringing it to 6,000,000 leva, or about $43,000 a year. This is the third increase which the popular ruler has received in the last ten years, showing that the Bulgarian people are well satisfied with his services.

Despite the latest increase, however, Boris is a relatively poor sovereign. Zogu, the new King of the Albanians, for example, receives six times times what Boris gets, and the boy King Michael of Rumania receives ten times the stipend of Boris.

Out of his modest pay King Boris gives more than half to charity, having donated two months' salary to the earthquake sufferers among his subjects and another two months' pay to the poor so that they might buy fuel for the Winter. His friends say he has so little money left for himself that he cannot even think of getting married.

He has no personal fortune. A bequest of $2,000,000 which his grandmother, Princess Clementine of Orleans, left to him was sequestered under the alien property law in London. The King is hopeful that the powers, following the example of the United States with regard to enemy property seized during the World War will return to him all the possessions confiscated under this law.

257 SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Bread Lines Are Formed In Stricken Areas and Barracks Constructed.

SANTIAGO, Chili, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Persons injured by the earthquake which centred at Talca, were being evacuated from the devastated region to-day and sent to Santiago. President Ibanez informed authorities at Talca that five hundred beds were at the disposition of the injured in the Capitol and two hundred of the casualties were immediately sent towards Santiago.

The known death toll to-day was set at 218 with the seriously injured at 257. It was stated that slightly more than two thousand had been slightly injured and that twenty thousand persons were homeless.

The Chamber of Deputies and Senate, meeting in joint session, urged the government to appropriate 2,000,000 pesos (about $240,000) for immediate relief work. Further appropriation of 3,000,000 pesos (about $360,000) for reconstruction was also urged.

Bread lines were formed in the stricken region and needy fed. The Mayor of Talca ordered that three barracks be constructed at once for the homeless and temporary hospital erected.

Doctors, nurses and troops were on the scene aiding the relief and distributing food, clothing and medicine.

Of the 50,000 inhabitants of Talca, a fifth were homeless, one hundred and eight persons were dead and 93 seriously injured there.

GUSHER PROVES BIG SENSATION

Total Daily Production Increased From Fifteen Million To Thirty-two Million.

OIL STOCKS SOARING.

CALGARY, Alta., Dec. 4.—(Special to The Examiner).—Oklata No. 1 Premier wet gusher in Turner Valley and newest crude naptha producer after coming in with a production of 20,000,000 cubic feet per day and dropping back to 15,000,000 feet has kept mounting until it has exceeded its 32,000,000 cubic feet flow which was its official measurement on November 16.

Oklata's spectacular performance has sent Alberta oil stocks soaring. A few weeks ago Okalta preferred and common were selling at $60 and $40 respectively. Since then preferred has jumped to $450 and common to well over $400. At present on the two separators Oklata is is producing 500 barrels per day without any back pressure which increases the amount of recovery. Early next week new separators will be put on. Each is supposed to be capable of producing 100,000,000 cubic feet of wet gas per day. Okalta will then be placed in a position to get the maximum recovery of crude naptha.

Plans being made by the Imperial Oil Company to an extensive program for 1929. It is the intention of the company to drill out Turner Valley according to an announcement here by A. M. McQueen, vice-president of the company. The Royalite has nine rigs operating on its own wells in the valley in addition to several other rigs on other wells either subsidiaries or companies for which the Royalite is drilling.

BY-LAW FOR FIXED ASSESSMENT TO JOHNSON MOTORS WILL ALSO BE VOTED ON AT COMING ELECTIONS

Gas Pump Order, Restricted Area and Canadian General By-laws Are Withheld and Will Be Discussed at a Special Meeting of the Council.

Peterborough's ratepayers at the coming municipal elections will be given an opportunity to pass on whether the city will take over the gas plant and other properties and submitting the question to a vote of the qualified ratepayers on January 1st. The purchase price is $335,000.00 which is the best quotation that the council was able to secure from the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission.

A by-law will also be submitted to the ratepayers fixing the Johnson Motor assessment at $10,000 for a period of 10 years. The new company has decided to stay in this city if the proper arrangements can be made and in the spring it intends manufacturing outboard motors for the Canadian trade and all the great export trade that it has developed in the last few years.

The meeting of the City Council was of a routine nature when the decks were cleared for the year and everything was put in readiness for the coming municipal elections. A short meeting was held in the committee rooms with representatives of the Nichols' Hospital Board before the council commenced its meeting. The board and council decided that it would be better not at this time to submit two large money by-laws to the city's ratepayers.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., was present representing the Imperial Oil Company, which has purchased property on George street, south of the library for the purpose of erecting a service station. Mr. Gordon pointed out that in the block in question there was a barber shop and second-hand sales rooms, and on a nearby corner a garage, washing station and bake shop. He claimed that no restriction by-law could close these legitimate businesses. "The service station the Imperial Oil Company contemplates building will be the best-looking one in the city and will improve the surrounding rather than detract to the slightest degree," said Mr. Gordon. He asked that the proposed by-law be left over and in the meantime he intends discussing the matter with the Canadian Legion, as on Friday night, the veterans, in a gathering of representative citizens passed a resolution not favoring the erection of the service station in front of the park. He believed that when the plans are shown he can appease the opposition and then he will come before the council again. His request was granted without discussion, and the proposed by-law was held in abeyance.

Sent $32,269.42

H. Gainey, chairman of the Suburban Area Commission, submitted his annual report, which showed that up until December first that body had spent $32,269.42 on road improvement and maintenance. He also gave traffic figures for two of the roads. On the Warsaw road the traffice census for one week showed that it was used by 5,970 vehicles, while on the Lakefield road for the same period there was counted 6,575 vehicles. The commission promised to cut the underbrush on the Park street ditch immediately, so that the city might deepen the drain.

Two communications were received objecting to the erecting of a service station on George street in front of Confederation Square, one was from the local war veterans, and the other from the Public Library Board.

The Women's Patriotic League from Ashburnham intimated, in a letter, that if the council could not find a suitable place for the guns in one of the city's parks that they be placed on Armour Hill.

City Engineer Parsons estimated that the cost of the proposed sewer Rogers street would amount to $1,144 and the necessary by-law was passed authorizing the construction.

Alderman Greene, chairman of the railways and parks committee, was instructed to call for tenders for caretakers, and C. H. Curtis was granted the sum of $25 for the services he rendered in looking after the interests of the city at the James Stevenson park this summer during the baseball season.

By-laws Passed

The following by-laws were passed: Number 2805 for the issuing of debentures for the gas plant and other properties, providing the ratepayers endorse the proposal on January 1.

By-law 2806 was given first and second reading, submitting the purchase of the gas plant to the ratepayers of the city.

Number 2807 for the signing of an agreement with H. Withers for the collection of garbage for the year 1929.

Number 2808 for submitting a fixed assessment for the Johnson Motors to the ratepayers on January 1.

Number 2809 for the construction of a sewer on Rogers street. The by-law, giving consent to the C.G.E. Company to change its siding was withheld. J. Bell was present and raised opposition to the passing of the by-law, that another route was more feasible and would not hurt certain property. A further investigation will be made and the by-law will probably come up at a special meeting of the council.

As some of the gasoline pump men who complied with the order to take their pumps off the streets and refuse to sign the petition circulated by A. Brown, think that all pumps ordered off should go, the motion to allow certain pumps to remain on the streets another year was held over.

J. R. Brownlee was granted a cigarette license without charge, and the usual grants of $25 to the Children's Shelter and the St. Vincent Orphanage to spread Christmas cheer were passed. Renewal of eating house licenses were granted to H. G. Foley, Hum Lee and Mrs. C. Cheu.

Alderman Cotton submitted a new lighting program for many of the streets in the south part of the city and the work was authorized. The new program means an additional expenditure of $216. New lights have been installed at Smith street bridge which will reduce the yearly cost $36.

The resignation of Alderman Ackerman, which was tendered at the October meeting of the city council was accepted on motion of Aldermen Cotton and Phelan. Alderman Ackerman at the time of submitting his resignation said that on account of pressure of business he was unable to give the affairs of the city their proper attention.

On motion of Aldermen McIntyre and Cotton, the aldermen expressed their appreciation and confidence in the mayor for the way had had conducted the controversy in the city during the last week.

Johnson Motor By-law.

Alderman McIntyre in moving that the Johnson Motor by-law be given to the people, outlined the progress of the company since coming to the city.

"As was well understood when the Johnson Motor Co. came to Peterborough, they rented the Henry Hope plant with an option to purchase it. They assembled the parts of their outboard motors during the summer and their success, and their satisfaction with the location in Peterborough, has convinced them of the advisability of purchasing the property and of doing more of the work here that in the past summer was done in their works at Waukegan, Illinois. They will put in more machinery after the first of the year, and gradually increase the machinery and employment by doing more manufacturing here. They have been supplying the Canadian market from the local plant, but they inform us that their intention is, as this plant is developed, to manufactur here for the British Isles and later for export to other parts of the Empire. In this way, as well as in developing their trade in Canada, they look for a considerable expansion in Peterborough and to giving increased employment.

"It will be remembered that the company had decided last spring to establish their factory in Toronto, and had gone as far as to decide on a location in that city and to advertise for employees, when they were met in Toronto by the Mayor and myself and persuaded to come to Peterborough. At that time we assured them that if they came here and purchased a plant with a view to manufacturing they would be given the same consideration as the city had given to other new industries and would be given a concession as to taxes as we had done for others. The company are now prepared to do their part, and it is for us to do our part, and this by-law is for the purpose of submitting to the qualified electors a by-law to fix the assessment of the company for municipal purposes at $10,000.00 for ten years, they of course to pay full school taxes on their property and business assessment. The plant is assessed for $32,200.00, and full taxes were paid on this assessment. If this by-law is passed, and the company will pay full taxes on $10,000.00 and school rates on the balance of the plant assessment and also on their business

In Heat of Discussion Lights Go Out at Campbellford Council Meeting.

IDEAL SOLUTION.

Department of Health Issues Mandatory Order For Installation of Apparatus.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Business was progressing rapidly and an interesting argument was in full swing as to whether or not the town should chlorinate the water in its mains, when the lights suddenly went out and the council chamber was left in absolute darkness. This made it impossible for the clerk to read further correspondence, but it was still possible to argue. Eventually the librarian came to the assistance of the councillors, by providing a candle. She had managed to resurrect two from some corner of her store room. Before the source of the trouble could be located and the lights switched on, the number of candles had increased to three—one for the mayor, one for the councillor who was making up the list of accounts, and one further down the table for the clerk. Deputy Reeve Davidson came back to the chamber with an oil lamp which he had borrowed from a near-by residence. A few minutes later, Chief Light appeared with a second lamp and a railroad lantern.

John MacGregor, town clerk, was ill, and unable to be present at the meeting. His duties were left in the hands of Councillor J. N. Stone. After the business of the meeting had been completed, the Mayor took advantage of the absence of the clerk to remind the council that the clerk's work had been practically doubled during the year and to suggest a bonus. In doing so, he pointed out that the town treasurer had been given a bonus. By a unanimous vote of the entire council, John MacGregor was granted a bonus of one hundred dollars along with an expression of appreciation for the efficient manner in which he had handled the extra duties made necessary by the paving program. A by-law authorizing the mayor and treasurer to borrow from the Canadian Bank of Commerce the sum of $10,000 was passed. The matter of installing a liquid chlorinator and its relation to the mandatory order issued by the department of Public Health, caused the greatest discussion at last night's meeting.

Numerous Communications

After dealing with the minutes of the last regular and special meetings of the council, the communications were read and dealt with. The first was from the department of Game and Fisheries, Toronto, and was under date of November 26. It announced a conference, to be held on the ninth day of January, 1929, in Toronto. The purpose of the meeting would be to find out what waters had been seriously depleted of game fish and to arrive at the reason for such depletion. Remedies would also be discussed. It was suggested that some members of the council or local sportsmen's society, if any, attend the conference, or in some way express an opinion on the waters in the district. The matter was left in the hands of Councillor Cole and the clerk.

Another letter was from the Jordan Robertson Sales Company. This is the company whose representatives waited on the council at the last special meeting with regard to a water supply from a deep well system. The letter stated that the company was arranging to have a survey made of the local situation and would report to the council the results of the work. In receiving the letter for their files, the council were of the opinion that this work would not place them under any obligation to the company.

James, Proctor and Redfern, engineers, Toronto, also wrote the council with regard to the water supply. They volunteered the information that the Wallace Tierman Company would rent a liquid chlorinator to the town for an indefinite period for the cost of fifty dollars for installing it and a similar amount for removing the machine when it was no longer required. The letter indicated that the department of Public Health would insist on the installation of such a device before permitting the extension of the water system of the town.

Ideal Solution

Mayor Kingston thought this was an ideal solution to the situation that had developed and just then the lights went out. Deputy reeve Davidson was opposed to the move. He claimed that there was less sickness in Campbellford than in other towns where the water was chlorinated. He believed that the water was good and pointed out that there was a by-law in force forbidding people to drink the water from the mains. Therefore any who did so, were breaking the law. To continue the meeting in darkness was out of the question so the deputy reeve joined the search for lamps.

While waiting for lights, Councillor O'Sullivan reported that he had

East Durham Elects Bailieboro as Representative in Old-

230 VOTES CAST

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 4 (Examiner Correspodence).—Keith Barnard, candidate for the eighth Older Boys' Provincial Parliament, for the constituency of East Durham, was successful in winning Saturday's election over his opponent, Joseph Waddell, of Garden Hill. Both candidates thoroughly contested the election, and the greatest number of votes were cast that have ever been cast in a boys' election in East Durham.

The number of votes on the voters' list numbered approximately three hundred, while two hundred and thirty-three votes were cast. The result of the election at the various polling booths was as follows:

	Waddell.	Barnard.
Bailieboro.	1	61
Garden Hill	63	2
Millbrook	21	47
Welcome	16	22
Totals	101	132

Barnard's majority over Waddell was 31 votes.

The following boys were stationed at the various pooling booths on Saturday, as scrutineers: K. Lang and J. Barnard at Garden Hill; S. Johnston and A. Deyell, at Millbrook; A. Brown, M. Wood and R. Barnard at the local booth and A. Dawson at Welcome.

PRESERVATION OF GAME FISH IS DISCUSSED

Professor Harkness Outlines Chief Causes of Depletion of Fish in Lakes.

UNIFORM WATER FLOW

Anglers Asked to do Everything Possible to Stop Illegal Fishing.

... (Examiner Correspondence.) ...

MARMORA, December 4. — With the consideration of some method of restocking local lakes and streams with the game fish at one time more plentiful, as its primary object, a meeting was held at the Town Hall on Friday evening, under the chairmanship of Reeve G. B. Airhart.

The principal speaker was Professor W. J. K. Harkness, of the Department of Biology, University of Toronto, who was accompanied on his visit by T. W. Jull, president of the Toronto Anglers' Association, G. S. Bell, chairman of the Conservation Committee, and Victor Goad, director of the Toronto Anglers' Association. Owing to the late arrival of the party through encountering the storm, the meeting was late in starting.

After three splendid violin selections by T. Llewellyn Jones, the chairman briefly outlined the steps taken by Village and Township Councils and Marmora Booster Club in the matter of restocking local waters. J. F. Baker having favored the audience with a pleasing song, Mr. Jull spoke briefly, and introduced as next speaker Professor Harkness.

Professor Harkness said he hoped to be able to give information of some benefit. He would outline some of the chief causes of game fish depletion and indicate how much of it may be checked. The greatest cause, he mentioned, was deforestation.

Uniform Water Flow.

The affecting of streams and lakes by melting snow and ice under original and present conditions was clearly and interestingly defined. He reminded those present of the value of dams in maintaining a uniformity of water flow. He advised that the situation in Marmora be watched very carefully. Changes of water level in the lake, he pointed out, affected the animal life on which the fish subsist. Continuing, he said:

"When it comes to the matter of bringing back original conditions we can do very little. We can reforest at the head waters—the springs. Examine the sources and see that they are constant and pure and that they are thus maintained." Referring to overfishing as the second great cause of fish depletion, he remarked that bag limits served a very necessary purpose. In this connection reference was also made to illegal fishing. As sportsmen, the Professor said, anglers should limit their bag, morally persuade their sportsmen friends to do the same, and do everything to stop illegal fishing. Whatever might be done in the matter of artificial propagation of fish, he would advise first and foremost that they protect the fish in their natural spawning beds. "If necessary," he urged, "make permanent sanctuaries and have them mean something.

Water Pollution.

Pollution of water was given as a third cause of depletion. This was treated under three headings—organic pollution, mechanical waste, sawdust and oil and direct poison coming from refuse of dye factories, smelters, mines, and such like. All pollution of streams favored by fish should be prevented. It is outside of

Improvement is Maintained

The concern of physicians attending His Majesty King George, during Sunday night, which caused the issuing of a late night bulletin on the king's condition, attracted hundreds of loyal citizens yesterday to the gates of Buckingham Palace for further news. Great relief was created when the early bulletin reported a slight improvement. Citizens stood in the rain to get the latest information. ABOVE shows part of the huge crowd which has collected at the gates ever since the king was stricken.

MAY APPOINT COMMISSION

Similar Procedure Was Followed After His Majesty's Illness in 1925.

CABINET MEETS.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — Canadian Press —The Daily Mail says decision has been reached to appoint a commission to act for the King, as was done when His Majesty was absent from England, after his illness in March, 1925. Discussion of the commission has been in view several days, the paper asserts and decision was based on the present serious character of the Sovereign's illness.

It is understood the commission would comprise the Lord Chancellor, the Premier, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Duke of York.

Difficulties are said already to have arisen during the King's illness regarding the signing of state papers, scores of which go to the King for approval and signature in the ordinary course of every week. Several Cabinet consultations preceded the decision to appoint the commission, the Mail says.

This procedure is based upon precedents which enable the use of the Royal sign manual to be dispensed with when the Sovereign, owing to illness, is unable to affix his signature.

When circumstances make it necessary to thus put the Crown in commission" the Sovereign, if able, attends a meeting of the Privy Council, and formally authorizes the act. As King George is now obviously unable to do this advantage will be taken of provision for other procedure.

This provision lays down that such a commission may be appointed by letters patent whereto the Great Seal of the Kingdom has been affixed. The Lord Chancellor is ex-officio the custodian of the Great Seal.

Such a commission possesses all th powers necessary for carrying on the administration in the name of the King. The commissioners bear the title "Counsellors of State" and their appointment is announced by proclamation. Although employing most of the powers possessed by the Sovereign they are specifically debarred from some, notably that of dissolving Parliament, and are unable to grant any rank, title or dignity.

SMALL VOTE AT LINDSAY

Chas. Lamb Wins Position of Second Deputy-Reeve From T. Tilly.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

LINDSAY, Dec. 4 (Examiner Correspondence). — Municipal elections were held here yesterday, unfavorable weather conditions and apathy on the part of the citizens resulting in a small vote being polled. In the contest for the position of Second Deputy-Reeve, Charles Lamb defeated Thomas J. Tilly by a majority of 102 votes. Six candidates entered the contest for the Hydro Commission, with four to be elected. The successful aspirants were John McCrae, Frank Maunder, Keele Gregory, William E. Baker. The defeated candidates were: George W. Hall, Les. Richman.

LAMBTON M. P. DIES IN OHIO

W. T. Goodison, Chairman of Important Committee in House of Commons.

BORN AT STRATHROY.

SARNIA, December 4 — W. T. Goodison, M.P. for West Lambton, died at 8.30 last night at Cleveland, Ohio, following an operation for goitre. He was 52 years of age. For eight days he had been unconscious. His death constitutes a most severe loss to the Liberal Party in West Lambton and in Sarnia to the whole city irrespective of party.

Mr. Goodison resumed the riding of West Lambton for the Liberal Party in the election of 1925, in which he defeated R. V. Lesuer. A year later he was again returned. In his first session he served on the commission which investigated the Customs, and in the last session was the chairman of the committee on the Canadian National Railways and Merchant Marine.

He was born in Strathroy, the younger son of the late John Goodison, who founded the Goodison Thresher Company, of this city, of which William T. Goodison became the head in 1916.

He graduated in law from Osgoode Hall and was associated with the company under his father and his elder brother, Edwin, who predeceased him. A man of keen business acumen, he found time for diversified interests and was the owner of the well-known Goodison stock farm on the London Road, near Sarnia. He was also president of the Industrial Mortgage and Trust Company, of this city, and a director of the Ontario Commercial Travellers' Association.

He first became active in public life with his election to the Board of Education of which he was chairman in 1925. He was also a director of the Chamber of Commerce, and vice-president of the West Lambton Fair Board. His live stock was exhibited at many fairs, and he regularly maintained a string of race horses which followed the smaller fairs' circuit.

DRIVER PINNED UNDER CAR

Several Automobiles Slip Into Ditch on Icy Roads Near Warsaw.

PIE SOCIAL HELD

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Dec. 4.—The icy roads on Saturday caused a good deal of trouble. The brakes, on one car coming down Lukey's hill refused to work, the driver lost control and it went off the road and took the ditch on the left side. Those who know the hill can imagine what might have happened had it plunged off the road on the right side.

Another driver was coming down the hill, when the hind wheels slewed and his car turned around facing up. The driver was able to keep control of his car and backed down the hill until he could turn.

Pinned Under Car.

Dick Alford was returning from Warsaw to Lakefield on Thursday evening and on a hill just north of Hawthorne's corners, met a car. In some way, when he turned out, his car went off the road where there is a steep enbankment and numerous large stones. It turned over and the car east into Asia and spread the gospel. He had many converts, but sufferedmar tyrdom. His body was embalmed and buried there, but after many years taken to the east coast of Scotland and buried. The town of St. Andrew is named from this spot.

Sandwiches, pie and tea were served by members of the Aid.

To Give Entertainment.

The Presbyterian Sunday school teachers decided to have an entertainment as a Christmas treat and social evening for the children, without the idea of making money. It will be held in the Town Hall with no charge, except a silver collection to defray expenses.

Ladies' Aid Hold Meeting.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Church held their regular meeting in the basement of the church on Thursday afternoon, with the president presiding. It was decided to have Lakefield decorators give an estimate on re-decorating the church. Mrs. Arthur Edwards gave a reading and Mrs. Rufus Payne sang a song.

CO-OPERATIVE COMPANY WILL SHOW PROFIT

Dividend of 50 Cents a Share Declared By the Directors.

ELECT BOARD TO-DAY.

First Full Year's Operation of Grain Pool Will Be Discussed at Session.

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—Operations of the Ontario Grain Pool during its first full year will be the subject of discussion at the fifteenth annual meeting of the United Farmers' Co-operative, Limited, opening in Hygeia Hall, this morning. Harry A. Gilroy, of Alvinston, and W. A. Amos, Palmerston, are scheduled as speakers on this topic, as well as live stock contracts and other activities of the Co-operative.

The directorate, of which James Ross, Woodbridge, is head, met last evening at U.F.O. headquarters, Duke street, in a long business session preliminary to the annual meeting, but J. J. Morrison, secretary, said there was no statement for publication. Election of the board will take place at 7 o'clock this evening, and the new directorate will hold its first meeting to-morrow morning.

Profits To Be Shown

H. H. Clemes, as general manager, will present his annual report to-day. Net trading profits of the organization, from all departments, were $39[illegible]-821, of 17¾ per cent. on capital, in addition to commodity dividends. The directors have declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, which with a similar dividend passed a year ago will be sent out soon, amounting in all to $70,000.

A resolution is to be submitted, "that the shareholders in counties, ridings and smaller districts may appoint a delegate to the annual meeting to vote for the shareholders assenting to such appointment."

The annual session of the United Farmers of Ontario, the education branch, will open in Hygeia Hall tomorrow under chairmanship of Bruce McNevin, Omemee, whose re-election is predicted. A large number of resolutions are scheduled for discussion, many of this year's bearing upon federal issues rather than provincial. One, which has to do with motor vehicle regulations, seems to be based upon a misapprehension. It protests against "proposed legislation" prohibiting the transporting of farm produce in other than commercial cars.

No Legislation Proposed

"I never heard of any such proposed legislation," said J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor vehicles. "Once in a while a constable in some small place gets the idea that there is a law which prohibits carrying of produce in a car with passenger license. There is nothing to prevent a farmer putting a cow in his touring car, if he chooses, and as a matter of fact I have seen calves loaded in sedans. Periodically we have enquiries on the subject, but not to my knowledge is any change contemplated."

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE GIVES SHORT PLAY

Ryistone Society Holds Delightful Social Evening in Union School.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PETERKINS CORNERS, Dec. 4. —The feature attraction at the meeting of the Ryistone Women's Institute, held in the Union schoolhouse on Friday evening, was the short play, "Aunt Deborahs First Luncheon." The program was most interesting and much appreciated by the audience. Mrs. Ernest Irwin plays in an excellent manner, the part of the comic old lady from the country who unexpectedly visits her city cousin, Mrs. Travers (Mrs. Fred Barnum) and her daughter, Elizabeth (Mrs. Harry Barnum) just as they are giving a society luncheon in honor of Mrs. Cartwright (Mrs. John Simpson) and Mrs. Warfield (Mrs. G. O'Neill-John). In spite of Mrs. Travers' fears for the old lady's conduct, she makes a decided hit with the society matrons. The two maids (Misses Gladys Simpson and Agnes Simpson) add spice to the plot with their comments on the various characters.

Mr. Wilson, Hastings County Agricultural Representative, was present with his motion picture machine and showed a number of reels, ranging from comedy to romance and then to educational films along the lines of forestry, iron and steel moulding and the life and work of the great poet, Shakespeare.

Among the program numbers were selections by the orchestra, Miss Ruth Lawrence, E. Anderson and Rosie Lain; duet, by the Misses Gladys Simpson and Freda Petherick; solo, Miss Ruth Lawrence; community singing led by Fred Barnum and two choruses by the school children. Fred Rutherford very capably filled the office of chairman for the occasion.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—With a moderate run, trade on finished cattle is moving briskly with values 50 cents per hundred weight higher. Choice steers and heifers sell at $9 to $10. Medium and common are last to be weighed on a slower market.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 4 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was decidedly slow owing to the fact that foreign bids were below local exporters' views. There was no change in the condition of the local market for cash grain, prices generally being steady with a moderate amount of business passing.

The trade in Spring and Winter wheat flour was fair and prices were unchanged.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under a good demand. The market for rolled oats was firm.

A nactive trade was done in all grades of eggs and prices were steady. Receipts were 179 cases.

A feature of the potato trade was the strength that developed for Prince Edward Island grades and prices were marked up five cents per bag. Cobblers sold at 75c per 90 lbs. bag, and Green Mountains at 85c. There were no New Brunswick potatoes offered.

Beans were steady at $5.25 per bushel.

A steady feeling prevailed in the butter market under a fair demand. Receipts were 121 packages.

Owing to the indifferent attitude of English importers and the limited demand from spot interests for cheese the undertone to the market was again easier and prices were reduced ⅛ to ¼c per lb. Receipts were 222 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Lively selling of future deliveries of wheat took place yesterday at the last account of decided enlargement of the United States wheat visible supply. As a consequence, the finish of trading in wheat was irregular, with earlier gains more than offset. World shipments of 21,903,000 bushels of wheat for the week set a new top record.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled ⅝c net lower to ⅛c to ¼c advance, with corn ⅝c to ¾c up, oats showing ⅛ to ⅝ to ⅞c gain, and provisions unchanged to a set back of 15c.

Increased by 2,168,000 bushels yesterday, the domestic wheat visible supply totalled 136,777,000 bushels, as against 91,036,000 bushels a year ago. The bearish showing was emphasized, too, by talk of late that the peak for the season had been passed. Prior to receipts of the visible supply statement, the market was showing a general upward trend, owing a good deal to ready absorption of wheat offerings here, the December delivery in particular.

Surprising continued meagerness of Chicago deliveries on December wheat contracts attracted special notice. Only 180,000 bushel all told were thus handed over here yesterday and the conclusion was drawn in various quarters that owners of wheat were thoroughly satisfied with their property. The circumstances were also taken to indicate that after the early movement of Argentine wheat is ended North American wheat will again be in demand. Meanwhile, though, the Liverpool wheat market yesterday was relatively unresponsive to price upturns on this side of the Atlantic, notwithstanding Argentine reports of hot winds in the south.

Corn and oats were strengthened yesterday by reports of prospective large export requirements, estimated as implying additional European purchases of 95,000,000 bushels of corn from the United States before April next. Oats sold at new high prices for the season. Advices were current that potential domestic feeding demand for corn is about equal to last season, there being more cattle on feed although fewer hogs, with relative prices favorable to feeding of both cattle and hogs. On the other hand, the forecast today pointed to cold weather likely to hasten the movement of the corn crop.

EGGS AND POULTRY

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4 (Canadian Press).—A little more activity has developed in the turkey market over the week-end, but for the most part the situation is still quiet. The egg market continues to be featured by heavier shipments of eggs from B. C.

Montreal.—The local egg market is quiet except on fresh extras. Buyers of storage eggs are holding off. There has been some sales of Alberta turkeys here. Two cars were sold on Saturday at 41c for birds over 15 lbs. Alberta shippers yesterday were asking 41½c for birds over 12 lbs.

Saskatoon.—Dealers are quoting for dressed turkeys over 15 lbs, 33¾c; 10 to 15 lbs, 31c; 8 to 10 lbs, 29c; 6 to 8 lbs, 25c; old toms, 28c; No. 2 over 10 lbs, 22c; under 10 lbs, 11c. Dressed geese, 13c. Ducks, 18c.

Vancouver.—Egg production here is heavier. Dealers are quoting producers for ungraded eggs, delivered, extras, 45 to 46c; firsts, 41 to 42c; pullet extras, 35 to 36c. Nine cars of fresh eggs were shipped east during the past week. Firsts move slowly, but extras and pullet extras are in demand.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, December 4. — Steady withdrawals of country produce from Toronto cold storage for the month of November this year are reported by the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Produce Association in a report of Toronto holdings released on December 1. Creamery butter stocks were withdrawn from coolers to the extent of approximately 26,000 boxes during the last month. Cheese stocks were decreased by 1,295 boxes. Cold storage eggs are down sharply from November 1, withdrawals amounting to 26,170 cases. Similarly May creamery storage stocks show uniform declines in butter, cheese, and storage eggs.

In a jobbing way the spot market for butter yesterday was moderately active, and no notable change in price was reported from any direction, although in some market quarters it was stated that prospects are for wider market expansion and higher prices in the near future. With a little over 51,000 boxes of creamery butter on hand for use until such time as the supplies arrive from New Zealand late this month, local dealers are fairly well equipped to handle the situation, unless, of course, there is some radical change in demand, which is hardly likely at this season of the year. Inquiry from all retail sources for domestic needs is good, with signs of a seasonal improvement as the Christmas season approaches.

Lacking any new feature at the resumption of trading for the week, the spot market for cheese was quiet and unchanged. Dealers continue to quote from 21¼c to 21¾c per pound for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered Toronto.

Arrivals of fresh eggs from British Columbia producing centres on the Toronto markets saw softening in prices for fresh extras and fresh firsts. Dealers were quoting 55c to 60c per dozen for fresh extras, and 50c to 52c for fresh firsts. Quotations to the retail trade were lower for fresh firsts at 60c per dozen.

The poultry market is firm in price, with a fair supply of all lines of fresh poultry moving in from the country.

SUGAR MARKETS UNCHANGED

NEW YORK, December 4. Canadian Press. — The raw sugar market was steady and unchanged yesterday at 5.96 for spots, duty paid, with a sale reported of 23,000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment.

After showing early declines of two to four points, raw sugar futures rallied on covering by December shorts and buying of the later deliveries by houses with trade and Cuban connections, with final prices three points higher to 2 points lower. The market opened one point higher to 3 points lower, but soon weakened under liquidation and selling by houses with European connections. The steadiness of the spot market however discouraged aggressive selling and after net losses of 2 to 4 points prices rallied and closed at the best of the session, with the December position showing the maximum gain. Approximate sales 46,200 tons. December closed 2.13; January 2.10; March 2.15; May 2.33; July, 2.30; September 2.31; December 1929, 2.42.

The refined market was unchanged at 5.25 for fine granulated with a fair withdrawal demand, but no business reported.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1928

THE STARS OF YESTERDAY.

There are so many possibilities in regard to Old Home Week that might be developed that the various committees should have no reason to complain of unemployment during the winter months.

In the field of sport, for example, the bringing together of some of the city's old-time sporting organizations might be worked out.

The Examiner has been publishing some articles on famous rugby and hockey teams of the past.

Most of the players of these teams are still in the land of the living, but few are in Peterborough.

The old Colts who flourished at the beginning of the century and whose exploits made them the heroes of that day might be rounded up, and what a fanning bee there would develop if all those famous players could be brought home for Old Home Week!

The stars of the gridiron, the ball field and the ice of years ago would be a great feature of the reunion, for they bring back the past more forcibly perhaps than any other galaxy of old boys possibly could.

RECOGNIZING GOOD WORK.

In awarding the garbage collection contract for next year to the firm that has been doing the work for some years, the City Council is wise in considering good service as more important than the saving of a few dollars.

There was a lower tender, it is true, but it has always seemed to The Examiner to be a mistake in the awarding of contracts under the tender system to overlook altogether the manner in which the work may be done and blindly give the contract to the lowest tenderer.

The low man may render just as good service, but in his case the awarding of the contract is an experiment; by recognizing good work, as has been done in this instance, no chances are taken.

It is generally admitted that Peterborough's garbage collection work has been well done, and it would have been poor business to have ignored this fact and awarded the contract to somebody else, merely because $150 might be saved on a $10,000 job.

The great trouble with the present method of appointing rural letter carriers is that an official who has done faithful service may find himself left out in the cold at the end of his term because somebody else imagines he can do the work for a few dollars less.

WANT TEST EXTENDED.

Alberta Boards of Trade are asking that the trial period for the movement of Alberta coal in Ontario, now fixed at three months, should be made six months for the succeeding years of the experiment.

The change is urged in the belief that the test has been hampered by the brevity of the period, which is described as too short and untimely, considering the needs and conditions of the Ontario market, and as unsatisfactory to both the Alberta coal operators and to the distributors and consumers in Ontario.

It is pointed out that while American anthracite is available in Ontario every month of the year, Alberta domestic coal, according to the terms of the order-in-Council as interpreted, is available for only three months and at a season when the coal consumption here is at a minimum.

Neither the coal distributor nor the consumer is not likely to be in a position to stock his full requirements for the fuel-burning season during those three months, and the feeling among the Alberta Boards of Trade is that unless the shipping period is extended the main purpose of the order-in-Council will be defeated.

Their representations are worthy of consideration in view of the importance of having Canada made independent so far as is possible in regard to her supply of fuel.

PRODUCED-IN-CANADA.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in an effort to promote a greater use of produced-in-Canada goods for Christmas trade, is distributing throughout Canada a large number of folders stressing the desirability of buying in Canada.

This is good business for the manufacturers, and it is good business for the whole country.

Recent trade returns shows our purchases of foreign goods, especially in the United States, as rapidly mounting, a condition that cannot continue without constituting a serious menace to Canadian manufacturing.

To those employed in industry it is felt that the present appeal should come with special force.

In doing their Christmas shopping they should remember that their own jobs will be made the more secure by buying goods that have been produced-in-Canada since the welfare of all industry depends upon the welfare of each part.

Canadians may differ in opinion as to the tariff, but whether they are protectionists or free traders they should be able to see that the more Canadian goods bought at Christmas or any other time the more prosperity for all Canada, the more orders for Canadian manufacturers and producers, and the more work for Canadian workmen.

Do your Christmas shopping early and buy produced-in-Canada articles if you want to make this Christmas a happy one for the whole country.

SATISFIED TOURISTS.

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior has received hundreds of letters from tourists, which are acceptable evidence of the fact that Canada is becoming more and more popular with visitors from the United States. A few specimens have been published by the department, all containing enthusiastic references to the delights of holidaying in this Dominion, and uniformly appreciative of the hospitality of Canadians, the helpful assistance received from private citizens and officials and the moderate charges made for accommodations. "Practically no complaints have been received this season of unfair treatment of the tourists," remarks the Intelligence Service, whose duty it is to supply information to those contemplating a holiday in Canada and to promote the movement generally. A typical letter is that of the secretary of a Pennsylvania golf club, who writes: "I have just returned from a very delightful tour of Canada and was very much impressed with the beauty of the place, the good roads, the courteous treatment of the people and the very moderate prices charged the tourists." Some of the correspondents have been spending their annual vacations in Canada year after year, and these go back to their homes and "sell Canada's scenery" to others. The visit of a single individual five years ago has led, in one instance, to the coming of several parties since, with the prediction that next year "at least forty" from that locality will spend their vacation in Ontario.

The majority of these tourists prefer to get away off in the wilds on fihsing and canoeing trips; requests have been received for information on canoe trips in all the Provinces, "from the Maritimes to the Yukon. The demand for maps and holiday literature is very great. Many of the visitors buy a place of their own in Canada—a lodge or cabin, to which they return each year. The Natural Resources Intelligence Service is to be congratulated on the excellent work it is doing to bring the claims of Canada as an ideal holiday country to the notice of American tourists, and it is gratifying to know that its efforts are meeting with such splendid success.—Hamilton Spectator.

CANADIAN LITERARY SHRINES.

Some years ago, an English critic writing on Canadian literature commented on the difficulty he had experienced in obtaining information about the authors of the Dominion and their work. "Nearly all the books written about the country," he said, "tell you something of nearly everything in it, except its literature." There were available, he pointed out, all kinds of volumes relating to the history and progress of Canada, and not a few that dealt with the men who had played a part in the making of the Dominion, pioneers, politicians, railway magnates and agriculturists, but of Canadian writers there was scarcely any mention.

That condition has, to some extent, been corrected since by a growing appreciation of our literature, which has found expression in a number of critical and biographical studies of Canadian authors, past and present. But while at least a meed of lasting fame is assured to some of our poets and other writers by the very quality of their work, there is still room for more adequate recognition of their claims to honor in a form that would preserve and perpetuate their memory in the localities with which they were individually associated.

We erect statues, monuments and tablets in honor of our statesmen, soldiers, industrialists, city founders, scientists and other men of mark in different spheres of life. In the preservation of historic sites and landmarks, recalling great men and stirring deeds of the past, excellent work has been accomplished by the various commissions and associations constituted for that purpose. Throughout the Dominion, there is scarcely a community that does not possess a public memorial of some kind to someone worthy of remembrance in one field of activity, or another. Yet in the multiplicity of monuments and shrines, it is exceptional to find one dedicated to a representative of letters.

There are, however, welcome indications of a disposition to remedy this neglect, and to ensure that fitting homage shall be paid to the memory of Canadian authors of distinction. At Annapolis, a tablet preserves the name of Marc Lescarbot, the French historian, poet and dramatist, whose associations with Acadia marked the dawn of Canadian literature. In the Province of Quebec, a monument will keep green the memory of Louis Hemon, who, in the Lake St. John country, found the inspiration that created "Maria Chapdelaine." And now it is proposed that several of Ontario's poets be honored with memorials, appropriately placed, and worthily expressive of the reverence due to notable literary service.

The movement had its inception in a suggestion voiced by Arthur Stringer, himself a writer of more than national repute, that steps be taken to preserve as a memorial to Archibald Lampman the house of Morpeth, Kent County, in which that gifted singer was born 67 years ago. The idea has not only found ready acceptance in circles interested in Canadian literature, but has drawn forth a proposal that other Ontario poets be similarly honored. It is suggested, for instance, that the birthplace of Pauline Johnson, near Brantford; the boyhood home of Wilfred Campbell, at Wiarton; and the birthplace of John McCrae, at Guelph, to mention only a few of the homes and haunts of distinguished Canadian authors, might receive recognition in the form indicated.

In the case of Lampman, Morpeth, as his birthplace, has, no doubt, the first claim to a memorial; yet Ottawa, too, might worthily honor the memory of the poet, who spent so many years of his comparatively brief life in its midst, and there did most of the work that brought him fame. If the routine of a Civil Service position bore heavily upon him at times, and city life often made him "weary of things," it was in the Capital, and its vicinity, that he developed, if he did not acquire, the ardent love of nature, the passion for the open air, and the absorbing sense of the beauty and majesty of forest, field and alluring landscape, which find such exquisite expression in his verse.

Other places have Lampman associations that may well be cherished. If the poet's heart lay anywhere, it was, perhaps, amid the pines of Rice Lake and Gore's Landing in the Trent Valley, the scene of his boyhood and schooling, and of many a summer holiday bright with golden days. But Archibald Lampman was essentially of the Ottawa tradition, which has lent lustre to Canadian poetry, and there could be no more fitting site for a memorial than the city to which he came in 1883, where he lived and worked until his death in 1899, and where the call of his beloved Gatineau beckoned him to inspiration and achievement.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Nurmi, great Finnish middle distance man, is reported to have turned professional. He should certainly give Tex Rickard a run for his money.

Only three weeks until Christmas. That shopping cannot be deferred any longer if it is to be called early.

23,146 students appeared on the various school hockey, baseball, soccer, lacrosse, volley ball and track and field teams of the Toronto Public Schools during the past year. The Queen City authorities believe that bodies as well as minds should be developed.

The winning of the comb honey competition at the Winter Fair by Allan Brown may be truthfully described as a sweet victory for Peterborough.

Don Alfonzo of Spain says that hockey will never replace the bull fight. But he'd better wait and see what the professional rulemakers may yet do with Canada's national winter pastime.

A Thought

"KEEP OUT OF THE PAST"

(By Velma Runnels, Campbellford)

The fires of days gone by have long been extinguished. The sun has shivered on a gilded horizon many an evening since. The past may be a beautiful avenue of dreams to you now or yet, it may be a sickening pool, stagnant with slim. No difference what the past means to you, don't allow your visions and brain to become dormant. The future lies before each one of us now. Before us is the height which was made for us to climb. It is strength we need to master that height. The past is dead. How can the dead build strength for us?

Don't ever fret over the past. If we do, it is only losing time. When we are dreaming of the lost pleasures of the past, we become rusted and out of tune. Each one of us is an instrument in the hands of God. We want to shine and tune ourselves up. There is a large audience before each one of us. They are expecting something elevating from the performers. Are they getting it when we veil our faces with storehouse gloom?

People who are everlastingly living in the past are going to find themselves, some day, standing before the world—dumb. I'm glad to say that the majority of this age are not slaying their dreams in their prime. This is a grand age to be able to live in. It seems that each one is trying to look forward and never backward.

The future can never be reached without anguish and pain. But through the trembling groans of the present lies the greater gain. Is it not worth the struggle?

Life and we are pals. What is lovelier than to plan work that life and you can do together in the future? When our will is strong, there are no limits to our power. Strong will depends upon the future not the past.

We want the bud and the blushing rose, not the faded petals. The faded ones have lost their perfume and their beauty. They bring sad memories. No, friends, it's life we crave for. We are stretching out our hands for beauty and knowledge. We don't want a drooped head and rounded shoulders. We want to turn a yawning chasm into a level sea of force and strength.

GOD'S MINUTE.

My grace is sufficient for thee.—II Cor. 12:9.

Our Heavenly Father, we Thy children would bless Thee for the dawn of this new day, for we regard it as Thy gift to us. Help us, we humbly pray Thee, to use it wisely and well; conduct ourselves through all its hours that to some extent we may prove ourselves worthy of such a gift, and in it do something worth while, so that at its close we may feel we have not lived it in vain. For all the difficulties that may confront us, give us grace sufficient; for all the questions we may have to decide, give wisdom; and for all the temptations we may have to meet, give us overcoming power. Keep us all the day conscious of Thy companionship, and of the realities of the things unseen; may we increase in knowledge of things that matter most, and understand better the things we now only know in part. Reveal Thy will more clearly to us, and may this day see that will better fulfilled in us. For all bound to us by the ties of nature, faith and love we pray; enrich their lives with every good, and use them in the furtherance of Thy most gracious will on earth. And very earnestly do we pray for the hastening of the day when among all peoples on earth Thy kingdom will come, Thy will be done perfectly. Hear us, we pray Thee, gracious God, for we pray in the name of Thy blessed Son, our Saviour and Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY A CHILD'S TESTIMONY SHOULD BE DISCOUNTED

By Meh an K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action.

If you were on the jury would you believe the testimony of a child? And if it contradicted the testimony of a man or woman would you take the child's statement in preference? It is safe to say that the average person believes that children do not lie and that their testimony is more reliable and trustworthy than the testimony of adults.

This is another of those popular notions that can't stand the searchlight of scientific investigation. We are deceived by the child's innocence. But there is a world of difference between innocence and competency in giving testimony in court.

The child is a poor witness because of two serious limitations—he does not observe accurately and he cannot report accurately what little he observes. Added to this is the difficulty of possessing a vivid imagination which enables him to dig up a plausible story out of whole cloth. He will lie without knowing that he is doing so. This sincerity on his part is mistaken for veracity.

Many a poor innocent fellow has been condemned on the testimony of a child. Experts in the field know how to discount a child's testimony.

The child is handicapped in not knowing what to look for and so does not see what is right before his eyes. But when he comes to report on what he is supposed to have seen he has not the discrimination to tell accurately what is truth and what is fiction, what he actually saw in the concrete situation and what he saw or now sees only in his imagination. The force of suggestion which is especially strong in children operates to anticipate the answer that the questioner demands. The type of questions asked often determines the answer for the child by suggestion, and he is very quick to take his cue.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLVIII

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unhappy marriage with SADIE BARROW—to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland, through his friend, LOMBARD, Giles meets Julie and determines to make her love him and then spurn her to avenge his brother. But later, after they have found out that they really love each other, he finds out that she is a cousin of the other Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. As he cannot marry her, she plunges into a wild, reckless life, and finally decides to marry a rich, older man named SCHOFIELD. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money he will tell Schofield that Chittenham and Julie spent a night together in Switzerland. Chittenham decides to get a divorce from Sadie and marry Julie, and Julie tells Schofield she cannot marry him. But then Sadie goes blind, and Chittenham feels that he cannot leave her. Julie runs away. Schofield, who believes Lombard's story and is thrashed by Chittenham for doing so, is run down by an automobile. The driver said he and Chittenham spent the stormy night on St. Bernard together, talking. Schofield, ashamed to have believed Lombard, seeks Julie to apologize.

One Saturday Chittenham and Bim went down into Gloucester to follow up a clue which they hoped might lead to news of Julie.

Chittenham had told Sadie he was going away on business.

"I shall be back on Monday. Be a good girl."

She turned away impatiently when he would have kissed her.

"You treat me like a child. Nobody would think I am your wife."

Chittenham frowned.

"Don't be unreasonable, Sadie. I cannot spend all my time with you."

Her drawn face flushed.

"You would want to if you loved me," she accused him.

He had no answer to that; he knew it was true. If it had been Julie sitting alone there in the darkness with the dread of a great despair hovering round, he knew he would never have left her.

"If you would rather I did not go—" he began hopelessly, but she broke in offendedly:

"Oh, go, go! They all say you behave like an angel. They all think that I am a beast to you. Oh, I know they don't say so, but I know what they think." Then, as she felt him move to leave her, she caught at his arm with her thin, nervous hands. "I'm sorry, Giles. I didn't mean it. I do try to be reasonable, but if you were in my place——" Her voice broke, and she controlled it with an effort.

Chittenham could have wept with pity for her. He could feel how she was trembling.

"When you're better you shall have everything you want in the world," he promised rashly, and was struck at the heart by her reply.

"I only want you." She waited, as if hoping he would convince her that he was already hers, and then as he said nothing she broke out passionately: "Oh, what a fool I've been, what a fool! Blinder than I am now—much blinder!"

"I'll do anything in the world to make you happy, Sadie," Giles said, but in his heart he despised himself for a coward and a traitor to the woman he loved. He could do nothing for Sadie if it was only his love she wanted; that was already in the keeping of Julie, who had gone out of his life, perhaps for ever. He kissed Sadie hurriedly, anxious to be gone, but she clung to him.

"Kiss my lips—kiss my lips!"

"Sadie!"

He held back from her for a moment, then gave way. He kissed her lips kindly enough, but with no warmth or passion, and she pushed him from her petulantly.

"Go away! You don't love me. You hate being with me." And a storm of tears came, and bitter sobbing.

Chittenham went out to Bim, who was waiting for him. His face was set and white, and his eyes miserable.

"I can't stand this much longer," he told her as they drove away. "It's an impossible situation. God only knows what the end will be."

But the whole world knew the end when, on Monday morning, after a hopeless search along a chain of false clues which led them nowhere, Bim and Chittenham returned to town.

There was an urgent telephone call from Sadie's nursing home. Would Mr. Chittenham please come immediately?

"I'll go with you," Bim said at once, and, looking at Chittenham's white face, she hated herself for saying: "Perhaps it's good news. Perhaps she is recovering her sight."

"I hope so. God knows I hope so!" Chittenham answered.

But it was something very different.

Early that morning, just as it was getting light, they had found Sadie lying on the pavement below her open window—quite dead.

"It must have been an accident," they told him for his comfort. "She must have tried to open the window—the nurse had left her alone for a few minutes—and we think she lost her balance. Last night she was quite cheerful and hopeful, and looking forward to seeing you to-day. We are sure it must have been an accident."

Chittenham made no answer, and presently Bim drew the nurse aside to whisper: "Would she—do you think she would ever have recovered her sight?"

There was a little silence before the answer came.

"The doctors were hopeful—but"—the nurse shook her head—"I don't think Mrs. Chittenham herself ever had any real hope."

Bim walked to the window and looked out. The sun was shining and the air was soft and warm. She closed her own eyes and tried to imagine what Sadie had suffered. To be blind—never to see the sunlight or the flowers, or a beloved face!

She turned and crossed the room to Chittenham. She understood so well what he was feeling, how his heart must be torn with remorse and grief, and yet through it all she knew he must be conscious of a great and overwhelming relief.

She slipped her hand into his.

"At any rate, wherever she is, she can see the sunshine again," she whispered.

There had been no definite plan in Julie's mind when she ran away from London. The strain of the past weeks had told severely upon her, and she was only conscious of a passionate desire to leave everything behind her and try to forget.

Hers was a nature that hated trouble and unhappiness; she had always been care-free until that ill-fated day when she met Giles Chittenham at Lausanne, but now it seemed to her that she could never be happy again.

She did not believe in the adage that it is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all; she was fiercely resentful with fate for havin forced love upon her. She felt like someone who flies from a deadly enemy, conscious all the time that it is a losing race.

The life she had flung herself into in London had brought neither forgetfulness nor pleasure. She hated the people into whose companionship she had been forced; she hated the glare and noise of the nightclubs; she felt sick and ashamed when she woke late on sunny mornings with a blinding headache and a terrible feeling of weariness. In spite of her unhappiness, it was with relief that she left London behind her. She had very little money, but that did not trouble her; the immediate present was everything; she felt like an escaping prisoner as the train slipped out of Victoria Station in the gray early morning.

She had no idea where she meant to go, but she had taken a ticket to Folkestone because it was the first place that occurred to her, and because she had once spent a happy holiday there. A happy holiday—surely that must have been in another lifetime. It seemed an eternity since she had known happiness of any kind.

She leaned back in the carriage and closed her eyes; the swift movement of the train was soothing; it seemed like a kindly friend, assisting her in the desperate flight from life and love and Chittenham and all the tragic happenings of the past few weeks.

It was only at midday when she reached Folkstone that the idea occurred to her to cross over to France. It was only a little journey, but there was something comforting in the knowledge that she could so easily put the width of the sea between herself and the things from which she desired to escape.

She crossed to Boulogne by the midday boat and took a room in a cheap little pension which at any rate had the merit of great cleanliness.

The room looked out over a neat little square where masses of scarlet geraniums flamed in triangular beds, and where old people came to rest on the wooden seats.

There were days when it seemed to her that she was succeeding—days when for a little while she almost forgot to be unhappy, and then a gleam of sunlight across the floor of her little room, or a fading sunset, or a haunting passage of music played on the tinpot piano in the salon downstairs, would give her memory a painful jerk and plunge her back again into a dead and gone happiness.

Then the thought would come crowding into her mind with a sense of panic: "What am I to do with the rest of my life?" She never thought of Schofield—it was too bitter a memory. He had been the rock in her sea of distress to which she had always unconsciously clung, and he had failed her even as everything else had failed her.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Disconcerting vibrations are seen by astrologers in this day's horoscope, which contains much of warning as well as promise for those who read the future in the stars.

While there is an aspect making for vision and foresight it is wise to plan rather than to act while the configuration prevails.

The rule is inimical to the best interests of those concerned with transportation. Railways and motor cars are subject to adverse conditions.

Obstacles of unexpected character may arise to deter or even to frustrate effort under this planetary government. Patience should be cultivated at home as well as in office or shop.

Self control should be exercised in matters great and small today when the women of one's family may appear unreasonable and irritating.

The evening may be an auspicious time for letters of importance, conferences and friendly association.

News of terrific storms in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick may be expected this winter.

Much suffering among the poor in large cities is indicated and there should be early preparation for special relief, the seers announce.

Christmas time this year will be unusually festive, it is prophesied, and trade will be extraordinarily heavy.

Dealers in gems and costly merchandise that appeals to the wealthy will profit greatly, if the stars are rightly read.

Astrologers prognosticate the peak o trade in furs this year when fortunes will be spent for rare pelts.

In the swing of fashion's pendulum backward cosmetics will be relegated to the limbo of false hair and bustles, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is may be subjected to severe losses and other tests of courage in the coming year which, however, promises much that spells happiness.

Children born on this day probably will be restless and fond of adventure. Boys are likely to be rather radical in their views and girls may be extraordinarily independent in nature.

Surveys of the children of the well-to-do, both in America and in England, show that the great majority, in the years from two to six, will not take sufficient food without coaxing.

Uncle Wiggily

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time the four Winds met together in the middle of the forest. They blew around, sending the dead leaves scurrying and bending the trees and bushes.

"Burr-r-r-r!" howled the South Wind, after a while. "It is too cold for me here! I'm going where it's warm!" and off it rushed to the land where it is always summer.

"Whee!" howled the East Wind as it twisted the branches of a green pine tree. "I think I'll blow myself out to the ocean and toss up some high waves!" And away it rushed.

"That leaves only you and me," said the North Wind to the West Wind. "Come on, let's play some tricks!"

"On whom can we play any tricks" asked the West Wind.

The rabbit began to run after it.

"On Uncle Wiggily," howled the North Wind. "He's a jolly old rabbit gentleman. He likes to have tricks played on him."

"But where is he?" asked the West Wind.

"Oh, he will soon be hopping out of his hollow stump bungalow to look for adventures," answered the North Wind.

So the two blew around each other, but Uncle Wiggily did not come out and at last the West Wind said:

"Oh, I am going out to the Great Open Spaces, where I can rush over the prairies and scatter the snow in the Rocky Mountains. I'll be saying good-by!"

"Pooh! What do you know about snow and ice?" howled the North Wind, who came from the land of seals and polar bears. "You should see an iceberg before you talk of snow!"

But the West Wind did not stay to listen to his cold brother. Away he rushed howling with glee to see if he could find a Blizzard to play with. This left the North Wind all alone in the woods. And, after scattering more leaves and bending and twisting the trees and bushes, the rough old chap said:

"I wish Uncle Wiggily would come out so I could tease him. I'd like to play a trick on that rabbit! Whee! I'm a tricky Wind!"

And, after a while, Uncle Wiggily hopped out of his bungalow. Over the fields and through the woods he skipped and the North Wind chased after him, waiting a chance to play a trick.

Then, pretty soon, the Bob Cat, who was always on the watch to catch a rabbit saw Uncle Wiggily, and softly growled:

"Now, I'll sneak after that bunny uncle and take some nibbles off his ears. I'm very hungry for nibbles today."

So the Bob Cat chased after Uncle Wiggily and the North Wind followed, blowing this way and that way.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the North Wind. "I can play two tricks now—one on Uncle Wiggily and one on the Bob Cat."

But it soon began to look as if there would be left only the Bob Cat on whom to play a trick. For the Bad Chap was chasing close after Uncle Wiggily and would soon catch him. At last the rabbit heard the Bob Cat slithering along over the snow behind him and, looking back, Uncle Wiggily shouted:

"Oh, dear Now I must hop fast. I must hop very fast, indeed, to get away from this Bad Chap. But how can I hop fast when my rheumatism hurts me so? It can't be done! I guess this is the end of me!"

Then the North Wind, hearing this, knew the time had come to play a trick on Uncle Wiggily.

"But it will be a trick that will help him and save him from the Bob Cat," howled the North Wind. Then, puffing out his cheeks, the North Wind blew Uncle Wiggily's tall silk hat off his head. And as it was a new hat and one he did not want to lose the rabbit gentleman, forgetting all about his rheumatism, began to run after it so hard and fast that soon he was away far off ahead of the Bob Cat. Faster and faster the North Wind blew the hat and faster and faster Uncle Wiggily ran after it, for the hat rolled along like a hoop.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the North Wind. "That was a good trick. Nothing will make a rabbit gentleman run faster than when he is chasing his hat. Not even to get away from a Bad chap would Uncle Wiggily have run as fast as he did to get his hat. Ha! Ha! A good trick!"

And so it was, for when at last the bunny caught his hat he was so far ahead and away from the Bob Cat that the Bad Chap gave up the race.

"My! What a run! But I think my rheumatism is better!" said the bunny as he put the hat on his head. And if the lump of coal will turn into a snowball when the shovel throws it into the fire I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the climbing vine.

OLD HOME WEEK PLANS ARE MADE

Publicity Committee Discussed Its Campaign to Bring Back Former Residents.

Under the chairmanship of R. M. Glover, the Old Home Week publicity committee met in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon to formulate plans for the campaign. There were present, Mayor Denne, C. D. Cook, E. H. Bartlett, J. R. Heron and the secretary, F. E. Dobbin.

Key men will be sought in the principal cities of Canada and the United States, with a view to organizing associations in these places to boost the Old Home Week. An appeal is being made locally for names of persons who were born here or lived in the city or county. These names will be tabulated, and the committee will write invitations.

The committee's telephone number will be 2436, after Wednesday.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE GIFT OF TEARS

Who tells me that tears are vain?
Drenching the heart like rain,
Aye, as the rain that passes
Over the troubled grasses,
Leaving them wet with dew,
Yet leaving a world made new.

Thank God for the joyous years,
But heaven be thanked for tears,
Though they be born of sorrow,
Bringing a bright tomorrow,
On many a barren slope
Waking some flow'r of hope.

Oft to our living clings
The dust of so many things—
Pleasures we follow blindly,
Thoughts that we think unkindly;
Then comes a darker day
Washing life's dust away.

Then comes the gentle rain,
Cleansing the heart again,
Leaving the vision clearer,
Bringing the blue sky nearer;
Thank God for the joyous years,
But more for the gift of tears.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Recent activity in Newbec shares has provoked comment on the street, but officials are reticent as regards giving news. The shaft is said to be beyond 100 feet. The first station is to be installed at 125 feet. An interesting feature, it is stated, is the fact that the formation is changing from Diabase into Keewatin. On the company's Lartic property, it is stated also, the first level in the shaft was installed and sinking has now been resumed.

Last word on Murphy was that they had crosscut from the 100-foot level of the new shaft and proven the vein to be over 50 feet wide at this point. This width contained two commercial sections of ore, one 30 feet and the other 10 feet in width. Drifting was started then and to date several rounds have been taken out with the ore holding to the same uniform good grade. In the meantime a diamond drill hole was spotted some 250 away in the direction in which the drift was proceeding. The Financial News Bureau is now informed officially that this drill has cut into ore of satisfactory grade and dimensions. Other details are not available as yet. This all means that at the 100-foot level of the new shaft the Murphy has a shoot of ore over 50 feet wide and over 250 feet long as indicated to date. Drifting operations will rapidly prove or disprove these dimensions. Murphy his a good portion of the camp's main break. The Ritchie Gold adjoining has over 2,600 feet of this break also. The two portions give a huge ore zone if they are working together, and it may be remembered that many very much stranger things have happened.

The following review of the Lake Shore operations comes from Kirkland Lake. The present daily tonnage is said to be 940 and the grade $20. An interesting statement was made to the effect that increased production is looked for in the near future, although contrary to the president's report at the annual meeting.

A two-ton hoist capable of operating to 2,000 feet has been purchased for the Mining Corporation's Murray property, adjoining the Noranda, according to a wire from Rouyn.

It is understood that arrangements have been made for offering 100,000 shares of the treasury stock of McMillan Gold Mines through a Toronto brokerage house to assist in financing a campaign of exploration and development work preparatory to bringing the mine into production. The stock is offered on the unlisted market at prices ranging from ninety cents to one dollar, with the market rather "flat." At the present time the company's authorized capital consists of 3,000,000 shares with approximately 1,800,000 issued. When all presently contemplated financing has been completed it is understood that some 1,100,000 shares will remain in the treasury. About 75 per cent. of the issued stock is held in the United States, with the balance held chiefly in Sudbury. Although the pool controlling 92 per cent. of the stock has been released so far as Ontario shareholders are concerned, it is understood that the United States stockholders have renewed the pool on their shares for another year. The shares are listed on the Standard Mining Exchange, but have not yet been called for trading. This move as expected immediately following the anticipated stock offering.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Noranda.

A remarkable resemblance has characterized several recent bear reports on Noranda. These destructive reports undoubtedly eminate from one source and have all the earmarks of an insidious well thought out plan to shake out the smaller shareholders. We can say that any statements that Noranda's gold values are low are ridiculous. Our field man in Rouyn reports that just recently Noranda cut 50 feet of ore on the 975 that assayed $35 a ton in gold alone and that an entirely new ore body has been opened up east of No. 3 shaft. We have no hesitation in advising our clients to retain their holdings in Noranda as we feel that Noranda is, at its present price, the most outstanding buy on the mining board, and that in the next three or four months Noranda should sell considerably higher.

Kirkland Gold Belt.

A diamond drill contract for 3,000 feet has been let by the Kirkland Gold Belt. Drilling is now under way on their property in the township of Lebel, and it is understood will take the form of a series of holes ranging from 150 to 300 feet in depth. In addition to diamond drilling, a force of 30 men is employed doing surface exploration work, and it is also intended to arrange for installation of a mining plant, in preparation for sinking a three compartment shaft. The finances of the company are believed to be in good shape, and 50 p.c. of the stock is still in the treasury.

Thompson Cadillac.

According to a report from Amos the shaft on this property is now down to 375 feet and will be continued to the 600 foot level with stations at 450 and 600 feet, when further lateral work will be started.

Windfall Rouyn.

We understand from a very reliable source that the treasury of this company is not in very good shape. Our informant advises that they only have $10,000 cash together with about 200,000 shares of stock.

Grover Daly.

We are informed from Rouyn this morning that all operations on the Grover Daly property have been suspended due to lack of finances.

Amulet.

The strength being maintained in Amulet is probably attributable to the results from the last vertical drill hole in the "C" orebody. This was originally thought to have a depth of only 25 feet but the last hole disclosed a depth of 60 feet. The copper content has been found such that it will probably have a greater value in the ultimate outcome than the zinc. The results obtained from the 20-ton test shipment from "B" and "C" bodies established the high grade character of Amulet's ore, even alowing for a very low zinc price.

Grandview

The shares of Grandview Mining Company were approved for listing last Friday by the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000 made up of 3,000,000 shares of 50c par value. The property is located in the extreme northeast corner of the State of Washington and has been developed to the production stage. A small test mill has been working for some time with favorable results, and now a 250 ton concentrator is nearing completion. This is the first unit of projected 1,000 ton mill. It is estimated that this mine contains some 2,000,000 tons of ore averaging better than $10 in value. As a good deal of the ore can be mined by the glory hole method, mining and milling costs should be low.

Canadian Northern Mining Company

The shares of this company were also recently accepted for listing on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. This company was formed by Beaver Consolidated which stock will now be taken off the board, and provision made for the substitution of 3,000,000 shares of Canadian Northern, which is capitalized at 5,000,000 shares, to be exchanged on a share for share basis for Beaver Consolidated.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Declines Pretty General in New York List.

Brokerage advices on the New York Stock Market over the week-end were generally of a bearish character, larger houses advising clients to cut down commitments, and keep their accounts in a very liquid state. There is no doubt that the position of the market has been considerably overextended.

The market yesterday morning ed general declines at the opening, which have in many cases been extended since, particularly in those issues which had been most active and made the largest gains. The market has continued orderly, however, with no evidence of nervousness.

Business yesterday morning was small as compared with Saturday, when in the first half-hour the volume was 1,300,000 shares against this; sales in the first hour yesterday were 800,000 shares. Money was firm at 8 per cent., but evidently this is only a temporary condition and will be corrected within a few days, when monthly settlements are out of the way.

British Company to Build $1,000,000 Theatre in Toronto.

Toronto is to have a million-dollar theatre and office building. The site is said to be on Yonge Street, north of Dundas. The theatre will be the first of a Canadian chain of British picture playhouses and will mark the first step of the British film industry gaining a foothold in Canada. The plans are yet incomplete.

Introduction of these all-British theatres in the Dominion is being sponsored by the Gaumont British Film Co., of London, England. They are capitalized at $100,000,000, and will have a chain of 350 theatres throughout the British possessions, which will have completely circled the Empire when the theatre links in Toronto and Canada will have been completed.

DOMINION SECRETARY.

Announcement is made by the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association Friday of the appointment of G. S. Hougham as Dominion secretary.

FARMERS' COMPANY DECLARES DIVIDEND

Trading Profits From All Departments For Year Were $59,821.

TORONTO, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press.)— The annual meeting of the United Farmers of Ontario opened here to-day with reports read from the various departments and a discussion of operation of the Ontario wheat pool during its first year.

H. B. Clemes, general manager of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company stated that trading profits from all departments were $59,821, or ¾ p.c. on capital. Directors had declared a dividend of 50 cents a share.

TOWAGMAC.

We are informed by our field man in Rouyn that Aldermac have now encountered the high grade body by diamond drilling at the 1125 foot level that was cut by the diamond drill last year and which they were unable to locate through lateral work this summer due to deflection of the drill hole, which gave a wrong perspective. From present appearances this would appear to be the same body which is now being worked on the 500 foot level. Should further work prove this theory, the whole picture at Aldermac will be changed matrially. At any rate the stock is being accumulated by strong interests and we believe it to be a speculation of merit.

HOLLINGER.

A special general meeting of the shareholders of Hollinger is called for December 12 in Montreal to consider and if approved, to confirm a bylaw passed last month by the directors, which will enable the company to assume trust powers. Hollinger enjoys a cash surplus of something like $13,000,000, and with the highly efficient personnel of the Hollinger directorate it is bliewd a good part of this surplus could be utilized to much better advantage to Hollinger's shareholders.

PEND OREILLE.

The recent sharp advance in the shares of Pend Oreille may be attributed to an official report recently issued by the president, Mr. Larsen. He is reported to have said that the diamond drilling program this summer has disclosed sufficient ore to warrant the construction of a large concentrating plant and an electrlytic zinc smelter

This picture of the effect of the Great Britain storm shows a whippet tank righting a boat which turned over. Two bodies were found underneath it.

Eight boats are loading grain and ten are reported as coming up light. Two coal boats are at the Fort William dock and five others are enroute with coal.

Following is yesterday's report on vessel movements:

Wheat Harvest Reports Affects Chicago Values

CHICAGO, December 4. Canadian Press. — Influenced by reports that the harvest is extending under favorable conditions both in Aregntina and Australia, wheat values here underwent an early set back to-day. Liverpool advised that Argentina is offering wheat freely to Europe at lower prices. Opening 1-8 to 1-4 off to 1-8 to 1-4 up, Chicago wheat later suffered declines all around. Corn was also easier starting at 3-8 to 1-8 advance, and then showing a general sag. Oats were firm.

Chicago: Wheat, December 116 1-2; March 120 5-8; corn, December, 85 1-4; March, 88 1-8; oats, December 46 1-8; March 48 3-8.

Shredded Wheat Features Dull Trading Session

TORONTO, Dec. 4 (Canadian Press)—Trading was dull on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Shredded Wheat featured the market in a number of transactions and gained 2½ points to 75¼. Canadian Car and Foundry, with a high for the morning session of 89¼, dropped at noon at 87 for a net gain of 7 over yesterday's close.

American Sales Book was down 3 at 117, and B. C. Power a half at 57, while Brazilian was up a half at 74. Canadian Dredge a half at 66, and Cockshutt ¼ at 35. Consumers' Gas gained 1 to 185, Hiram Walker ¼ to 80¼, Maple Leaf 1 to 150, Page-Hersey 2¼ to 119¼, and Photo Engravers 2 to 36. Bank of Montreal gained 3 to 405, and Commerce 1 to 320, while Bank of Toronto dropped 1 to 288. Oils were steady, Service Station gained 3 to 53, McColl-Frontenac 1¼ to 34¼, Beacon Oily 1¼ to 24, while Imperial Oil and Super Petroleum were unchanged.

HIGHWAYS OPEN.

Rain Melts Snow, Leaving Traffic Clear On Public Roads.

Despite the heavy snowstorm which fell during Monday morning and part of the afternoon, making the highways increasingly difficult of travel, the rains of last night were even more effective and as a result, motorists who came through from Toronto early this morning had little trouble. No snow whatever was encountered until several miles north of Bailieboro, and at no time was the pavement covered.

NOTED HORSEMAN.

Above is a photograph of T. P. Phelan, well known horseman and president of the Canadian Railway News Co., who is 77 years of age on Saturday. Mr. Phelan as a boy ran away from home to join a circus, and to-day is one of the big business figures of the Dominion. He has also won more steeplechases with his horses than any man in America.

STRENGTH and VALUE UNITED

SURVEY business and social life the world over and you will find that they commenced, and have continued for many centuries, because man has sought to wrest wealth from nature . . . and to preserve part of this wealth for further use.

Banks, by popular choice, are the principal guardians of the liquid wealth of the public—the savings that result from productive effort. Upon them rests the responsibility of safe-guarding the hard-won dollars of those who labour and save.

But safe-guarding alone is not sufficient. For if progress is to continue, the farmer who reaps must sow again. The factory owner who manufactures goods must have new materials to keep his employees and machines busy. And these, as well as most other industrious people, draw upon the accumulated savings held by banks. So, Canada, because these principles of co-operative saving and lending have been woven into her economic life, continues to add to her wealth and prestige.

Naturally, every dollar that swells this national fund of working capital is welcomed by an institution such as The Canadian Bank of Commerce, the custodian of many millions of dollars of savings which are turned back into productive channels at about 800 points in Canada.

SAMUEL PEPYS AND HIS TIMES DESCRIBED TO CANADIAN CLUB

Rev. Provost Cosgrave Delivers Interesting Address To Women.

A GREAT CHURCHMAN.

When James Left England the Great Politician Retired Into Private Life.

The curious fate of a man who was acclaimed by his generation as one of the most outstanding business men in England and one of the makers of her superb navy and then, over a century later, was discovered to be a man of quite different calibre, "an extraordinarily mean man, was unfolded yesterday in a speech to the members of the Women's Canadian Club, by the Rev. Provost Cosgrave of Trinity College, Toronto, speaking on "Samuel Pepys and His Times."

To relieve the feelings which had accumulated during a day spent possibly in saying things he didn't mean, Samuel Pepys formed the habit of sitting down every night before going to bed and writing, in a strangely jumbled cypher which was composed of several different languages, the innermost thoughts of his mind.

Samuel Pepys was a prominent figure in English public life from the years 1659 to 1689, from the time of the Restoration to the Revolution. On the return of King Charles the Second to England, he was made Clerk of the Acts and he, being a man who was ignorant of the simplest rudiments of business, was compelled to get up at four o'clock in the morning, as he relates, and learn the multiplication table. Despite his ignorance, however, he applied himself so assiduously to the study of financial matters that he became one of the most renowned men of business in all England and later, when appointed as Secretary to the Admiralty, one of the best officials of that branch of public service.

On one occasion, when the Dutch fleet was allowed to sail up the Medway and all England was up in arms over the occurrence, the Admiralty officials were called to the House of Commons to explain matters. Mr. Pepys, in a three-hour defence of their stand, made such an excellent case for the Admiralty that they escaped without a reprimand.

Tribute to Pepys.

John Evelyn, a famous diarist of Pepys' time, and a friend of the latter, spoke of Pepys, at the time of his death in 1703, as "a very worthy, industrious and curious person."

When James Second went out of England, Pepys would serve no more and he retired to the obscurity of private life, taking with him the fine reputation referred to and living for many years to be known as a man of hospitable, generous inclinations, skilled in music and the possessor of a very fine library.

It is thought that he intended to destroy his secret diary before his death but he neglected to do so. For nine and a half years, before his eyesight became so bad that he had to give up the practice, he had jotted down nightly, in cypher, his innermost thoughts and feelings. Along with his collection of books, this diary went to his nephew, John Jackson, with a rider that at Jackson's death, they should go to either of two colleges, Morgan or Trinity, the volumes to revert to the second holder if the first failed to keep them in proper condition.'

In 1724, the books came to Morgan College and there they lay for a hundred years. In 1818, John Evelyn's diary was published and this suggested to the Master of Morgan College that something should be done with Pepys' diary. He directed an undergraduate named Smith to see what could be done in decyphering the volume. For six years, Smith labored over the jumbled-up cypher and claimed that he ruined his eyesight at the task. If he had but known it at the time, the key lay in a companion volume on the same shelf, where Pepys had jotted down in the identical cypher the relation of an account given to him by King Charles the Second of the latter's escape after the Battle of Worcester.

And the diary revealed, as Provost Cosgrave put it, "a man very different in type from the respected Admiralty official, a man extraordinarily mean in many ways and yet withal, a great man."

Reveals Transactions.

In the diary, Pepys revealed the small transactions in the graft of that corrupt age with which he increased his monetary wealth, and the manner in which he differentiated in his own mind between accepting bribes before the awarding of a contract and taking payments later. It also spoke in terms of extraordinary frankness of the writer's own inclinations, his quarrels with his wife and the manner in which she and his father-in-law aroused his wrath on one particular occasion when they almost failed to locate the hiding-place of some of his gold, hidden in a garden because of the inadequate banking facilities of that day.

The speaker referred to the extraordinary jumble of important matters and trivial details, as related in the diary. He instanced a visit made by Pepys to Charing Cross, "to see Major General Harrison (one of the slayers of Charles the First) hanged, drawn and quartered, which was done there, he looking as cheerful as a man could do under such conditions." When the people were shown the heart of the executed man, after his cutting down, they greeted the sight with "great shouts of joy." Then Mr. Pepys took several of his friends to a tavern, and had an oytser supper, after which he went home and had a quarrel with his wife over her untidiness, kicking over a sewing basket of hers, which lay in his way. These events are recorded with identical feeling on the same day.

Good Churchman.

Mr. Pepys was a great churchman. He had an admiration for a pretty woman, which caused some trouble between himself and Mrs. Pepys. "It is a great matter for regret that Mrs. Pepys did not keep a diary," remarked the speaker, drily.

On one occasion he journeyed to church and there sat near a damsel who enchained his attention. Upon edging up closer to her the resourceful maiden produced a hatpin with which she threatened the famous diarist, did he come closer, so Mr. Pepys wisely refrained.

Provost Cosgrave spoke of the extraordinary interest and fascination of this book, and closed with some lines written by the late Austin Dobson, famous poet of England, speaking of "the delightful, vivid, babbling, free hodge-podge of daily topics so packed with poor humanity," known as "Mr. Pepys: His Journal."

A vote of thanks for a very enjoyable address was presetned to Provost Cosgrave, by Mrs. J. F. Allan, who presided at the meeting, and who told the ladies, at the conclusion of the address, that Mrs. Jessie Alexander Roberts of Toronto, the speaker at the last meeting of the Club, was partially recovered from the effects of a severe attack of influnza, from which she had been convalescing on the occasion of her visit here.

RESIGNS FROM COUNCIL.

LT.COL. C. H. ACKERMAN

whose resignation, which was sent in at the October meeting of the City Council, was accepted by the aldermen last night.

COLLEGIATE NOTES

Yesterday morning Prof. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College, addressed the student body. Professor Cosgrave came from Dublin to Toronto, some years ago.

Prof. Cosgrave opened his speech by thanking Mr. Kenner for giving him such a great opportunity to speak to a section of younger Canada. He said that in years to come those present will be gone and other pupils will be occupying the same seats. So while there, the best and most valuable use ought to be made of the students' time.

He then gave a short but worthy experience which he encountered. It was in the year 1910, when the Hamilton Tigers were playing the University of Toronto squad in a game of football.

Professor Cosgrave and the Toronto University coach were very friendly while at the college. He said that the coach, who was also a professor, would hang his cloak in his room. Anyhow the Toronto University coach drew the boys together and said "Fellows, if you want to win and have the League championship, you must score in the first quarter."

Often when Prof. Cosgrave and the coach were together the coach would say: "If the boys wish to win they must score in the first quarter." Before the game this thought was always on the coach's mind.

Prof. Cosgrave mentioned that the game was called and the Toronto boys played hard under the former thought and scored in the first quarter.

"So, pupils, I say to make a success in this world you must make a good start. It is what you do here in this college that counts.

He also mentioned that everyone is playing a sort of game, and a man once said: "Life is like a game of chess, and our opponent is the Devil. The Devil is playing for our soul."

Prof. Cosgrave said that life might be like a game of chess, being one move after another, but our opponent is not the Devil, but a beautiful angel.

He closed his very appropriate address by saying that in the near future some of the pupils in the P.C.I. will some time come to Toronto University and enroll. If they enrolled at Trinity College he assured them of a good education to start them on the adventurous game of life.

Mr. Kenner thanked Professor Cosgrave for speaking at the P. C. I.

An international conference on civil aeronautics to be held in Washington in December will receive great attention. Orville Wright and Charles A. Lindbergh will be prominent.

QUEEN MARY PRESIDES AT CEREMONIES

NEW VARIETIES IN BIG DEMAND

Nearly 25,000 Bushels of Garnet and Reward Wheat Will Be Issued.

$3.00 PER BUSHEL.

Nearly 25,000 bushels of seed wheat of the Garnet and Reward varieties will be provided farmers by the Department of Agriculture this year. The demand is stated by officials to be greater than the supply.

The new varieties were developed by L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist, at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa. The grain ripens from seven to ten days earlier than other varieties and accordingly escapes frost which often ruins other varieties, it has been found. From the face that rust does not attack ripe grain this meace is also frequently avoided, officials of the department point out. The yield is stated to be equal to that of the Marquis wheat, formerly regarded as the best variety.

Last year's sale of seed grain amounted to approximately 3,000 bushels. So satisfactory have results been that this year's production at the Experimental Farm will not nearly meet the demand. It is sold to the farmer at $3 a bushel.

Garnet and Reward wheat completely escaped frosts which occurred in Manitoba and Saskatchewan recently according to reports received by Dr. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

PRIZES ARE WON BY CAMPBELLFORD

District Well Represented Among Expert Cheese Makers of Central Ontario.

A considerable number of cheesemakers and dairymen from the Central Ontario District attended a banquet held by the United Dairymen Co-operative Ltd., in Kingston Thursday of last week. Among those present from Peterborough was W. R. Shields, the treasurer of the company. This is the big company which has revolutionized the sytsem of selling cheese throughout Central Ontario during the last eight years. During the past two years practically all the cheese factories in the Campbellford district sold their cheese through the United Dairymen Co-operative. This was because the Co-operative Company last year opened a cold storage warehouse in Campbellford where the cheese was stored, weighed and graded before sale.

This year the Co-operative Company opened a new warehouse in Kingston in order to give the Kingston factories similar service as Campbellford Prizes were offered to the cheese factories in the Kingston and Campbellford districts which made the highest average score on their cheese for the season. These prizes were practically all won by the Campbellford district factories and were presented at the banquet last Thursday. Ray Brown, of Stanwood factory, was the principal winner. James Finnegan, of Marmora, was second and James Wallace, of Prince of Wales factory, Seymour township, was third. Roy Brown, in taking first prize, wins for the year the J. A. Mills Trophy.

About 80 delegates were at the banquet, representing about 35 cheese factories. There was a delegate and a cheese maker from each factory. The men were very much in favour of the warehouse as it had given excellent satisfaction. Over 34,000 boxes of cheese were handled, averaging 86 pounds to the box. In the whole of Eastern Ontario 200,000 boxes were handled. Everybody complimetned United Dairymen Co-operative on the splendid way the cheese had been handled. This fall the United Dairymen Co-operative received a special invitation to open a warehouse at Napanee next spring.

Several interesting speeches were given by the different dairy instructors. The principal speaker was L. A. Zufelt, superintendent of the Dairy School at Kingston, who gave an instructive speech on the methods of cheese making as well as useful and instructive facts about the trade.

5TH TROOP AND PACK.

The 5th Peterborough Troop and Pack held a concert and moving picture show on Friday night last in aid of their funds. The chair was taken by the past president of the Boy Scouts' Association, Mr. J. John.

The concert opened with an interrupted recitation by Scout C. Burns and Cub Ralph Flitton. The Wolf Cubs then gave the Cubs A.B.C. and the Grand Howls, which is a welcome yell. Griffin Young then sang "The Children's Home," which was very nice. Mr. Fred L. Roy then gave his very interesting pictures of his "Tour Through the Hudson Bay." He showed the trapping of moose and other animals, which was very interesting for the Scouts and Cubs, many of whom told the Scoutmaster that the next time Mr. Roy goes on a tour they hoped he would let them accompany him. Mr. Roy also showed two fine comedies, which were very much enjoyed.

The Troop then presented Mr. John with a Scout supporters' pin. The pin was presented by Second Donald Ross as a token of appreciation for his services to the Troop and Pack. Mr. J. A. McKone, the president of the Boy Scouts' Association, then appeared in the hall and was asked to accompany Mr. John on the platform. Spencer Hope and Jack Smith then gave a vaudeville sketch, "As Green as Grass," which was very much enjoyed. Scout V. Howard gave a pianoforte solo. The Scouts then gave the sketch, "Dr. Dobbs' Assistant." Dr. Dobbs showed how to cure old maids, fat men, and a quick way of taking out your appendix.

The characters in "Dr. Dobbs' Assistant" were:

Dr. Dobbs—P.L. R. Walsh.
Dr. Dobbs' Assistant—Scout D. Mackay.
Hirman Skinner—P.L. J. Gibson.
The Jew—P.L. Bill Barry.
Old Maid—Scout L. Galley.
The Dutchman—Scout L. Wells.

The treat of the evening was still to come, a duet by Scout Barclay McKone and Sixer Jack McKone on the clarionet and violin respectively. Mrs. McKone played the accompaniment. Much applause was given them. "The Womanless Wedding" then took place and the two very handsome young people were united as one, which one, the dear only knows. The characters were: Bride, Scout V. Howard; Groom Scout F. Williams; Bridesmaids, Cub Jack Ackerman and Scout Bill McPherson; Best Men, Scout F. Dyer and Cub Donald Ross; Flower Girls, Scout L. Barry, B. Scott and K. Hughes. The Rev. J. W. H. T. Slugger, L.G., B.A.D., married the 'andsome young couple. Mrs. McKone played the Wedding March as the poor man was led to the slaughter.

Mr. John then presented the Scout hockey cup to the Troop. The cup, which is a very beautiful one, was given by Mr. John for the Scout Hockey League. The cup is known as the "John Cup." The Scouts wish to thank Mr. John for the great interest he has taken in the Scouts.

The 5th Troop Court of Honor wish to thank Miss Isabel Mackay for her kindness in printing some of the programs, also Mr. R. Ross and Mr. J. A. McKone for their kindness in printing some programs, and also the different parts of the sketches. The Scoutmaster, Mr. Harry Wilks, and the Cubmaster, A. Hope, appreciate very much what has been done by those who helped to make the concert a success. To Mr. Fred L. Roy the Troop and Pack wish to thank very much for his kindness in coming and showing his very interesting pictures.

British Girl Who Was Shot By Dry Agents Has Entered Action For 50,000 Damages

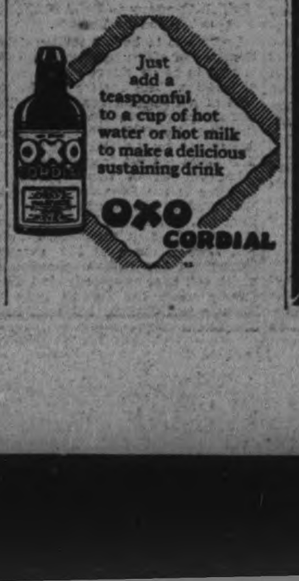
ALYRIA, O., December 4 — Suit for $50,000 damages will be filed by Miss Betty Heywood, twenty-one-year-old British subject, of this city, against Louis Cicco, former dry raider, and his associates, Miss Heywood announced at her home here.

On the night of September 26 Cicco, while patrolling a highway bridge for rum-running automobiles, fired several shots at a car in which Miss Heywood was a passenger. One of them struck her, inflicting a serious wound.

Cicco was convicted of assault and battery and fined $5.00, and costs.

Major Horatio F. Chisholm, British Vice-Consul at Cleveland, said:

"I do not mean to criticize, but I cannot help being amused. This $5.00 fine is what is known as exemplary justice, I take it."



INSULIN UNITS SHOW INCREASE

THESE SIMPLE RULES MAKE TEETHING EASY

Be careful of Baby's diet during teething. Do not overfeed him. Watch his stomach and bowels and at first sign of indigestion, gas or constipation, give him a few drops of harmless, pleasant-tasting Fletcher's Castoria. These simple rules are making teething easy on millions of babies—and mothers, too. For over thirty years Castoria has been the trusted standby of mothers everywhere. It soothes wakeful, cross babies to sleep quickly and easily—and it's purely-vegetable so you can give it as often as needed. It does the work of castor oil better and more gently. For your protection, the bottle of genuine Castoria always bears the Fletcher signature.

'twas the day before Christmas

CHRISTMAS — the happiest, friendliest, kindliest day of all the year. Christmas morn when we all arise fresh and expectant; thrilled and joyful with tokens of love and thoughtfulness others have bestowed upon us.

Did we say "all"? Well, all but those fagged workers in the shops who have had to endure the mad rush, the long, weary hours induced by "last-minute" shoppers. Did we say "thoughtful?" Well, thoughtful of all but them.

Why not shop early this year and be thoughtful of all? The thoughtful will realize that early shopping means a more significant Christmas to those who give; to those who receive—and those who serve.

PRESERVATION OF GAME FISH

the jurisdiction of the Department of Game and Fisheries to take action. The Department of Public Health should be notified of such pollutions. A complaint sent to them will soon bring a satisfactory adjustment. The fourth cause enlarged upon was selective fishing. The speaker showed very clearly what harmful results came from that class of fishing. Another point emphasized in the closing of a very fine address was this: We should not expect any body of water to do what it is not fitted for.

Mr. Jones was again called upon for a selection, which was much enjoyed, after which G. S. Bell outlined the history of the Toronto Anglers' Association, founded four years ago. He remarked that the depletion of the waters in the States through their deforestation was responsible for thousands of Americans coming over to Ontario to fish. Mr. Bell told how his association had aked the Government to appoint a special committee to get accurate knowledge upon which to base a sound policy. He said that the Toronto Anglers carried their ideas further last year in arranging a convention of anglers from 28 such like organizations all over the province.

Mr. Julian again speaking, asked that a representative be sent from Marmora to the meeting being held by the association on January 9.

Professor Harkness, with the aid of slides, gave another interesting talk on the habits of fish and their food supply.

Mr. Baker was then called upon for another song, after which a vote of thanks was accorded the speakers and those contributing to the musical program.

TOWN COUNCIL WILL IMPROVE

promised Grant Anderson $4.00 to change the pipe in the Trent Valley cheese factory to a larger one to take care of the water from the street which was flooding portions of the factory floor during heavy rain storms. Anderson had agreed to accept the offer, and the council agreed to pay the money.

When the hastily collected lights had been placed around the table and the councillors once more in their places, J. J. Sullivan moved that the firm of James Proctor and Redfern, be instructed to proceed with the installation of the chlorinator. Councillor W. J. Abernethy seconded the motion and the vote was taken. The mayor declared the motion carried, but Deputy-reeve Davidson would not be easily defeated, he demanded that the yeas and nays be taken. The result of the second vote was the same as the first. There were only two opposed, Deputy-reeve Davidson and Councillor Wiggins.

The next communication was from the minister of public health at Toronto, and stated that a mandatory order had been issued for the installation of a chlorinator in Campbellford and the order was enclosed. Until the instructions contained in the order had been complied with, the department would not authorize the extension of the water system of the town. This matter had already been taken care of by the former motion

The official report of the clerk regarding the petition for the extension of the sewer and water main on Saskatoon Avenue, was read. The petition was sufficient, but the matter will be left in the hands of the council of 1929 since it is too late in the season to begin new work along this line. Just at this point, the light came on again and the by-law to authorize the mayor and treasurer to borrow $10,000 from the Canadian Bank of Commerce, was presented by Reeve Bygott. The rate of interest will be six percent.

Councillor Stone reported that there had been several cases of charity brought to his attention and he outlined the action he had taken. His work was approved by the council. The mayor broached the subject of a bonus for the town clerk and on motion of deputy reeve Davidson and J. J. O'Sullivan, the unanimous vote of the council set the figure at one hundred dollars. J. M. Bygott, Reeve read a copy of the letter he had written by authority of the council, to a firm pressed a desire to locate in Canada in the United States which had ex- The information and other matter of the letter was approved by the council.

At nine-thirty-five the council adjourned after passing the usual monthly list of accounts.

HELD BY POLICE AFTER ACCIDENT

Campbellford Resident Implicated When Automobile Strikes Elderly Man.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Following a motor accident in Trenton on Sunday evening, Harold Smith of this town is being held by the Trenton police. According to information received here, Smith was driving along a street in Trenton when an elderly man stepped into the street and was struck by the fender of Smith's car. The man was knocked down and was picked up and taken to a doctor's office. An officer found that Smith's brakes were not in proper order and he was ordered to pay a fine. It was for this purpose that he went to Trenton yesterday. The condition of the man who had been knocked down was considered serious and the youth was held by the police. Bail was set at two thousand dollars, and late last night efforts were being made to secure bondsmen.

CLASSES HOLD SOCIAL EVENING

Ladies Present a One-Act Comedy, Entitled "A Grecian Band."

COMMUNITY SINGING

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 4.—The Men's Bible Class, of which Mrs. (Dr.) Rae is the teacher, and the Boneka Class, which is taught by Mrs. (Rev.) W. W. Jones, held a delightful social evening in the Sunday School room of the United Church on Friday, November 30.

L. W. Smith acted as chairman, explaining that the member of the class assigned to this position, W. O'Brian, was unavoidably absent on account of illness.

The atmosphere of friendliness and good will which pervaded the evening throughout bore ready tetimony to the popularity of the hosts and hostesses, who last season sponsored a similar happy social gathering.

Community singing of hymns, with the church organist, Miss Estelle Hetherington at the piano, fittingly opened the program, a brief prayer by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, being also in keeping since the event was under distinctly religious auspices.

There were over thirty men on the platform for the opening chorus, "Song of the Rolling Main", by the members of Mrs. Rae's class, Mrs. Jones being the accompanist; as an encore they sang, "Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching", each man whistling the air lustily as they returned to the platform.

A violin duet, for which an encore was demanded, was given by John and Wilfrid Lunn, Mrs. Lunn accompanying them on the piano, and following this was a reading, "The Slave that Saved Saint Michael's", by J. H. George, the encore being, "Another Man."

One-Act Comedy.

Miss Francis Jones played a piano solo, "Dancing Waves", and responded to the demand for an encore, and the chairman announced the next number by members of the Boneka Class, a one-act comedy, "A Grecian Band", the cast being:

Mrs. Field, a matron of forty—Mrs. L. W. Smith.

Kitty Field, aged 18—Mrs. Wynne.

Bessie Field, aged 12—Mrs. Jessup.

Susy Follehig, aged 18 — Mrs. George Fallis.

Jenny Sand., aged 17—Mrs. Millard Lang.

Norah, the maid — Mrs. David Lunn.

The play was staged in Mrs. Field's sitting-room, the old-fashioned furniture, as well as the old time costumes worn by the various characters being features that were almost as much enjoyed by the audience as the humorous story unfolded during the progress of the comedy, the 'ridiculous mystification' as Aunt Debby called the situation, being particularly funny at it reached its climax.

Other numbers on the program were: Violin solo by Charles Rusk; a reading, "Just Saw Wood" by L. W. Smith; a quartette, "There's a Rainbow in the Cloud for You" by Mrs. Irwin Hatherly, Mrs. J. Lunn, Mrs. Jessup, and Mrs. George; a chorus, 'She's the Daughter of Mother Machree,' by the men's class. The warm applause accorded by the audience to the several selections, and the insistent demand for an encore in each case, showed plainly that the program throughout met with popular approval. An address by the pastor, appreciative of the two organizations sponsoring the evening, and mentioning particularly the fine work being accomplished in their Sunday sessions, and the faithful service rendered by their respective teachers, was given during a brief intermission while the stage was being made ready for the play.

Refreshments were served at the close, and the opinion was quite generally expressed that no more enjoyable occasion had been held in connection with the church than the one just brought to a happy conclusion. The proceeds were approximately $30 though there was no admission charge, a silver collection being received at the doors.

CHURCH HOLDS BASKET SOCIAL

Impromptu Program Was Arranged When Party Could Not Come.

$59 RECEIVED

(Examiner Correspondence)

HALL'S BRIDGE, Dec. 4.—A basket social was held at the Loyal True Blue Hall, Hall's Bridge, on Friday evening. The social was held under the auspices of St. Matthew's Anglican Church and the proceeds were to be used for the shingling of the church.

There was one disappointment during the evening however. It was expected that a concert party consisting of talent from Peterborough would present a program, but owing to the sleet storm which raged all afternoon, those who were to drive the cars to Hall's Bridge, did not care to start out with such hazards as snow and ice-coated windshields prevalent.

An impromptu program was quickly arranged, which began with community singing. Miss Sutton, teacher at the Lakehurst school, gave a humorous recitation entitled "The Kindergarten Tot" and other numbers on the program were: Song, Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly; reading, Rev Mr. Hewsten, pastor of the United Church, Lakehurst; humorous recitation, "And His Day's Work Was Done", F. R. Edwards; a short address on "Laughter" was given by Rev. Mr. Dwelly.

Following the conclusion of the program, the baskets were auctioned off, Murray Barr acting as auctioneer. Miss Iris Willis contributed a doll whose name was concealed in a sealed envelope. Miss Willis and Mrs. Roland Stockdale solicited from the audience, guesses as to the name of the doll. When the contest was over and the name given was Sarah, it was found that no one had guessed the name. Consequently, all those who took guesses were numbered and one of these chosen at random to see who would become the possessor of the doll. Mrs. P. Hunt, of Lakehurst, was the lucky winner.

Tea, sandwiches and cake were then served. Many unused cakes which were left over, were auctioned off by Steve Nicholls. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $59.

WESTWARD HO!

All good Canadians realize that Canada is a country to be proud of, but how many however, have tried to visualize the remarkable variety and vastness of this far-flung Dominion? It is only through travel that the immensity and outstanding natural beauty of our great heritage is realized. Travelling westward to the Pacific Coast we pass mighty rushing rivers innumerable lakes and dense lumbering regions thence across the wide prairies and through the magnificent Rockies a revlation of peerless scenic grandeur—then Vancouver and Victoria, those gems of the north Pacific, where the warm Pacific winds made year round golf possible.

Travel facilities are of the best. Every day the year round The Vancouver Express" widely known Canadian Pacific transcontinental train, leaves Toronto at 9.00 p.m., making the through trip to Vancouver in 4 days. Schedule provides for good connections to all western points and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly arrange for reservations and tickets on request.

SEVENTY-FIVE ATTEND SERMON

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Dec. 4.—A shower for Miss Evelyn Thurston, who is soon to become the bride of William Kingsborough, was held on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. T. V. Thurston. About seventy-five friends and relatives of the bride-to-be gathered and presented her with an address and a large number of beautiful and costly gifts. The address was read by Martin Thurston. The presents were collected in an upstair room and conveyed to Miss Thurston in a large clothes basket prettily decorated for the occasion, there were also several arms full. Miss Kathline Thurston and Carman Thurston acting the part of a miniature bride and groom made the presentation. William M. Thurston replied for the bride.

During the evening a fine program was given with Mrs. Irwin E. Thurston presiding at the organ. The program included community singing of appropriate songs, a duet by Mesdames Ezra and Nelson Thurston; a reading by Miss Ileen Tully, and several brief speeches by some of the gentlemen present, all of who expressed regret that Miss Thurston was so soon to leave the community and wishing she and her future husband bon voyage through life. Martin Thurston acted as chairman.

The guests were received at the door by Mesdames Albert Thurston and William Thurston. A delicious lunch was served at the close and a very enjoyable social time spent.

MAIL SERVICE IS IMPROVED

GREATLY NEEDED

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Dec. 4.—Marmora is to have an improved mail service and again it is through the efforts of Charles Hanna, ex-M.P. It is only a matter of a few years since that gentleman was able to secure for this district an incoming night mail. For some time, the business men of the vicinity have felt the handicap of there being no outgoing night mail while commercial travellers have also suffered in not being able to get their correspondence away until the morning of the following day.

Postmaster J. W. Hickey has been notified that the new mail will go into effect next Monday connecting with train No. 33 which runs from Ottawa to Toronto daily except Sunday.

Heliotrope Is Eager For Another Competition

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:
I feel I must get in line with the rest of the neighbors and tell you how much I enjoy the Women's Page; it is just wonderful, and to my idea it has made The Peterborough Examiner THE paper. I always turn to the Women's Page first to see that The Whatnot column has for us by way of a treat, and it always is really very interseting and the recipes are such a splendid addition to our page. I have tried several and find them very good. I will enclose one of mine for the neighbors. Someone has already moved a vote of thanks to the management for the Armistice Number. May I second it? As I think it just splendid and my husband does also; he was one who came back, and he found the Armistice Number of special interest.

Dear Marion, when are we going to have another competition? I enjoyed the letters on, "Five Years After," very much.

I am enclosing a coupon for the Christmas gift suggestions. I do hope you have one for me. I will thank you in advance and then away, as I fear I am taking up too much of your valuable time.

Yours sincerely,
Heliotrope."

I'm very glad to receive your letter, "Heliotrope," and to welcome you as one of the neighbors. Many, many people have written to say they liked the Armistice number, and I'm so glad.

I don't intend having another competition until after Christmas. Everyone is so busy about this time, and then, you know, I have a Christmas story competition under way now. The stories will be printed to-morrow, I think.

The helps were sent you some time ago, and I hope you found them really useful. I enjoy preparing them. I'm afraid you forgot to enclose the recipe—perhaps you will send it next time you write.

"Dear Marion,
Here's a hint that may be of value to some neighbor troubled as I was with the tangling of stockings and apron strings in the washing machine. I always tie a loose knot in them, and this doesn't hinder their being thoroughly washed, but keeps them from getting tangled up.

Yours truly,
T. T."

Thanks, "T. T." for the idea—who HASN'T been troubled with the AWFUL knots these long stringy things get into in the washer?

"Dear Marion:
I have written my address on this paper in case it is not written plain enough on the coupon.

Well, I enjoy reading the Whatnot. You can see by my address that I live in the country. I don't read the Whatnot column first, I read the rest of the paper first and keep the best column to read when I have plenty of time.

Midgie."

Glad to hear from you, "Midgie," and hope the helps were what you needed. Write me a longer letter sometime soon.

"Dear Marion,
Your Christmas gift suggestions were just splendid. I think I can claim the record for taking advantage of more of them than anyone else, for I have made, or am making, most everything you told about.

Sincerely,
Mary Ann."

I'm very glad that you found the Christmas gift ideas so useful, "Mary Ann," and I surely hope the lucky people for whom you are making the gifts enjoy receiving them.

I have a few of the four-page folders left yet, if anyone wishes to make some gifts.

"Dear Marion,
Just now when everyone is thinking turkey, and looking forward to Christmas, some may be interested in knowing that I find a pair of tweezers very handy in plucking pin feathers. I like nicely-cleaned birds, and I have found the tweezers just the thing.

I hope this idea will do for this time, as this is a busy time on the farm.

Your friend,
Roseneath. Mrs. W. R."

Thanks very much, "Mrs. W. R." Your suggestion is very opportune.

"Dear Marion:
I am enclosing a coupon for your helps in making Christmas gifts, I hope I am not too late to receive a copy. Your page has certainly improved The Examiner in my opinion. The personal touch counts, does it not? I wish I had a new idea to contribute, but I'll have to be a sponge this time.

Wishing you continued success,
Yours very sincerely,
Mrs. J. I."

Indeed, "Mrs. J. I.", no one need feel she is a "sponge" when she writes to ask for helps. Anything I can do is very gladly done, and I fully realize that the neighbors are busy women. Sometime when you have a few minutes to spare though DO sit down and write me a gossipy letter!

Tell me how your gifts turn out.

"Dear Marion:
I am sending to see if you could send me the instructions for the things I have marked with an X. I have been wanting them before but never sent.

We have been taking your paper for a long while now and think it is wonderful. I will close, hoping to get my sketches soon.

Annie McK."

The helps were sent you some days ago, "Annie McK.", and I hope you liked them. Let me know if there is any other way I can help—if I can't some other of the neighbors will, I am sure.

* * *

"Dear Marion:
You said it all and how! But here is more ammunition for the battle.

Are we supposed to realize now how entirely unnecessary and superfluous we are in the great man-made scheme of "things as they are" ?

Ever since Adam of Eden blamed a woman for what he did wrongly, mankind has had that pleasant little habit of taking all credit and praise to himself when he ever did anything worthy of note and in case of error of course some woman was to blame for his downfall or misfortunes.

"Thinker" reminds one of a self-important school boy whose mother has given him material to build something with the admonition, "Now be careful!

S-O-S

If you have a problem, or want advice, or a recipe the neighbors will be glad to help out, Write to Marion, who will present your request.

Mrs. B. reports: "Can you tell me what was the matter with my cucumbers pickles? I made 3 gallons of cider vinegar into pickle with sugar, spice, etc., when cold added my cucumbers, wiped dry every day, until crocks were full. Then they started to work (without any yeast cake) and I had to throw them out. The vinegar was like water."

This is the second request for an explanation, if some neighbor will be good enough to send it. What caused the pickles to go bad? Has anyone had a similar experience?

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

Present-day American housewives know all too little about the flavoring herbs that were familiar to their grandmothers and are still much more generally used abroad than in this country.

Basil resembles bayleaf in flavor, should be used sparingly and when used in this way adds a delicious flavor to fish soups and fish sauces.

Bayleaf is the leaf of the familiar laurel and is highly prized by French cooks. When used sparingly it adds a delicious flavor to stews, stocks, soups and meat sauces.

Chervil—which is also called myrrh—is used in the form of dried leaves. It is very little known in this country, but it has a flavor that most persons like.

Marjoram, another herb used in the form of dried leaves. It is said to add an acceptable flavor to almost any stew or sauce in which onion is used for flavoring.

Mint—used by Americans usually only for mint sauce—but in England very often added as a flavoring to pea soup and chopped over new potatoes.

Sage, which is used with onions in stuffings for poultry and various sorts of meat.

Tarragon leaves are used for flavoring by many European cooks, and vinegar flavored with tarragon is liked by many for dressing cucumbers and for making fish sauces.

Thyme imparts an acceptable flavor to many dishes when sparingly used.

Shallot, chives and garlic all provide variations of the onion flavor, but are little used in this country.

Bouquet garni consists of three sprigs of parsley, a sprig of thyme and a bayleaf, with celery leaves, marjoram and basil sometimes added.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,
You have helped me on two other occasions, so I am coming again. I have a cupboard, on an outside wall, which always seems damp, though there are no marks on the wall or ceiling. Is there anything I can do to remove the musty odeur?

Mrs. K."

The only cure I know, Mrs. K., is to place a saucer of lime in the bottom of the cupboard. This will absorb any damp in a few days, and should then be removed. Probably some neighbor has another idea.

Accidents Will Happen

By Clarissa Mackie

Lucie gave one last defiant glance at her charming reflection in the cheval glass, turned gravely and went to her mother's room.

"Here I am, mother," she said quietly.

Mrs. Delmore, recovering from a badly sprained ankle, leaned forward on her couch. Her fine eyes were sad. In silence she regarded her lovely daughter, marked the lack of gaiety, the white look about her pink lips, and decided that pale primrose was not quite becoming.

"You are lovely, darling," she said. "I know what you are thinking, mother dear." Lucie ran forward and fell beside the couch, her eyes hidden against her mother's white hair. "You are thinking that instead of being Eleanor's bridesmaid I should be wearing white and should be marrying—" Her voice shook.

The interruption had the desired effect. "No," laughed Lucie, hugging her mother, "but I did think you were grieving over my broken engagement. I am sure it is for the best and that Paul and I never could be happy together; I believe I hear the car; I must go!" She kissed her mother passionately, paused laughingly for one more brief inspection and vanished from the quiet room.

"She cares! She cares!" murmured Mrs. Delmore regretfully, thinking of the two proud young hearts steeled against each other.

Eleanor Gray's mercenary marriage to Col. Happie, who was years older than the sparkling young bride, had been arranged by an ambitious mother. It was to be a splendid affair, taking place in a large, fashionable church. Lucie Delmore was one of the eight pretty bridesmaids who were to form part of the brilliant wedding party.

It was ten minutes past the hour set for the wedding when word went around that the bride was coming. The organ was playing softly, the guests settled themselves in their seats and prepared to look at the most-talked-about marriage of the season.

Lucie Delmore waited pensively as the procession formed; then it was a shock to discover that she must walk up the aisle escorted by Paul Dare. After that her thoughts were chaotic. The slow, beautiful music, the soft rustle of satin frocks, the scent of yellow roses—then a sudden, frightened knowledge that something had gone wrong. Lucie and Paul had been the first of the procession of bridesmaids and ushers. Behind them should have been flower girls and a maid of honor, a bride and her father.

A faint murmur arose somewhere and was stilled. A hushed whisper went over the assembled guests. Someone hurried up to Paul and murmured discreetly—the murmur was passed on. The organ went on playing the wedding march, the clergyman in his white robes waited at the altar.

The dapper young man who had whispered to Paul Dare tiptoed up a side aisle and whispered to Col. Happie. The colonel turned very red, and, followed by the best man, retreated to the vestry. The rector bent his head to listen to the message, looked flustered, hesitated and lifted his hand.

The music stopped, and as in a dream Lucie heard the rector's voice announcing that the marriage would not take place that day. She saw the dapper youth whispering to Paul again and saw him dart up the aisle once more. It was confusing and she could not look at Paul, for they were foes! What had happened to Eleanor?

Then the music began again—tender, dreamful.

To her surprise the procession moved forward. Then the couples ahead of them separated and formed a short lane through which Paul guided her, at first dazedly, then alarmed, straight to the chancel rail, where the white-robed clergyman stood looking benignly down on the most surprised bride that ever came to be united in wedlock.

"Dearly beloved, we are gathered—" The remainder was another dream from which Lucie Delmore awakened to find herself the wife of Paul Dare. After it was over there was a wild confusion of questions and answers, explanations and consternation, and finally Lucie Dare found herself driving home, while Paul's arms were around her and Paul's lips were begging forgiveness.

It was a very tearful bride and a proud and happy bridegroom who faced Mrs. Delmore in her pleasant sitting room.

"Mother, you will never believe what has happened!" cried Lucie.

"Something very pleasant, if you and Paul have decided not to quarrel any more," smiled Lucie's mother.

"Mother," said Paul softly, and his voice lingered on the word, "Lucie and I were married this morning. Forgive us for doing it in this way, but this is how it happened: We were half way up the aisle when Smith came and told me that Eleanor had disappeared—gone off and married young Palmer. He broke the bad news to the colonel, and Dr. Deems was just going to dismiss the guests when Smith passed me and I told him my idea about taking advantage of the accident and having a wedding after all!"

Mrs. Delmore kissed them both. "I am sorry for Eleanor's mother and I pity the colonel, but I must say, my dears, that it is the only mercenary wedding I ever knew of that turned out happily!"

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

To-day I am going to give you a few extracts from one of my own favorites in light reading. I think "Helen's Babies" is the most delicious tale ever told. The book is quite long, and I have only room for a very little of its best. If you like this extract, I might print more sometime again.

DECEMBER 4, 1928.

The story is told by one Harry Burton, bachelor, twenty-eight, who consents to spend his vacation at the country home of his married sister, Helen, where he will keep an eye on the two children, Toddie, 3, and Budge, 5. "The children won't give you the slightest trouble; they're the best children in the world—everybody says so," Helen wrote.

On the way from the station to Helen's home, the victim meets Budge and Toddie, dirty and dusty, each playing with a "dolly" made of a knotted towel. They sit on his knee, rumpling his clothes and knocking his hat over his eyes, and then along comes a young lady whom the bachelor uncle is very eager to cultivate. After a conversation in which the lady pokes good-natured fun at Burton's condition, she drives on:

"Of course you'll call," said Miss Mayton, as her carriage started—it's dreadfully stupid here—no men except on Sundays."

I bowed assent. In the contemplation of all the shy possibilities which my short chat with Miss Mayton had suggested, I had quite forgotten my dusty clothing and the two living causes thereof. While in Miss Mayton's presence the imps had preserved perfect silence, but now their tongues were loosened.

"Uncle Harry," said Budge, "do you know how to make whistles?"

"Ucken Hawwy," murmured Toddie, "does you love dat lady'"

"No, Toddie, of course not."

"Then you's baddy man, an' de Lord won't let you go to heaven if you don't love peoples."

"Yes, Budge," I answered hastily, "I DO know how to make whistles, and you shall have one."

"Lord don't like mans what don't love peoples," reiterated Toddie.

"All right, Toddie," said I. "I'll see if I can't please the Lord some way. Driver, whip up, won't you? I'm in a hurry to turn these youngsters over to the girl, and ask her to drop them into the bath."

They reach the house, and the supper-table. There Burton raps on the table, bows his head, and says: "For what we are about to receive, the Lord make us thankful," and asks Budge whether he ate bread or biscuit.

"Why, we aint asked no blessin' yet," said he.

"Yes, I did, Budge," said I. "Didn't you hear me?"

"Do you mean what you said just now?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I don't think that was no blessin' at all. Papa never says that kind of blessin'."

"What does papa say, may I ask?" I inquired, with becoming meekness.

"Why, papa says, 'Our Father, we thank thee for this food; mercifully remember with us all the hungry and needy to-day.' That's what he says."

"It means the same thing, Budge."

"I don't think it does; and Toddie didn't have no time to say HIS blessin.' I don't think the Lord will like it if you do it that way."

"Yes, he will, old boy; he knows what people mean."

"Well, how can he tell what Toddie means if Toddie can't say anything?"

"Wantsh to shay my blessin'," whined Toddie.

It was enough; my single encounter with Toddie had taught me to respect the young gentleman's force of character. So again I bowed my head, and repeated what Budge has reported as "papa's blessin'." Budge kindly prompting me where my memory failed. The moment I began, Toddie commenced to jabber rapidly and loud, and the instant the "Amen" was pronounced, he raised his head and remarked with evident satisfaction:

"I shed my blessin' TWO timesh."

Then the harried bachelor gets the imps into bed and tells them stories and sings them hymns for an hour and a half. He is just dropping off into slumber when Toddie starts to howl. "Ize lost my dolly, an' I tant find her anywhere."

"Well, I'll find her for you in the morning."

"I want her now—oo—oo—"

Springing madly to my feet, I started for the offender's room. I encountered a door ajar by the way, my forehead being first to discover it. I ground my teeth, lit a candle, and said s mething—no matter what.

"Oh, you said a bad swear!" ejaculated Toddie; "you won't go to heaven when you die."

"Neither will you, if you howl like a little demon all night. Are you going to be qui t now?"

"Yesh, but I want my dolly."

"I don't know where your dolly is—do you suppose I'm going to search this entire house for that confounded dolly"

"'TAINT 'founded. I wants my dolly."

"I don't know where it is; you don't think I stole your dolly, do you?"

"Well, I wants it, in de bed wif me."

"Charles," said I, "when you arise in the morning, I hope your doll will be found. At present, however, you must be resigned and go to sleep. I'll cover you up nicely;" here I began to rearrange the bed-clothing, when the fateful doll, source of all my woes, tumbled out of them. Toddie clutched it, his whole face lighting up with affectionate delight, and he screamed:—

"Oh, dare is my dee dolly; tum to your own papa, dolly, an' I'll love you."

This is all I have room for to-day of the delicious little story in which Budge criticizes Toddie for saying "brepspup" instead of "brekbux" for "breakfast," and Burton rejoices that the children are peacefully rummaging in an upstairs trun —until he finds it is his tr nk! Toddie reaches over the table for a piece of bread, pulls tablecloth and dishes off, and then declares: ". . . the bad old tabo beginded to froe all its fings at me, an' tumble down bang." But I must stop writing, and read the rest of it to myself for the 'steenth time! Do you want any more?

SHADES OF WILD WEST

DEADWOOD, S.D., Dec. 4.—The graves of "Wild Bill" Hickok and "Calamity Jane," noted characters of wild west night life, are to be improved. For the benefit of tourists it has been decided to erect large stone monuments and suitable bronze tablets to mark the places of burial in Mount Moriah Cemetery.

The porpoise, usually considered a stupid creature, is now said to have a much larger brain than a man.

Y.W.C.A. CARRIES ON GREAT WORK

Looks After Interests of Young Women All Over World.

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 4 (Canadian Press).—How the interests of young women the world over are being looked after by the Young Women's Christian Association is brought to mind by the visit to the city of Miss Marion Ferguson, of the National Council of the Y.W.C.A., at Toronto. Miss Ferguson has recently returned from Rangoon, India, where for 12 years she was general secretary of the "Y".

The "Y" work in Rangoon is carried on among women of three races, the Indians, Burmese and Anglo-Indians. Separated as the women are by racial and other differences the work is carried on in three separate hostels. The Indian women are the most difficult to reach, as they are still confined to their homes to a large extent.

The Burmese women of the Mongolian race are more on an equal footing with men and can come and go as they please. Physical culture has recently been introduced and the first exhibition of this work created great interest in Rangoon.

The Anglo-Indian girls, although of mixed parentage, consider themselves English. They can speak and dress like the English girls, and they are the ones who are employed in offices and hospitals. Through their varied interests they are drawn to the Y.W. clubs and hostels.

Mary Christmas Fined For Being Intoxicated

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press)—"Mary Christmas," shouted the clerk of the Recorder's Court and everybody in the court looked around in surprise. To their astonishment a young woman, named Mary Christmas answered the call. She was charged with loitering while drunk on a city street. "Simply because you are named after one of the greatest holidays of the year it does not mean that you have the privilege of getting intoxicated on any feast day," Recorder Thouin said, after she had pleaded guilty. She was compelled to pay the costs of the court.

CHURCH CHOIR GIVES CONCERT

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Choir Present Pleasing Program.

FIRST OF SERIES.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—St. Andrew's Presbyterian church choir have for some time been planning ways and means to create a choir fund which will be ample to meet the demands that from time to time are made of such organizations of singers. It was finally decided to hold a series of short sacred concerts in the Sunday School room of the church, immediately after the evening service. These concerts will take place at intervals of about one month. The first was held after the service Sunday evening and was a complete success. The silver collection amounted to more than fourteen dollars and will be ample for the immediate needs of the choir.

The program was short as will be the case with each of the concerts. There were but three artists appearing, Prynce Nesbitt, organist of the church and well known concert pianist, opened and closed the program. His numbers were Minuet (Paderewski); Valse Caprice (Rubenstein) and Rigolette Paraphrase by Liszt, which was the closing number. Miss Lillian Hay gave two readings, "Cuddie Doon" and "The Three Trees." Prynce Nesbitt played the musical accompaniments for the latter number. Mrs. Frank Decarroll sang two numbers, "Friend of Mine" and "Duna." The Rev. W. J. Mark officiated as chairman for the concert which he claimed was a very successful event.

THE COLD BATH

Perhaps you tried out the morning cold bath at some period in your life and you gave it up for some reason.

With many individuals the idea of cold water first thing in the morning is not pleasant.

Others like the sensation that follows a cold bath and a tub down, and they go at their breakfast with zest.

Others seem to get a nice reaction after the bath and feel good until about 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning, and then get a sagged, droopy feeling.

There are very few who can start in and take cold baths and feel real good all day afterwards. Most of them will get the draggy feeling.

Why?

First, the blood pressure and temperature are low early in the morning, and the body does not seem to like losing any more animal heat at this time, such as is caused by a cold bath.

Then there is the shock to the system which follows a cold bath. This shock is too much for the majority of folks.

Now, does this mean that the cold bath or cold shower should not be taken in the morning?

No, because a short, cold bath of one minute, with temperature from 50 to 80°F., can really become of real help in stimulating the circulation, and other processes of the body.

A simple method used by "beginners" is to put warm water in the bath tub sufficient to reach just above the ankles. Then a cold shower is taken and the warm water about the ankles prevents the loss of too much animal heat, and also lessens the shock.

However after a time this warm water can be dispensed with, and the cold shower, one minute, may be taken. The "Shock" is really beneficial.

Further, a short cold bath during the day when the temperature and blood pressure are higher, may prove very helpful in the same individual who got a poor or harmful reaction in the early morning.

55 YEARS MARRIED; SAYS 1928 GIRL OK

"I See Nothing Wrong With Modern Girl," Says Mrs. Doe.

KINGSTON, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press).—When Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Doe, celebrated the 55th anniversary of their wedding recently, Mrs. Doe showed a fine liberality in her judgment of the modern girl when, in an interview, she said: "I see nothing wrong with the modern girl. When I was a girl I remember we craved good times, but girls in those days had to work and attend to their knitting. Of course it was something awful for a girl to use rouge and lipstick, and late hours with boy friends usually resulted in sound spankings from stern fathers who to-day don't seem quite so stern. But a girl can be a good girl without being a goody-goody girl, and though they bob their hair and enjoy themselves in 1928 they aren't any worse than the girls of 1873 because I guess they wanted to do the same thing even back then."

The following notice from The Border Cities Star of November 24, refers to the wedding of Miss Frances Stevenson of Walkerville, who is a niece of Mrs. T. Quartermaine of this city and whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Stevenson, are well known in the city: "Charming in every detail was the wedding of Miss Frances Jessie Carnegie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Stevenson, Kildare road, and Mr. Robert Alexander Brown, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Brown, which took place this morning in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Walkerville. The decorations were especially lovely. The altar was banked with palms and bronze and white shrysanthemums and on each of the pews the same flowers were held in place with bows of tulle ribbon. The Rev. W. H. Battersby performed the ceremony. The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, was charming in her gown of ivory satin, the bodice which was fashioned on straight lines, was untrimmed, the skirt short in front, formed a train at the back over which a long tulle veil fell. White satin slippers and a bouquet of Ophelia roses and baby's breath completed her costume. The maid of honor, Miss Helen Bradburn, of New York, was gowned in brown panne velvet and her hat was of the same velvet, and she carried bronze chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Agnes McTague, of Guelph; Miss Jean Brown and Miss Audrey Brown, sisters of the bridegroom, wore gowns of panne velvet shading from peach to bronze; their hats were of cloth of gold and they carried bronze baby chrysanthemums. Mrs. Stevenson, the bride's mother, wore a handsome gown of navy blue chiffon velvet, a black satin hat, and carried premet roses. Mrs. Brown, the mother of the groom, was gowned in orchid chiffon velvet with black hat, and her bouquet was of bronze baby chrysanthemums. The ushers were Alfred Stevenson, brother of the bride; Rendel Stone, of Walkerville, and Sheldon Banwell of Hamilton. Noman Nobes assisted as best man. After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was given in the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Brown left on a motor trip to spend their honeymoon in Kentucky."

YOUR HEALTH

PSYCHIC CAUSES OF DISEASE.

The human mind has many powers which we are just beginning to understand. It is intimately connected through the brain and nervous system to every part of the human body. We know that the mind can have a powerful stimulating effect toward either health or disease. When the mind is properly used and controlled, health may be maintained under many adverse conditions, but when the mind is torn by conflicting destructive emotions, it kills the very cells it is supposed to guard over and control. Some of our thinking is conscious, but by far the greater part is unconscious and can only be felt through our emotions.

When one is happy or enthusiastic, one can digest a meal of rich foods in wrong combinations and suffer few bad after effects; if one is depressed, sorrowful or worried, even the best of foods may lie heavily upon the stomach.

In health the normal wastes from tissues are expelled quickly, because they would otherwise be poisonous to the body, but when the nervous system is run down or upset, one lacks the needed vital force to expel them. So you can see that anything which you do to waste your nervous force will cause a retention of these poisons and their gradual accumulation may lead to serious disease.

Distressing mental states cause an almost immediate stoppage of all the processes of digestion and seriously interfere with the working of the bowels, liver and kidneys. Harmful emotions, such as fear, criticism, malice, jealousy, hatred and worry will squander the vitality to such an extent that they are frequently followed by bilious attacks, headaches and other symptoms of auto-intoxication. These unpleasant symptoms are almost immediately stopped if one can fill one's self with joyful thoughts of friendliness, courage and love.

The powerful, unpleasant emotions always results in a toxic poisoning of the body. In many cases they result in actual disease and there have been a few instances where sudden death has ensued from these causes. It is said that the famous surgeon, Vesalius, while dissecting a woman, was so affected by seeing her heart still faintly beating as he was cutting through the tissues of the chest that he immediately stopped dead, and it is also said that Louis of Bourbon dropped dead from horror as he witnessed the exhumation of his father's corpse.

You must realize how potent themind is as a factor in the production of many chronic disorders. Sometimes this process is so insidious as to be unrecognized except by the closest attention of a skilled diagnostician. In my practise, I have seen a number of cases of paralysis which were induced by a slight injury associated with fear. Although these patients had been to many different doctors and undergone many different types of treatment, they were not cured until this fear factor was recognized, and then the cures took place almost instantly even in some cases of years' standing. This is undoubtedly the reason for some of the so-called miracles that occur during religious revivals. The real source of the disease being psychic, the cure takes place as soon as the afflicted one's mind has reached a high enough pitch of exaltation.

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Not all of us who live in Peterborough, were fortunate enough to receive a good education when we were young. Nevertheless, this should not hinder housewives from learning now in their spare moments.

• • • • • • •

In this modern age household devices for saving time have become so numerous that housewives are constantly having more leisure.

• • • • • • •

There are some ambitious housewives in Peterborough, who are continuing their education in their spare moments or even hours. Parents who have children in school ought to be able, when the child needs help in homework, to do arithmetic questions, help in their spelling and in grammar. I believe this was suggested by one of our readers a few weeks ago, and I think it is a good idea too.

• • • • • • •

Our universities of to-day offer extension courses for such people who were not a fortunate os othe rs. These courses are not expensive and in many departments of the work, it is not necessary even to have a high school education.

• • • • • • •

I believe many of my readers who have spare time, would benefit a great deal by doing this, and you know the saying that it costs nothing to carry around a good education.

• • • • • • •

Of course everyone is busy now, around Christmas, and I wouldn't expect our housewives in Peterborough to have much spare time. But after Christmas, send to the nearest university for its catalogue. Then you may find out in what way you can continue your education.

• • • • • • •

Of course housewives are not the only people who have spare time—far from it. Sometimes those in business have a little leisure and if this is the case, it may be that you can get information that would be every valuable in making you more efficient.

• • • • • • •

Many of us, when we were younger, had ambitions for doing great things, which of course depended on a good education. Then came misfortune and our castles in the air fell hopelessly in a heap—but do not be discouraged, go on learning. Do not think you are too old to make some of those dreams come true.

• • • • • • •

If you haven't planned all your Christmas presents, and you desire to make something attractive for your girl friends, you will want this week's help—instructions for making a tricky little bed jacket.

• • • • • • •

When many young couples start out in married life, they do not realize their great responsibility at first, but insist upon living beyond their means in order to qualify for a certain social position, or the young husband aspires to fill a position in business which he is not qualified to fill.

• • • • • • •

Some would term this ambition, but this is not ambition. Ambition is wholesome and commendable, but in order to satisfy, it must recognize reasonable limitations.

• • • • • • •

"When I used to fish in the mountain streams, if I had a short rod, I could direct it easily and throw it into this or that part of the stream, as I pleased," said Henry Ward Beecher in a sermon one time.

• • • • • • •

"If I let it out fifteen or twenty feet, I could not direct it. My line was the victim of every floating stick and overhanging bough. So I have found in fishing for prizes of life men are apt to overreach themselves and get into all kinds of distress, as a consequence."

• • • • • • •

I certainly think this is right. There is good advice in these words and it would be well for many of us to follow them.

• • • • • • •

If our line is longer than we can direct in an intelligent way, it becomes a habit and a bad one, too. We must not go beyond our means and education, thinking it is ambition. Do not let your ambition run away with your common sense.

• • • • • • •

Sometimes when you have tough meat and wish to make it more tender, it may be made tender by pounding, by long cooking or by laying it for a few minutes in vinegar water.

• • • • • • •

A teaspoon of vinegar added to the liquid in which meat simmers helps to dissolve the connective tissue. Some housewives use a tomato as its acid answers the same purpose.

To-night, the Ladies' Aid Society of Knox United Church is directing its energies towards the success of a fowl supper and sale of fancy articles. This organization of ladies, although comparatively small in numbers, its membership being only about forty, is a very praiseworthy society and does much to assisting in the work of Knox parish

Its major activity is an effort to pay off the mortgage on the church property and every year sees a diminution in the amount owing in this way. Last year, this society paid $500 on the mortgage and this year $900 and the interest, has been paid. The sum of $5,075 still remains owing on the debt and the ladies will dubtless continue their good efforts until this is wiped off.

The fowl supper to-night will be followed by a sale of pretty things and an excellent program. Mrs. Robert Johnson is the president.

To-morrow afternoon, members of the Young Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity United Church are holding a gift sale and tea at the home of Miss Mabel Brown on Park street. This society is a group of young ladies who act as a junior auxiliary to the Women's Missionary Society of the church, and all funds collected by them go towards the augmenting of foreign mission totals They raise in the neighborhood of $400 every year for this purpose. With Mrs. A. Parker as president, they collect the majority of the money by means of envelopes and free will offerings.

A hurrying motorist brought his car to a sudden stop. The brakes scrunched sickeningly as the wheels missed by a hair's breadth the head of a small child. The man at the wheel gasped. The children had slid gaily down from an inclined bank above a sidewalk and shot across the street on their sleigh as the motor car came down the way. They gathered themselves up smilingly The little boy said: "Come on. He never touched me." And they proceeded to make another attempt to see how close they could come to annihilation.

The Women's Guild of St. George's Church are holding their annual talent tea and sale of gifts at the Rectory to-morrow. This is a parochial society that assists with the work of the church. There are about twenty members and Mrs. T. Monks is president. They have been responsible for many additions to the church building and rectory, and gather their funds by way of annual sales, lawn and pancake socials. The purchase of a piano was one of their feats last year.

Following out the practice of dividing their society into groups, each group to be responsible for the raising of money by some means, the Peter Robinson Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire is holding a bridge party tomorrow evening under the auspices of the November-December group. This society, with a membership of nearly one hundred young ladies, of which Olga Johnston is president, is prominent in the city because of its habit of giving to every good work The Well Babies' Clinic, the Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage, as well as many other private charities, benefit by its donations and one of its latest good deeds was the equipping of a Fracture Room at Nicholls Hospital, at a cost of several hundred dollars.

The Frontier College in Northern Ontario benefited recently by $50 from this Chapter. This is an institution carried on among the men in the mining and lumber camps of Northern Ontario. Students go there yearly and mingle with the men, trying to elevate their standards and interest them in good reading and in educational work.

A small bit of work done by the Chapter which is quite interesting is the donation of $8 a week to the family of a man with a small salary and a large number of children. This will be continued until such time as the eldest child, a very clever girl, can obtain the commercial certificate for which she is working hard Without this help from the organization, she might be compelled to give up her studies and do other work for which she is not fitted and which would hamper her mental development. This is carrying out, in small way, an idea which has appealed to peoples and governments alike for many generations, the aiding of children to go ahead with work for which they are fitted, rather than depriving them of assistance at a time when it is most needed.

UNIQUE RECITAL GIVEN IN CHURCH

F. G. Mann Arranged Attractive Musical Event for Sunday Evening.

A unique and very attractive musical recital was given in St. John's church on Sunday evening, after the regular service. F. G. Mann, the organist and choirleader, arranged a program, which was exceptionally pleasing, and was rendered more so by the inclusion of some of the old time church music which is returning to popular favor just now.

The first and second selections on the program were organ numbers played by Mr. Mann, in a Franz Liszt arrangement or an "Ave Maria," and Dr. Herbert Saunders' arrangement of the lovely "Londonderry Air." Mr. Mann also played Rollo Maintland's composition for the organ, "Grand Choeur in C," and the postlude was a Caprice in B flat.

The choir sang the "Pardon" music of Maunder's sacred Cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," with baritone solos by H. Spencer, contralto by Miss Ruby Quartermaine, and soprano by Mrs. L. Groombridge.

The "Faux Bourdon" music, illustrating the Plain Song in the tenor or boys' choir section, had free melodies for the soprano, alto and bass placed against it by the large choir and was an interesting demonstration of this type of church music. The Plain Song was a composition by Guidett, with the "faux bourdon" written by Mr. Mann.

With organ accompaniment Mrs. M. M. B. Hoyland gave a violin solo, a "Serenade" by Tonelli.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Sallow Look.

Question: Mrs. R. E. M. writes: "Kindly explain why my 3½ year old child is getting a sallow look about her. It's not sunburn or tan from being out, but a horrid yellow color. She seems to be in good health though."

Answer: Your child is undoubtedly suffering from some serious disorder, for it is uncommon for such a young child to become jaundiced. You must have her carefully examined at once and not depend on any general information which I can give you through this column.

MINOR MOGULS DISCUSS BASEBALL CHANGES

JOHN CONWAY TOOLE WILL REMAIN HEAD OF INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Clubs Vote To Oppose Any Amendments Against Present Modified Draft.

MINOR LEAGUES MEET.

International To Play Schedule of 168 Games, Opening April 17.

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 4 (A.P.).—Three important minor leagues met in annual session yesterday and although the club owners spent many hours in baseball discussion, apparently little ground was covered.

After the first session, John Conway Toole was still president of the International League, although rumors had persisted that a movement would be launched to cut off his official head. After the first meeting of the International, President Toole was asked if the session was harmonious. "Quite so," was his reply. "Not a weapon was drawn."

Vital Topic

The draft, the all-absorbing topic to feature the annual convention of association of professional baseball clubs opening Wednesday, was discussed by the International and American Association. The International clubs voted to oppose any amendments to the present "modified draft" as it applies to Class AA leagues. The American Association did not announce the concensus of opinion developed in its discussion. The Western League previously voted opposition to unrestricted draft.

The International League passed a resolution expressing regret at the illness of King George and hoped for his speedy return to health. The International also decided to open its season April 17 and close September 25, playing a schedule of 168 games. A schedule committee will be appointed later.

Awarded Pennant

The American Association will attempt to adopt a schedule to-day. At yesterday's session the 1928 pennant was awarded to Indianapolis, and the position of Supervisor of Umpires created. Joe Cantillon, veteran manager, umpire and scout and one of the best known men in baseball, was named to supervise the umpires.

The Western League re-elected Dale Grear of Topeka, Kansas, as president and J. F. Burch, Omaha, Neb., vice president. The next season will open the third week in April and close some time in September. The schedule will be framed February 20 by Spencer Abbott, Pueblo, Colo.; John Holland, Oklahoma City, and Vice-President Burch.

ROBINSON MAY BUY ATLANTA BALL CLUB

Manager of Brooklyn Robins Said To Be Backed By Colonel Huston.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The National League soon will lose one of its best-liked members if reports which persist in baseball circles are to be believed.

According to rumors which have developed from different sources Uncle Wilbert Robinson is tiring of that "fifty per cent. opposition" over in Brooklyn. He has an opportunity to take over some baseball work where he will be able to work under more congenial surroundings and is about ready to make a change.

Robbie is now at Dover Hall, his hunting camp near Brunswick, Ga., thinking over the question of stepping out of the big leagues. He naturally prefers the big tent to the side show, but there are other considerations and the more friendly surroundings of the office of the Atlanta Baseball Club interest him.

Owner Spiller of the Atlanta Club has just made some real estate deals, and these, with other business, have influenced him toward selling the club which represents the Georgia metropolis in the Southern Association. The club has been offered to Robinson, who has all the financial backing which would be necessary to swing the deal. The name of Colonel T. L. Huston, Robbie's closest friend and a former big league club owner, has been mentioned in connection with the proposed deal.

Huston Backs Robbie.

It is known that Huston is perfectly willing to go along with Robbie in any baseball move which the latter cares to make. The wherewithal is at Robbie's disposal if he says the word.

The Brooklyn club will hold its annual meeting here on Dec. 11, the same day on which the National League holds its annual meeting. Robinson's contract as president-manager of the Robins has another year to run at something close to $25,000 per annum. Steve McKeever, part owner of the Robins and bitter opponent of the proxy-manager holding either position, is said to favor paying off the balance of the contract. McKeever has been quoted in the past as ready to buy back the unexpired contract.

Seven Nebraska Gridders Picked For "Big Six" Team

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 3.—(A.P.)—Nebraska, which has never lacked football stars, produced a banner crop of players this year and snared the lion's share of honors of the 1928 Big Six All-Conference team chosen by the Associated Press with the co-operation of conference coaches, athletic directors, officials and sport writers.

Seven Cornhuskers were named on the first team while the conference champions nearly rounded out a full team by placing three additional players on the second team. The preponderance of Huskers bears evidence to the superiority of the machine which bowled over all conference opposition and fared well in intersectional games. The Cornhuskers defeated Syracuse and Montana State, tied Pittsburgh and lost only to the Army.

CANPRO LEADERS WIN IN WINDSOR

Detroit Beats Bulldogs in Decisive Manner By 5 to 1 Score.

WINDSOR, Dec. 4.—Before a crowd that filled every nook and cranny of the Border Cities arena, Windsor Bulldogs went down to decisive defeat again when they faced the league-leading Detroit Olympics here last night. The score was 5 to 1. On the night's play the visitors deserved their verdict, although the margin rather flattered them. They had an edge on the Bulldogs in the first two periods and were slightly outplayed in the final session. But those first two periods the Olympics acquired a 3 to 0 lead, banging three long shots past Abby Cox. At the other end Herb Stuart was faultless on the same kind of scoring efforts.

Fireworks, which were more or less expected as a result of the rough opener in Detroit, did not develop at all. The teams checked closely, both defensive formations looking good, but there was little or no dirty hockey.

Teams:—

Detroit—Goal, Stuart; defence, Brydge and Rockburn; centre, Goodfellow; wings, McCabe and Bellefeuille; subs, Foyston, Brophy, McInenly, Gillie, Hinspenger.

Windsor — Goal, Cox; defence Bellemer and Brown; centre, Neville; wings, Emms and Carson; subs, Roach, Gregg, Sorrell, Fournier, McBride.

LONDON PANTHERS WIN IN OVERTIME

Tie Score With Hamilton in the Last Period To Win 6-5 Count.

HAMILTON, December 4. — Overcoming an early lead, the London Panthers whipped their way into a ten-minute overtime victory over the Hamilton Club here last night, winning by a score of 6 to 5 when Stanton Jackson was allowed to take a ten-second prance all around the Hamilton citadel and drive the disc through everyone but Goaler Reid, who was parked some feet away from the net, having moved out to block an earlier shot.

From the opening minute until Carl Voss drifted a long shot from centre ice to beat Reid with but a minute to go in the final of the regulation frame, the game was one of the hottest ever played here. The bad hockey was almost lost in the snarling, aggressive contest that had the fans hanging to the backs of the seats, and both teams uncovered some of their most brilliant hockey.

Hamilton's starry front lines two shifts and one over that comprise probably the best in the Canpro League to-day, worked faultlessly, and should have been easy for the locals, but the defence was strictly a one-man affair with Eddie Baker showing all the effective playing. Baker again scintillated, and while his charges were fruitless, he shouldered a heavy burden and never allowed one attack to go around his side. Bennett and Quenneville, who looked after the left defence duties, however, were weak, and the London players fairly paraded around them to shower shots at Reid. The latter might have looked entirely different with more protection, but as it was, there were several shots that beat him that should not have done so.

The teams:

Hamilton — Reid, goal; Bennett and Baker, defence; Lauder, centre; Broph, left wing; Markle, right wing; Quenneville, Huffman, Reinnikka, D. Hamel, and Duncan, subs.

Referee—Rob. Hewitson, Toronto.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

Loyal fans who followed the Peterborough senior to Toronto several years ago and watched them clean up Parkdale and other Queen City clubs thought both the team and themselves were making history.

They will be surprised to learn that almost thirty-four years ago a Peterborough team invaded Toronto and captured a championship there and furthermore that from the much smaller Peterborough of those days 800 fans went to the Queen City with their victorious team.

Yesterday we read of the first title won by a Peterborough hockey club; to-day we will advance a year and get a glimpse of the winning of a second championship, this time fought out for the most part on foreign ice.

The date is February 26, 1895, the scene the old Granite rink in Toronto.

The Peterborough team had advanced to the junior finals by reason of an exciting victory in Kingston which by the way was prefaced by the same brittle bickering that has marked recent baseball history between the two cities.

At all events the Peterborough team was matched against its rivals of the previous season, the Toronto Granites, the game to be played in Toronto and arrangements were made for a mass movement of fans. At first the fare was to have been $2.30 but a rate war developed and finally the cost of the round trip was fixed at $1.00 and everybody prepared to go to Toronto. 800 actually went and the Mail and Empire of the next day reports the largest crowd of the season with three-fourths of the spectators coming from Peterborough. The tickets were good for six days and a legend has grown up that it took some of the excursionists that long to recover and get home again.

Be that as it may it was a glorious night with the 1895 Petes victorious but only after a game that The Examiner describes as the fastest ever played in the series. "The local men", said the scribe, "never met foemen more worthy of their steel" and Toronto newspapers add the information that the match by long odds was the liveliest seen in Toronto that season.

Peterborough won by 7 goals to 6, getting the final goal as the game ended. There were no goal nets in those days and The Examiner report says: "Finally the puck was worked in behind the posts and sent through from there off Phelan's skate to Worham who stood directly in front of the posts. With a lightning-like sweep of his stick he reached the puck just a fraction of a second before a stroke from an opponent. Just at the instant the puck struck the wall in the rear of the flags Timekeeper George Horkins jumped down on the ice and called time.

The Peterborough champions were carried off shoulder high and for an hour afterward the Granite ice was held by wildly excited Peterborough fans.

The Petes had gone into the game handicapped by the illness of Montgomery and the inability of Parsons to play, but Sam Adams was pressed into service at the last moment and starred while Roger Davidson, drafted from the Collegiate Institute team, was another change in the lineup from the previous year. Lionel King with three goals was the big scorer of the game, so close was the battle that the score was tied five times during the sixty minutes. The Mail and Empire said: "King was the star of his team and, with Phelan, played a remarkably clever game. Worham was also much in evidence for the champions while Montgomery was almost unpassable at point.

The line up:

Peterborough—Goal, Dickson; point, Montgomery; cover, Adams; forwards, Davidson, Phelan, King, Worham.

Referee—C. G. K. Nourse.

To-morrow—The Winnipeg-Peterborough game of 1898.

DUTCHMEN IN SECOND PLACE

Defeat Falls 4-3 oT Drop Cataracts Into Third Third Position.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 4.—The Kitchener Flying Dutchmen continued their upward climb in the Canpro race here last night when they defeated the Falls' entry by 4 to 3. This victory puts Kitchener in second place while the Lalonde-coached team drops back into third position.

The game was fast with the Dutchmen displaying more finish to their work. They had a good margin on the play for two periods, though the Falls finished strong in the last stanza. For a five-minute spell in the second period, Kitchener played one and two men short through penalties but even then they were a good match for the Falls and scored one of their goals while handicapped.

The checking was rather heavy and the players were inclined to mix things in the second period when six penalties were imposed, one of them a major to Godin for a mix-up with Gross. The latter was given a three-minute penalty.

The teams:

Kitchener—Goal, Moore; defence, McFarlane and Berlet; centre, Miller; wings, Skinner and Palangio; subs., Hiller, Brown, Gross, Savage, Randle, Campbell.

Niagara Falls—Goal, Beaudry; defence, Cains and Duggan; centre, Quesnel; wings, Godin and Kelterborn; subs., Prestia, Herrington, Steele, McLeod, Madden, Williams.

Referee—Bill Adams and Tom Monroe.

The Summary.

First Period.

1—Niagara Falls, Kelterborn, 4.00.
2—Kitchener, Brown, 2.00.

Second Period.

3—Kitchener, Palangio, 5.00.
4—Kitchener, McFarlane, 4.30.
5—Kitchener, Skinner, 7.00.

Third Period.

6—Niagara Falls, Godin, 4.30.
7—Niagara Falls, Prestia, 6.09.

Penalties—First period, McFarlane 2, Berlet, Miller; second period, McFarlane, Savage, Hiller, Gross, Miller, Godin (major); third period, Skinner, Gross.

LONDON LANDS REDDING FROM BOSTON TIGERS

LONDON, December 4. — Redding, hard-hitting defence man, last season with the Boston Tigers in the Canadian-American League, will join the London Panthers.

He has been secured from the Boston club and Corbeau expects to have no trouble in getting him to come to terms. Redding scored some seventeen goals in the last campaign and will round out a more experienced rearguard for London.

Percy Lesueur, manager of the Buffalo Bisons, wired Manager Corbeau last night for the best cash price London will put on Tommy Filmore. The Panther pilot will probably deal with Lesueur, who is very anxious to talk business about Filmore, since the Detroit Cougars have shown no speed in closing their proposed deal, which has been hanging fire.

CURLERS MEET AT CAMPBELLFORD

Officers For Year Elected—Membership Fees Will Be Reduced.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 4.—All that remains now to start the local curling season is sufficient cold weather to make ice. There was an enthusiastic meeting of the curlers in the members' room of the rink at 8 o'clock last night. The officers for the coming season were elected and various items of business discussed. This year there will be a reduction in the amount of the fees. Last year the amount was seven dollars and a half. This year the only cost will be five dollars. It is hoped that a ladis' club will be formed, and as an inducement the regular fee has been cut in half for their benefit. Every assistance will be afforded them in forming their club. One new rule which is expected to benefit the finances of the club is that players must pay their fees before they will be allowed to play.

The officers for the coming season elected last night were Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Tait, patrons; Dr. H. B. Longmore, hon. president; Charles Palliser, president; Jams Gay, vice-president; R. W. Ryder, secretary-treasurer. The committee of management will consist of the president, vice-president; secretary-treasurer, S. J. Moore, J. P. Archer, H. Denike and N. A. MacColl. Thomas Cole will be retained again for ice making and care of the rink.

After considering the time of year, and weather conditions it was decided that if Campbellford was to enjoy its usual first class ice, flooding ought to be started at once in order to soak the ground well before the heavy frosts.

WHEN PETERBORO AND MADOC MET ON CAMPBELLFORD FIELD FOR TROPHY AND $200 WAGER

Both Invading Towns Had Brass Bands and Followers.

PETERBORO WON 4-2

Goal Umpires Were Blind to First Goals Scored.

(By HUGH FAIRFAX)

The day Peterborough and Madoc played lacrosse in Campbellford was October 28th, 1896, one of those unforgettable occasions to which former Campbellford men like Louie McCoy and Johnnie Sutherland often harked back in the fanning sessions in the Wee Scot's shop on Simcoe street at the time an effort was being made a few years ago to resurrect lacrosse in Peterborough.

It is recalled more or less accurately that Madoc and Peterborough had clashed several times that summer, and Madoc with several victories to its credit considered that Peterborough offered but little more than a workout. So, late and all as it was in the season, George Horkins, a young insurance man, who had moved here from Campbellford, where the family is well known, made a $200 side bet with C. L. Broderick of Madoc that Peterborough could beat Madoc any day, the game to be played on neutral grounds, preferably in Campbellford.

The whole Trent countryside heard about it, and nothing else was talked about when men got together in Norwood, Hastings, Marmora, Stirling and all the other neighbouring towns. Naturally, it was expected that the interest would pile up a fat gate for the two clubs to divide.

Teams Have Brass Bands.

The two contending towns did their part. Madoc sent its brass band and a crowd of rooters, and the Peterborough contingent was accompanied by the 57th Regimental band. The two teams debouched into the Campbellford valley with all the panoply of contending armies, processions down town to the grounds and all that sort of thing. Those were the days when community spirit flamed through and around athletic teams, town bands and other collective and representative associations. Madoc mustered more than four hundred persons in its excursion.

As the teams are remembered they were as follows:

Peterborough—Dobbin, Lynch, Jack Brown, George Mein, Glover, Borland, McDonough (centre), Rubidge, Lipsett, Galley, Latimer and Thompson, with Jimmy Hickey field captain, and Lou LeBarr, goal umpire.

Madoc—A. Collings, R. Collins, T. Seymour, J. Kirk, C. Kirk, T. Kirk, J. McDonald (centre), E. Sutton, Billy Cross, Sinclair, Stoneburg, Burns, and C. D. McDonald as field captain and T. Wilson as goal umpire.

Peterborough won the game by 4-2. It was a rather heavy betting affair, as the match had not only divided the two towns into competing camps but they had grouped the district towns into separate camps, some backing Peterborough and the others supporting Madoc.

Umpires Control Score.

But the interesting feature of the game was the work of the goal umpires. As the story is told, Peterborough opened up a fast game and scored a clean goal no one could dispute. But the goal umpire didn't see it. His hand was immovable. The game proceeded after an argument, and Peterborough scored again, and once again the umpire behind the posts refused to acknowledge it. An official of the Peterborough team ran across to Lou Lebarr and told him there were to be no goals at his end of the field.

Finally the referee got the game into action again, and after shuttling play Madoc scored. Billy Cross, one of the smartest lacrosse players the Trent towns ever produced, who afterwards went west and only last summer died after a career including the high honor of having been Attorney-General of one of the prairie provinces.—Billy Cross scored that goal, but it went for nothing as Lou Lebarr set it off against the two Peterborough had been disallowed.

Referee Stopped In.

Under the rules of that time, the referee could not reverse a goal umpire's decision, nor could a goal umpire be retired until one goal had been scored. Well, there had been no goals scored, so the two officials at the flags were firmly anchored there. But the game had become a farce. Finally when the score board was still a blank, but the earned count about 3 to 2 for Peterborough, the referee intervened and declared that he would have to violate the regulations and have other goal umpires appointed. During the controversies the two original umpires in the double role of Nelson were more or less jostled and mauled, and the Campbellford constable, who evidently had a Madoc bias, rapped Lou Lebarr on the head.

Then the teams settled down and Peterborough's first goal was flung from the end of a combination, Glover to Galley, to McDonough to Latimer to Lipsett. And George did it.

Banquet at Peterborough.

There was gloom in Madoc that night, and for days thereafter. The village paper alleged that the game had been stolen from their boys with the aid of officials, but George Horkins appears to have known a real bet when he saw one. The game was also played for a $50 trophy, which was brought home that evening, and graced the head table in the Palace restaurant where Mr. Horkins was host to the team at the best dinner the house could provide. There had been a procession up town from the C.N.R. station and other expressions of the town's congratulations.

Among those who spoke at the dinner, paying tribute to the Peterborough team, were Dr. McGrath, R. A. Latimer, editor of the Campbellford Gazette, Billy Buchanan, F. Dobbin, Bert Wallace, Jos. Cahill and P. Flanagan of Kingston. The Club that night sent letters of condolence to Jack and Jim McCabe whose mother had died just a short time before the day of the Campbellford game.

There were no motor cars hereabouts at the close of the century, but somehow the young men of the towns and villages seem to have had better fun and more of it in their simpler, unsophisticated recreations.

WORTERS CASE IS IMPORTANT

Principle Involved — Shall the Wealthier Clubs Approach Suspended Players.

CALDER ISSUES STATEMENT.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4. — President Frank Calder of the National Hockey Lague, yesterday issued the following statement in connection with the case of Roy Worters, goalie, whose suspension was temporarily lifted yesterday by the league head:

"The point at issue in the Worters' case, which the governors of the league will have to decide is the right of any club to deal for the transfer of the services of a player of any other club under suspension for hold-out or any other reason.

"My own contention is that such right should not be permitted; otherwise a situation might be set up which would make it possible for a richer club, by perfectly obvious methods to create discontent among the players of less wealthy clubs, bring about endless hold-outs, prior to the opening of the season, and generally undermine the playing strength of the weaker clubs.

"It is not contended that this has happened in the present instance but the principle involved, if the transfer is consented to, cannot fail to establish a precedent which will undoubtedly be made use of in the future."

ASSOCIATION TEAMS PLAYED PROMINENT PART IN SPORT ACTIVITIES THROUGHOUT YEAR

James O'Brien Will Succeed E. Hardie As President of Club.

REPORTS READ.

Tribute Paid To Efforts of Past Officers Who Made Year a Success.

Officers for Coming Year.
Past President—E. Hardie.
President—J. O'Brien.
Vice-President—J. Cairns.
Secretary—N. Porter.
Assistant-Secretary—S. Richardson.
Treasurer—F. Shannon.

Officers for the year were elected at the second annual meeting of the Canadian General Electric Social and Athletic Association hld in the Canadian Legion Hall on Friday night.

It is only a year and two months since this association was first organized but in that short time it has made great strides in promoting several branches of sport and providing social activities for the workmen. Too much cannot be said in favor of the men who were prominent in organizing activities and especially of the loyal service of Messrs. E. Hardie and H. Foster, who have held the respective offices of president and secretary during the past year. Many other men, including H. A. Cranfield, vice-president, W. Jackson, assistant secretary, and F. Shannon, treasurer, have directed their efforts for the progress of the association. The directors of the different activities and the zone representatives, too, have all taken a great part in putting the organization on such a solid foundation.

Following the reading of the minutes, Mr. Hardie who acted as chairman of the meeting, told the members that he would not run again for office. A discussion then arose regarding the present constitution and a committee of five were elected to look into the matter in the near future.

Those on the committee are Messrs. Hayes, Crowe, Cairns, Hardie and Musther.

Reviews Activities.

The president, in making his report, briefly reviewed the activities of the club since his election to office. Last winter the C.G.E. had the largest bowling league in the city and also were prominent in the city's hockey activities. The Tool Room and Industrial Control teams clashed in some lively tussles in the finals of the Shop League. After playing two tied games, the Tool Room captured the honors and then defeated the Maple Leafs for the City League laurels.

During the spring the softball leagues were formed, comprising twenty teams in the men's league and six in the ladies'. The games were played on the grounds north of the factory buildings, the same being improved and extended during the past season providing for more than one diamond.

On May 24 the runners from the local plant's track and field club competed in Lindsay, and were successful in carrying away a good percentage of the prizes. In the football club they had a most successful year, losing but one game, that being to the Davenport Works' team.

Cricket was also played by an interested group and now a billiards club is being formed.

In closing Mr. Hardie mentioned some of the obstacles encountered by the executive, and also referred to the possibility of expansion in the line of activities.

Financial Report.

The financial report was read by Mr. Swanger, and showed a balance creditable to any organization on its second annual meeting. Mr. Swanger and S. S. Shaughnessy were the auditors of the past year, and were re-elected for the coming year.

Reports on some of the activities were then given by members of the different committees. Mr. Hayes gave an excellent report on the hockey club of last season. This was followed by Mr. Dick's report on the football club. J. O'Brien gave brief reports on the ladies' softball, track and field club, and the entertainment committee.

Elect Officers.

Mr. Hardie then asked N. Crowe to act as chairman during the nomination of officers. H. Foster acted as secretary pro tem. J. O'Brien and J. Cairns' names went on the slate for ballot. After the ballots were counted by E. Hardie and H. Hurrle, scrutineers, it was found that James O'Brien had won out. However, J. Cairns was next elected to the office of vice-president. Neil Porter was elected to the office of secretary by acclamation, and S. Richardson was chosen to act as his assistant. Fred Shannon was re-elected to the office of treasurer by acclamation.

Business Discussed.

Several items of general business were then discussed, and it was decided that the zone representatives be elected at some future date. The question of insurance for injured players was left to the Constitution Committee. It was also decided that visiting Canadian General Electric plants' teams will be the guests of the local association in the future. This, however, must first have the approval of the main executive.

PRIZE WINNERS.

Prize winners for the draw in were announced at the general meeting of the Association held connection with the C. G. E. Social and Athletic Association, on Friday. They were as follows: 1, F. Hills; 2, J. MacFarlane; 3, R. Bennett; 4, J. H. Thompson.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

Dave Richmond will sing "Jeanine, I Dream of Lilac Time," and "Down Where the Sun Goes Down," at the evening performances.

Feature picture, "Freckles" a screen Masterpiece| Gene Stratton-Porter's Popular story enthusiastically received.

A masterly screen interpretation of the late Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel, "Freckles," made under the direction of Leo Meehan, her son-in-law, for FBO, opened last night at the Regent Theatre before a large and enthusiastic audience.

As is evidenced by the sale of more than 2,000,000 copies of the book, "Freckles" is a story and picture which appeals to a very wide variety of theatre-goers. It is clean, wholesome, charming and interesting and deserves being seen by everyone.

The story deals with the adventures of an orphan boy with only one arm. With no tradition of family behind him, Freckles sets out to show the stuff from which he is made by accepting the dangerous post of timber guard in the Limberlost Forest, a large and wild section of valuable trees.

During the pursuance of his duties he meets the Swamp Angel, with whom he falls in love. But to tell the manner in which he wins out would be to spoil the story.

A fine cast was chosen and all the roles are excellently portrayed. The cast includes John Fox, Jr., Gene Stratton, Hobart Bosworth, Eulalie Jensen, Billy Scott, Lafe McKee and Frankie Darro.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"TWO LOVERS"

Two of the most romantic stars of the silver sheet are featured in one of the Baroness Orczy's romantic stories at the Capitol this week. Filmed from "Leatherface" the picture entitled "Two Lovers" had a large audience last night and proved to be an extremely interesting production, as it should be when one considers the elements gathered together in its making.

The handsome Ronald Colman has the stellar role of Mark van Rycke, son of the High Bailiff of Ghent, in the year 1572, when the Flemish city has fallen beneath the heel of the Spanish oppressor. Noah Beery is as villainous as usual in his part as Azar, the Spanish governor of the city, while Vilma Banky makes a lovely heroine; Lenora de Vargas, "Flower of Spain," niece of Azar, who marries her to Mark to deceive the Flemish people into thinking Spain has their interests at heart. Plotting against the people of Ghent, Azar is gratified when Lenora turns against Mark and betrays him into the hands of the Spaniards. She has been forced to marry him while in love with Don Ramon de Linea, the false-hearted Spaniard who is killed by Mark when the latter protects a tavern-girl against the Spaniard's drunken importunities. Leonora, discovering that Ramon was killed by her husband, and ignorant of the real truth of the matter, betrays Mark and he is taken and tortured. The scenes of medieval splendor and the fidelity with which details of costuming and housing are carried out in this picture it a notable and romantic one. Finally, Leonora, hearing the truth, helps the Flemish people to storm the Kasteel, the great fortress of Ghent. Much of the interest of the production lies in the filming of the conflict between Mark and Leonora and the manner in which the man finally wins her regard.

The theme song of the picture, a catchy waltz refrain, "Leonora" is sung by David Richmond of Toronto, who also sings in fine voice the "little sister" of "Ramona" a selection entitled "Chiquita."

The comedy with the program is on of those giggly affairs that are almost worth the price of admission in themselves, so very funny are they. The ridiculous Lloyd Hamilton is the hero of "Between Jobs" a ludicrous picture which delineates the adventures of a loony carpenter and his loony mates.

—Jeanette.

At the Royal Winter Fair horse show the Canadian horse Bucephalus, ridden by Major R. S. Timmis, captured first honors in the officers' performance class. This is one of the most important jumping events of the show, and it was won in the face of strong competition from riders of the United States army camp. G. R. STEVENS WILL ADDRESS CHAMBER Banquet is Being Planned for Friday Night by Chamber of Commerce.

The Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, whose reorganization early in the season made possible an active and effective campaign during the summer, will hold a general meeting in the Empress Hotel at 6.30 on Friday, December 7, at which the chief speaker will be G. R. Stevens, of the Department of Trade and Commerce, who is at present touring Canada in the interests of Canada's export trade. By this means, the executive hopes to bring together the large membership of the Chamber, together with their friends.

Mr. Stevens should prove a most interesting speaker, since, for the past four years, he has been Canadian Trade Commissioner at Cape Town, South Africa. In addition to his address, brief reports will be submitted by those who represented the Peterborough Chamber at conferences of the Canadian Chambers of Commerce and of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce.

KITCHENER OUT OF SENIOR SERIES

Hockey Club Will Confine Efforts To Intermediate Team.

KITCHENER, Ont., Dec. 4 (Canadian Press).—Kitchener hockey club to-day wired Secretary Sewitt of the O.H.A., that they would not compete in the senior series this year, but would confine their efforts to the intermediate team. The decision was made when it was found that Cammie Seagram will be unable to play for a few months owing to a rugby injury, and to the fact that trips to Kingston would be too expensive.

BRISBANE, Australia, Dec. 4 (Canadian Press).—When they had score at 103; Mead, 40, and Hammond, second innings of the cricket test match with Australia, the English captain declared. Australia had the wicket of their most powerful batsman, Ponsford, in their second innings before play stopped for the day. The first innings scores were: England, 521; Australia, 122.

With two wickets down and the score at 103; Mead, 40, and Hammand, 19, continued the Englishmen's second innings. After a night's rain, conditions favored the bowlers, and runs came slowly. Jardine was not out with 65 to his credit when the innings was declared closed.

PLANNING RECEPTION FOR FAVORITE SON

Guelph folks are planning a reception worthy of the royal city for their favorite son, Edward Johnson, singer of international reputation, whom they remember as the school boy, too shy to go on the platform at a church concert who had to with all the boyish determination he could command to get the "nerve" necessary to enable him to sing such pieces as "Little Annie Rooney" at band concerts. Above in No. 1 is shown James Davidson, principal emeritus of the Guelph collegiate, who was principal when Johnson was a student and who recalls the latter's student days. Mr. Davidson was largely instrumental in guiding Johnson to follow music as his life work. The great singer is himself shown in No. 2, and in No. 3 is shown his daughter, Ferienza, which is Italian for Florence. She was born in Florence, Italy, and it was in that city where Mr. Johnson lost his wife and Ferienza her mother. For a time the young lady, who is now eighteen years of age, studied in Guelph, Ont., but she has been recently following music studies in the most celebrated schools of Europe and America. In No. 4 the house in which Mr. Johnson was born is shown. It is located at 17 Verney St., Guelph. A reproduction of a photo of the football team of which "Eddie" Johnson was captain is shown in No. 5. Charles Kelly, "Eddie's first music teacher, who shares credit with Mr. Davidson of the high school for guiding the young man into a musical career is shown in No. 7. No. 6 shows David Young, who is principal of the public school now and in "Eddie's" days. Mr. Young remembers many of the incidents of the early days of the great singer.

CARS IN DITCH ALONG HIGHWAY

AUTO STRIPPED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, December 4. — The storm on Friday and Saturday played havoc with the highway, causing a thick ice to form on the surface. There were a great many cars turned over in the ditch, especially on the highway between the village and Bewdley, where there is no concrete, and the road is a gravel surface. At 8.30 o'clock on Friday evening, there were three cars in the deep ditch a mile north of Bewdley, within a few feet of each other. One car had skidded and taken to the ditch, turning over on its side. A coupe coming from the south stopped close by to help the unfortunate man, and while he was investigating the wreck a new coach, driving at a fast speed, tried to stop also, but when it finally did stop it had crashed into the coupe, breaking it badly, as well as injuring the coach.

All along the highway there were cars that had run off the road, and in many cases the cars had to be drawn out of the ditch by wreckers. Fortunately, however, there were no serious accidents.

Car Stripped.

On Monday night a motorist abandoned an old touring car that had run off the road, just north of the village. There were two good tires on the car, and although the remains of the car are still there, some busy motorists have entirely stripped the car of tires and the various useful parts. The engine has been lifted from the body.

FIREMEN WILL FLOOD RINKS

Children Only Have to Notify Either Alderman Cotton or Chief Gimblett.

WANT SIDES BUILT

Alderman R. S. Cotton, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council, and Fire Chief Gimblett, told The Examiner that they are ready and willing to co-operate with the children of the city who desire to have skating rinks this year.

If any of the children of the city will notify either of these gentlemen, such rinks will be flooded without expense.

There are several private properties that are used for skating rinks every year, and sometimes there is difficulty in keeping the water enclosed. If the sides are built up in preparation for the flooding with water, much trouble would be saved later on. If the children would attend to this and then notify Alderman Cotton or Chief Gimblett, it would aid them in their work. Either gentleman may be telephoned for further information.

REPRESENTATIVES AT WASHINGTON

The empire's three representatives in Washington are seen in (1). They are, from left to right: Hon. Timothy A. Smiddy, minister of the Irish Free State; Hon. Vincent Massey, minister of the Dominion of Canada, and Sir Esme Howard, ambassador of Great Britain. Canada's legation (2) is located in the heart of diplomatic Washington. But, although thus on United States soil it nevertheless is part of the dominion and comes under Canadian laws. The red ensign flies on the legation and in front of its door there stands on duty a red-coated member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Corporal Hugh M. Lamont. (3), who served throughout the war with the Seaforth Highlanders and then enlisted in 1919 with the Mounties, being stationed in the central Arctic region north of Hudson Bay. He is the only member of the force serving outside the territorial.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY REPORTS

The following is the report of cases coming under the Unmarried Parents' Act, as given to the Children's Aid Society at the annual meeting, by the superintendent, John Edgar:

During the past year, that is, from Nov. 1st, 1927, to Nov. 1st, 1928, there were 24 cases under this Act, and were disposed of as follows:

One case where child was placed for adoption, maternity expenses paid by father of child.

Two cases where the parents of child got married, and child taken home with them.

Two cases where the mothers are in the Mercer Reformatory.

Five cases where mothers refused to give any information as to father of child.

Seven cases where agreements were made by the father of the child for maternity expenses and care of the child.

Three cases where there is not enough corroboration, or where the putative father cannot be located.

Four cases pending settlement.

This is an increase of three over last year, and three cases have been reported since the first of month.

The following is the report of the year's activities of the Children's Aid Society, as presented at the annual meeting by the secretary and superintendent, John Edgar:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

In presenting my third annual report to you, I wish first to thank the president and members of the Board for your help and advice during the year, and to assure you that I have tried to do what I thought was best for the children with whom I have to deal. There have been many cases of a difficult nature to handle during the year. Some have involved many visits to the home where conditions were bad, mostly dirty homes and lazy, careless mothers. I have not had any serious complaints of poverty, conditions throughout the country and city being somewhat improved. There were during the year three cases where the parents were spending too much money on drink to the neglect of their children. Immorality on the part of parents and guardians and girls constitute a large part of my work. This seems to be on the increase. Where the end is going to be is a question. One prominent person told me the end would come when women asserted themselves and placed higher ideals before their daughters.

The delinquency amongst boys and girls is becoming alarming. The number brought before the magistrate is increasing. The offences are usually for stealing, absenting themselves from home and school. Last spring I received a letter from the teacher in a rural school complaining that children from four families were not attending regularly. I sent a letter to each of the families, and when in the vicinity of that school some two or three weeks later called at the school to find that all of the children were present and had been attending school every day since receiving my letter.

At the request of Dr. McDougall, Provincial School Attendance Officer, I have assisted in having children attend more regularly in several sections.

The work is gradually getting more arduous in the office. The correspondence is more every year, in fact, the correspondence takes up a large part of my time which should go to follow up cases, which are sometimes neglected. I am not asking for office help at present, but the work could be done better if I had more time for field work.

A most pleasant part of my work is getting children adopted. During the year 13 applications were made, and nine of these finally completed.

I wish particularly to thank Mr. Wearing for his assistance and advice. When in doubt, I always go to him, and he is ever ready to help.

Dr. Wood and Dr. Clarke for medical help, and Drs. Craig, Cameron and Crough for dental work, richly deserve the thanks of this society.

During the summer, when making visits to wards in the county and city, I was well received. There was only one occasion when the mother refused to give me any information. She complained that her boys' names should never have been on my list. She was so contrary about it that I told her she was the one responsible for their names being there, and that if she had taken proper care of them when young, their names would not have been on my list. The wards in the county and city are nearly all in splendid homes. There are some with their parents, but those who are with strangers are in the better homes.

FARMERS' CLUB HOLDS MEETING

Bruce McNevin Addresses Annual Meeting of Local U.F.O. Organization.

ELECT OFFICERS

A most interesting and profitable address on the United Farmers' Organization generally and on the workings of the Wheat pool was delivered by the U. F. O. president, Bruce McNevin, of Omemee at the annual meeting of the Peterborough U. F. O. held in the Foresters' Hall here on Friday evening last. The election of officers, and reception of reports indicative of a good year for the local club, were other features of the meeting which was well attended.

The officers and executive council that will guide the destinies of the organization for the coming year are as follows:—

President—W. R. Shields.
Vice-President—Kenneth Petrie.
Secretary-treasurer —Earnest A. Scott.

With the exception of W. Roseboro replacing Mr. Shields, the 1928 executive was re-elected for another year while C. E. Moore, Charles Brown and James Shields were appointed to the Shipping Board. V. S. Millburn and Roy Anderson, were elected auditors, and E. A. Scott and V. S. Millburn were appointed delegates to the U. F. Convention in Toronto during the first week of December.

Encouraging Reports

Indicating that the club had enjoyed a very successful season, Charles Brown's report of the U.F.O. Shipping Board was heard. A very large number of stock had been shipped during the year while the club membership has grown considerably, the present total being 75 members.

Between 3500 and 4000 bushels of wheat sold under the local pool have already been delivered to Peterborough Cereal Company.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Mr. Jack Heron has returned to his home in Toronto after spending two weeks as the guest of Miss Jean Blake, George street.

Prynce Nesbitt, organist of St. Andrew's church, is spending a few days this week at his home in Merritown. While there he will appear on musical program in St. Catherines as a concert pianist.

G. A. Ironside and Wilbert Rogers were in Madoc yesterday to represent Campbellford at the meeting to reorganize the Trent Valley Hockey League for the coming playing season. The local team was included in the league last year on a single schedule. It is hoped that this year Campbellford will play a double schedule.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Y.P.S. were hosts to the society from the Burnbrae church last night.

Municipal officials and business men to the number of about forty from Campbellford and points along the Campbellford-Brighton Road as far as the village of Brighton itself, are in Toronto to-day for the purpose of requesting the Hon. George Henry to approve the paving of the twenty-four miles of road in question. This is the second delegation that has visited the provincial department of Highways on the same errand. This time, the speakers will endeavour to impress the Hon. Henry with the fact that the paving of this road has become a necessity to the business welfare and industrial life of the district. The deputation has an appointment for eleven-thirty this morning.

assessment, and while this arrangement will help the company the difference between what the city received in taxes and what it will receive is about $248.00, and by making this arrangement we secure an industry that is in a good position and that we believe has an excellent future. Statement of Gas Plant.

The final price quoted by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for the gas plant and other properties is $335,000.00.

The other properties not included in their first offer are valued by the Commission as follows:

Lots 6 and 7 on Water St...	$ 1,800.00
Car barns and property on King Street, 114 ft. by approximately 200 ft. ...	15,000.00
Old Simcoe St. sub-station property and buildings ..	6,000.00
Lot corner of McDonnel and Park Streets	600.00
Stoves, tools and utility equipment as of Oct. 31, 1928 .	10,500.00
Capital extensions to plant during the year 1928, amounting to	5,600.00
	$39,500.00

If these valuations are reasonable the inclusion of them in the purchase would make the price of the gas plant proper be as follows:

Purchase price	$335,000.00
Other properties	39,500.00
Price of plant	$295,500.00

The Commission in their letter say: "In reference to the question of interest the rate, you will observe, is fixed at 4% per cent. It is true that you were advised in July last when offering you the property that the Commission expressed its willingness to accept your debentures upon a 4½ per cent. basis. Upon further investigation of the Commission as to the refinancing of the Central Ontario system it was found impossible to adopt the lesser rate of interest having due regard to the interests of the other municipalities concerned."

The statement furnished by the Commission of the revenue and operating expenses of the gas plant in 1927 showed after allowing for the reduction in rates made this year:

Revenue	$91,689.12
Operating expenses	61,036.27
	$30,652.85

The debentures, issued in serial form instead of with a sinking fund, and bearing 4¾ per cent. interest, would require $21,127.42 each year to pay the interest and the yearly instalment of principal. The financial result on this basis would be:

Surplus of revenue over operating expenses	$30,652.85
Interest and principal payments on debentures ...	21,127.42
Balance	$ 9,525.43

This leaves a balance of $9,525.43 to go towards replacements or improvements or other purposes, without allowing anything for the other properties included in the purchase, such as the car barns, which could be used for storing the city's street machinery and the part not so used rented to bring in some revenue.

The valuation of the gas plant as furnished is as follows, the summary first being given with the replacement and depreciated values, and then a detailed statement of the replacement values, from which the depreciation is shown in the summary:

	Replacem't Value	Rate of Depreciation	Depreciated Value
Land	$ 20,000.00	....	$ 20,000.00
Building Account	37,210.00	30%	26,047.00
Machinery Equipment	181,750.00	33 1-3%	112,166.67
Office Furniture, etc.	1,000.00	S.V.	1,000.00
Tools and Misc. Minor Equip.	2,000.00	50%	1,000.00
Railroad Siding	8,118.00	25%	6,088.50
City Mains	219,393.05	50%	109,696.52
High Pressure Mains	39,312.50	40%	23,587.50
Services	75,000.00	50%	37,500.00
Meters	32,621.60	40%	19,572.96
Grand Total	$616,405.15		$365,659.15

FINE PROGRAMME GIVEN AT MEETING

Queen Alexandra Home and School Association Meet in Kindergarten Room.

A meeting of unusual interest was held in the kindergarten room last evening by the Home and School Association of the Queen Alexandra School. It was a "get acquainted" meeting of the teachers and parents.

Mrs. R. Parnall, the president, occupied the chair for the business meeting, and extended a cordial welcome to all visitors.

After the transaction of business Mrs. A. Mowat was asked to take the chair, when a splendid program was rendered; the opening number being a piano solo by Miss Helen Veitch and the next number, a reading by Mrs. G. H. Rowe, both of which were heartily applauded. A violin solo by Bruce Hall, an ex-pupil of the school, received a well deserved encore.

Vocal solos by Miss Isabella Black accompanied by Miss Helen Veitch, and Mrs. Charles Saunders, accompanied by Mrs. S. Purdy were delightfully rendered.

Miss A. M. Lancaster held the interest of the audience while she gave a charming Christmas story entitled "A candle in the forest," by Temple Bailey.

Musical selections by Jack and Barclay McKone, accompanied by Mrs. J. A. McKone, were much appreciated. Readings by little Gwen Parnell, and violin solos by Reginald Kingdon, accompanied by Maxwell Parnall brought a very enjoyable program to an end. After the program a "Musical Contest" was enjoyed by all, the winning prize going to Miss Walker's group, and the consolation to Mr. Park's group. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. J. E. Stephens and her committee.

A paper collection was announced for Wednesday, Dec. 12.

TRINITY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

Rev. F. E. Mallott is the Special Preacher For Occasion.

PRESENTS PROGRAM.

Entertainment Is Given By Young People's Club in Sunday School Hall.

On Sunday, December 2nd, Trinity United Church celebrated its seventy-ninth Sunday School anniversary. The Rev F. E. Malott, former pastor of the church, conducted both services with splendid congregations. The morning service was made extremely interesting for the children through an illustrated address on "Fruits of the Spirit."

The entertainment which followed the Sunday services and was given last night in Trinity hall was presented by the Young Peoples' Club and was exceptionally fine. It took the form of an old-time concert. The costumes were typical of the period seventy-nine years ago and the quaint numbers were usual and very interesting.

The following is the program. Without exception, each number was put on in a very professional manner that is not usually noted in an amateur performance. As numerous requests have been received for the repetition of the performance, it may be presetned again at a later date.

The program, which was followed by the service of refreshments, opened with selections by the orchestra and a Club quartette singing a "Silent Night, Holy Night," with Miss N Carter and Mr. J. Krogh. A Symphony trio gave a selection, with members in Messrs. McFarlane, Thackeray and Green, and "An Old-Fashioned Garden" was sung by the Misses A. Blanchard, J. Padget, and Messrs. G. Nicholls and J. Krogh. A reading by little Ruth McNeeley was entitled "My Tables" and a song entitled "Songs My Mother Used to Sing" was rendered by Mrs. Olive Nicholls and Miss Helen Lytle. Mr. J. Krogh gave "Strategic Shadows" and the Misses Helen Ross and Jean Padget were heard in "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," by James Whitcomb Riley. The Hamilton Quartette played "Waikiki" and Miss N Carter gave "An Invitation by Pierette" Pierettes were the Misses M Deyell and M Seabrooke.

The pianiste for the evening was Miss Frances McFadden and violinists were Messrs. Shea and Wright.

Christmas in the Backwoods

(By Oriole)

"Try and come for Christmas. We should be pleased to have you," said Mona in her letter. "I have told mother and the girls all about you and they will be disappointed if anything prevents you from visiting us.

After reading these lines to mother and father I looked up to see if they approved. "Go by all means" said mother, "a little holiday just at this time will break the winter. Father and I can go to Toronto. The folks up there want us to come and we may as well, for it won't seem like Christmas here if you are away."

"Oh! Mumsy," I cried hugging her, "I wouldn't think of going if you'd be lonesome."

"I think the shoe will be on the other foot," said she winking at father. "However it will be a new experience for you and I think they will treat you well. Judging from Mona's letter there's nothing they won't do for you if you accept the invitation."

"Well I guess its settled then" said father. "Now, you'd better drop them a line and I'll do the same to the Toronto friends."

The train was pulling out. I waved my hand to father who had accompanied me to the station, and settled back against the seat in a flutter of excitement. "My first Christmas away from home. I wonder how it will turn out. Well it will be a change at any rate." So gazing from the window I saw the objects that marked our city limits fading from view. It was nine thirty a.m. when I boarded the train and father had said there would be a short wait between trains at Nobberly which would be reached about noon.

The landscape was gradually changing. Farms were scarcer, hills more frequent and it was beginning to snow. Large fluffy flakes that looked like pieces of cotton batting bobbing about on elastic as the storm increasd. The view being shut out now on account of the snow on the window. I turned to the magazine in my hand and read till the porter announced that the next stop was Nobberly.

"Well the first lap of the journey is over," I told myself as I descended the steps of the train. The station was a small box like affair with an office on one side and waiting-room on the other. Several men occupied seats in the latter so decided to take a little walk till the train appeared. The storm had abated somewhat but snow was piled several feet deep. The result was very picturesque. Posts, wires, trees were all mantled, and the sun coming from behind a cloud cast a golden radiance over all.

After admiring these beauties for about half an hour (walking all the time of course). I returned to the station house. There were only two men left so I took a vacant seat by the stove and perused my look for another half hour. No sign of the train, so I asked the man at the wicket what time it was due. "Should have been in long ago," he answered. Snowed under I guess. Pretty heavy snow storm wasn't it? I caught sight of a young man in the office looking at me just then so I went back to the fire in the waiting room. My thoughts turned to Mona MacKenzie, the big blonde girl whom I had befriended when she came to the city, not knowing a soul but the people she boarded with. The girls in the office poked fun at her, calling her baby elephant. She really was large and I being just the opposite we took to each other from the first.

I had nearly fallen asleep sitting so near the fire and thinking of old times so I decided to take another walk. By that time the train would surely be in. I took a path that led to a group of houses. The snow storm had cleared away and the air was warmer. I had just reached the bend in the road when a train whistle sounded in the distance so I began to make my way towards the station. But it was only a cattle train after all. It was soon on its way again. "No pigs for the slaughter to-day," I thought.

So resuming my walk I came to a hotel. It was a bleak inhospitable looking place and I thought with a shudder how I'd hate to have to spend a night there.

When I got back to the station I made my way to the wicket again and when the man saw me he gave a startled whistle. "You missed your train!" he said.

"That was only a cattle train wasn't it?" I retorted. There was one coach on it, he answered.

"What shall I do? I groaned. "My friends the MacKenzies up at Hauley station will be looking for me."

The young man who had been listening and looking on, now put my fears at rest. "I'll notify your friends that you missed the train and will take one in the morning. Is that all right?"

I thanked him and picking up my bag made a beeline for the hotel. I would have to stay there after all. I knocked for quite a while and as no one came I went in. The room on the right hand side of the hall was quite empty except for chairs and spitoons, so I tried the other one and a young girl answered my rap. When I told her I'd like supper and a room for the night, she led me upstairs, showed me the room and said supper was at six.

The red rays of the setting sun shone over the snow before I returned down stairs. It was warm in the parlor so I went over to the piano and strummed for a while.

At half past five the door opened and who should look in but the young man from the office. He strolled over to the piano as I still sat on the bench and we chatted for a while about losing the train, the snowstorm and so forth, then he asked me what I had been playing when he came in.

"Dear little rose?" I answered. "Did you like it?"

"Rather pretty, have you the music of it? I'd like to see it."

"Its upstairs, but I'll get it after supper. Do you live here?"

"Yes, and my name is John Easter."

"Mine is Rosamond Hayes."

"Say" he said looking eager, "did you have a brother Earl?"

"Yes, he was killed in the war. Did you know him?"

Then he told me how they had been together for two years and one was killed the other wounded in the same battle.

While we had been talking the maid had set the table in the dining room and she now announced that supper was ready. Mr. Easter pulled my chair out for me and saw that I had plenty to eat. Then the meal over we repaired once more to the parlor.

"What city did you come from Miss Hayes" he asked.

I told him, then "how did you know I came from a city at all?" I inquired.

"Well I wouldn't have guessed had you not called the local a 'cattle train.' That gave you away," he said smiling.

"This is the first time I have been in the country in winter. Mother and father are in Toronto by now I expect."

"That is where my home is. I expect to visit there at New Years.."

"If you could come and see us on your way up I'm sure mother and father would be pleased to meet a friend of Earl's."

So we talked on for another hour then he reminded me about the music so I brought it down and he admired all my pieces very much. At nine o'clock I decided to go to bed as the train I was to take left fairly early. Mr. Easter offered to call me in time to have breakfast with him, but I declined, as I still had some of the lunch left which mother had provided in case I got hungry on the train.

Well the station man and Mr. Easter saw me on safely the next morning and as we said good-bye he expressed his intention of paying my parents a visit in the near future. Which he did.

My friend Mona, a younger sister named Aileen and her brother Lee met me and we were certainly glad to see each other. They had received the message from Nobberly and although disappointed there was nothing to do but go home and return the next morning.

I shall never forget that ride to Glenne. It was a beautiful sunny morning and everything was covered in snow. The road was narrow and the trees that lined each side were bent like an arch overhead with the heavy weight of it. The sweet, clean smell of cedars and pine was exhilarating. It was a novelty to ride in a sleigh and the cold did not penetrate the warm robes with which we were covered. I sat between Lee and Mona on the seat while Aileen was down behind. When we reached Glenne I was surprised to see only a post office, house and a general store. The station was a quarter mile further on.

"Our house is nearly two miles past the station and we get our mail here," said Mona as she left the sleigh in Lee's care while she made a few purchases at the store and called at the post office for mail.

There was a great welcome when we reached my friend's home. I seemed to be surrounded by giants. They were all so big and strong. The mother and father were very kind and I felt right at home with them. Mona was the eldest then Aileen, next to her came Freda, then Lee, and Alberta and Jimmey the baby, five years old.

Mrs. MacKenzie made me rest in a big chair by the fire while the others all clustered 'round telling jokes and talking about things of local interest they had learned at the village. They were anxious to hear about my adventures at Nobberly. Mrs. MacKenzie was sorry I had to stay at a stronge hotel but glad I had found a friend in need. She was so motherly and kind.

After a hearty dinner we sat about decorating the house as the next day was Christmas. There was a tree which Lee had cut and hauled from the woods himself, beside the piano. Of course they made me the supervisor of the decorating committee. "Where would this bell look best? Is this a good place for this holly?" etc. I was not allowed to do one bit of real work. One would have thought I was a bit of thistledown. I had brought each one a small gift and these were added to their own already on the tree. It was pretty heavily laden too.

After supper we had a few table games. The mother, father and Jimmy looking on, quite enjoying the fun as much as anyone.

After a while the girls suggested that I play the piano for them and were delighted to find I had brought some of my music along.

"We's doing to Damals house tomorrow," said little Jimmy. "Her has a organ."

Mona explained that Grandma MacKenzie had invited us all out to her house the following afternoon. "Be sure and take your music. Grandma would be pleased. She only has an organ Rosamond but it has a good tone."

"That's what I practised on when I was a little girl" I said.

"Dama's organ?" quired Jimmy innocently. At which there was a general laugh.

"Now let's have the gramophone on and see you girls dance" said big bluff Mr. McKenzie.

I had to acknowledge that I hadn't learned the art yet, but would enjoy watching the others. So they paired off and their father must have had on at least two dozen records before they admitted of being tired. Then we all said good night and so ended Christmas eve.

I was wakened next morning by the strains of 'Stop your tickling Jock' on the gramophone. "Oh! that's father," said Mona giggling sleepily. He says its his favorite. As we were sleeping in a room off the parlor the tune soon woke us up. We could hear her father chuckling away as if he was quite enjoying himself. Then little Jimmy came in a big bulging stocking hugged tight in his arms, his little fat face all aglow. "Santa must have tum" he said, see?"

"Was there anything for big sister?" said Mona hugging him.

"I spec so," he answered, "Jimmy go and look".

We jumped out of bed and were dressed by the time he came back. "Muzzer says yours is on the tree".

"Can I have mine now?" said Mona.

"No, gotta wait till after brekkus. You should a hung a dreat big stockin' up like me did."

The breakfast was quite a merry affair and afterwards we assembled in the parlor to receive our gifts from the tree. Mr. MacKenzie handed them around and he made a good Santa Claus, without any dressing up either.

"Now this is for a good boy" he would say looking around as if mystified. Where is he? Jimmy would look at Lee to see if he laid claim to that title, then as Lee made no move he reached out his little hand and said, "I spec its for me cause dere dain't no uzzer dood boys 'round here."

After our presents were duly admired (each received a goodly share, myself included) we went outside and inspected the animals. Each child had a special pet.

When we had demolished a splendid dinner of roast turkey, nut dressing, mince pie, plum pudding, etc., everyone bundled into the largest sleigh and we set off for Grandma MacKenzie's. It was a ten mile drive but time went quickly. Sleigh bells jingled and our voices mingled in song. Of course there was much kissing and handshaking on our arrival at the quaint old farmhouse. The grandma was so pleased to see the grandchildren all together.

It was not a modern farm house, but everything was clean and cheerful. As the afternoon drew to a close, large painted hanging lamps were lit and the table was set in the long dining-room. There was an abundance of fruit, cream, cake, pie, etc., and it was amazing to see how it quickly disappeored. Those wild strawberry preserves! With what infinite patience someone had picked on a hot summer day.

Supper over, we younger ones made preparation for some games, and when the grown-ups came in, all joined in the fun. We played musical chairs, poor pussy, tailing the donkey, hide the button, and other old favorites. It was about ten o'clock before anyone thought about the long journey home. So we had to say good-night to the dear old lady. The drive home was one to be remembered. It was very mild, though windy, and the sky was full of stars. The moon shone brightly over the snow.

It was when I alighted from the sleigh, I first missed my music. We hunted for several minutes, but it was not to be found. Months after a farmer boy came across it lying by the road, Mona told me. Of course, it was no use to anyone then.

The next morning the girls took me to see their nearest neighbors, a crippled man and his mother. Poor man, it seemed so sad to see him shut up in that tiny house, with only his old mother and a gramophone for company.

In the afternoon I bade my good friends farewell, as my time was up. They were no more sorry to see me go than I was to leave, for my visit had been very pleasant. This time I was going back by a different route to save changing trains. Mona and Lee drove me to the station, and it was with a promise of returning at some time, I said good-bye.

On the train an old lady sat next to me, and across the aisle was her son, a crippled soldier and his two sweet children. The poor old soul confided to me that his wife had deserted him, and they were taking the little ones to a children's home. My heart ached as I thought what a sad Christmas it had been for those people. I can't forget those kiddies, with their big, trustful eyes. How their faces beamed when I gave them an orange each. Mrs. MacKenzie had pressed them on me as I came away.

I arrived home safely, and mother and father came in on the midnight train. We had plenty to tell each other.

I have never spent a Chrismas in the backwoods since then, but I think I would like to.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM

Within the black, steel-polished, Arctic skies
The wan stars fade, the pale green fires arise,
And roseate turning, fling their banners forth,
(Still orchestra of beauty of the North)
Crashes each flaming chord from near and far,
And at the zenith burns the Bethlehem Star!
Awake! Awake! The Christ-Child cometh!

Wisps of grey mist half veil the Southern sea,
The shadowy mountains loom expectantly
In waiting stillness. At each coral verge
Of dreaming islands laps the long, slow surge
Of silent waters, while the Cross still gleams
When lo! 'tis mingled with the Star's bright beams.
Awake! Awake! The Christ-Child cometh!

The dense, secretive Eastern night is gone.
Faint wafts of thin chill air presage the dawn;
The jungle hushes, all its world grows still;
Some drowsy bird sends forth his wak'ning trill.
The temple bells' soft jangle sounds afar,
When suddenly, with widening rays, bursts forth the Star!
Awake! Awake! The Christ-Child cometh!

The chimes peal out their tidings glad and sweet,
O'er hall and cottage, farm and city street,
The chill white snow reflects the dawn's pale light,
The icy trees like glittering diamonds bright.
Faintly the stars flash out across the skies,
And in their midst the Christmas Star doth rise!
Awake! Awake! The Christ-Child cometh!

Misfortune's Rewards

(By Silver Birch, Springville.)

I.

"Well, it isn't such a bad old world after all," reflected Wilhelmine Wilson as seated on her shabby trunk she reviewed the years of study that had brought her to the place in her life where she should be independent—independent! "What a great big word it is"

Six years ago she and her baby brother Richard had been left fatherless. Sam Wilson was a poor farmer but had been a kind husband and good father. He had no desire for wealth and worked only for the purpose of making enough money to live comfortably and to educate his children that they might attain to the place in life that he had once hoped to reach. Daytime teaching and night studying had been the ruination of his none-too-strong constitution.

He had then sought life in the country as his only chance of regaining his health.

He purchased a small farm near London, Ontario, and with the outdoor work his health improved steadily. Within a few months' time he had married the neighborly daughter of Robert Price, who owned the adjoining farm to the south, and life had been pleasant for the Wilson family until the sudden death of Mr. Wilson wakened them to the fact that the farm must be sold and out of the proceeds enough money must be put aside to send Wilhelmine to High School and then to Normal, that she might be able to support herself and provide schooling for her baby brother. It was an unusual "will", and Mrs. Wilson found that her future looked none too promising with no home and only a small sum of money.

It is little wonder therefore that in scarcely a year's time she had married a bachelor of about her own years and who was spoken of as "the richest farmer in the country." Mrs. Wilson was still only a young woman and sincerely thought she was doing the best for herself and her two children, but within a few months after the marriage the new stepfather began to make it clear to all concerned that two children were a bill of expense especially when the girl insisted on going to High School instead of staying at home and helping with the farm work.

Although under great difficulties the "will" had been respected and Wilhelmine was at last leaving home to accept the position as teacher in one of the city schools. She had won high favor as a student teacher at Normal, which had aided her in getting on the city staff. "Dickie," as she lovingly called her little brother, was now seven years old, so she was taking him with her, and by so doing her father's wishes would be fulfilled. Dickie was bubbling over with joy at the prospect of going to school in London, where some day sister Billy (as he liked best to call Wilhelmine) would be his teacher.

A small flat was rented for a reasonable sum and brother and sister were soon comfortably established in their new quarters. School opened with its usual punctuality and all was work and worry for Wilhelmine for the first few weeks. So occupied was her time that she scarcely had a minute for Dickie's new problems and worries. He was always tired at night and crawled into bed as soon as he had finished his supper and dried the dishes for sister Billy.

Wilhelmine spent very few evenings alone after the first rush of work had sunk into oblivion. Leonard Ross, a young salesman, became a frequent evening caller, also Dickie's teacher and her friend. They played bridge and danced until the little timekeeper could stay awake no longer and the wee small hours of the morning were never registered by the sleeping boy.

Dickie had a keen dislike for Mr. Ross—perhaps it was mostly jealousy, but there was another feeling besides jealousy that made him shun the man who shared so much of his sister's time—time that had once been spent for his pleasure.

One morning as he and Wilhelmine turned into the school grounds a beautiful new sedan glided by. Leonard Ross waved a gallant salute as he swung around the corner with only one hand on the wheel, almost collided with an approaching car, but never slackened speed.

Whew—! whistled Dickie under his breath. Isn't it a beauty? Why can't he be as nice as his car?—Well I suppose he is a little bit like it anyway, isn't he Billy? You know he's hard like it is and he looks nice like it does——

"Why Dickie!" Wilhelmine stopped dead still on the street and stared at her young brother. His childish comparison travelled like lightning into her mind; her thoughts that came so quickly rooted her feet to the sidewalk where she had stopped with indignation at Dickie's thoughtlessly unkind remarks.

Was Dickie right she wondered? Was this friend that had shown her a new life, that had played upon the strings of her heart, hard? No! No! Yet was he——? The question remained unanswered in her mind.

Was he highly polished like his car? This also became an unaswered question, which as time passed by became a subconscious warning.

II.

The school term sped rapidly along for both brother and sister. Holiday time was fast approaching. Exams. were in full swing and teachers were beginning to weary of the endless task of correcting papers.

Wilhelmine was more tired than usual this evening. She began her papers as soon as supper was over and Dickie, feeling that his exams. must have been overly difficult that day, slipped into his bed and was soon sleeping peacefully.

Wilhelmine was restless; the air in the flat was heavy and depressing. She felt she must get outside where she could breathe more freely. She stole over to Dickie's bed, kissed the sleeping lips, then tip-toed out of the room into the night air.

She had walked but half a block when a big sedan honked its horn and pulled in close to the sidewalk.

"Riding is better than walking, Miss Wilhelmine, isn't it?" The door was open before the car had come to a stop and Leonard Ross smiled invitingly from behind the wheel.

"You're a darling, Len. A ride with you is just what I need, but it must be for only fifteen minutes and not one minute more,"—so saying, she sank into the deep comfortable cushions close beside him. His one arm slid around her, and their eyes met. She shuddered slightly at the slight pressure of his hand on her arm and his eyes that looked so pleasant and sociable caused her to draw back just a trifle. That look was there again to-night—she felt sure she was not mistaken this time. It danced in smiles, yet it was cold and hard. Dickie must have been right that day, months ago, when he had passed his opinion so easily and lightly. As if her slight movement had started the motor, the engine hummed and they were away to forget piles of waiting exam. papers. This, she felt, was just what she needed to sweep the cobwebs from her brain. Yet she was surprised that she did not feel as light-hearted as she expected. A heavy fog was falling but (she promised herself) they would be back before it became dangerous.

III.

Dickie wakened suddenly from a dream in which his sister Billy was being kidnapped. He called her name over and over and louder and louder each time; but no answer came. The dream must be true! He bounced out of bed and out on the street called frantically—"Billy? Billy? Wilhelmine? Where are you?" But no reply. His mind worked quickly—he must find a policeman. Of course the police would find her. It seemed terribly dark on the street. How queer that he couldn't see where he was going. Which was the street, and which the sidewalk? Suddenly glaring lights swung from somewhere and blinded him; brakes screached; someone screamed—then an intense pain in Dickie's back and all was dark again.

Leonard Ross lifted the unconscious boy into the back seat of the car, straightened his crumpled body as best he could, and sister Billy sat on the seat beside him to hold him from jolting or sliding about. "So often" she thought, "Dickie had wished for a ride in this same back seat, but his wishes had never been gratified." Slowly the car picked its way through the fog to the General Hospital. Not a word was spoken until he was tucked in a white-sheeted hospital bed by a nurse on night duty.

"Dickie, it's sister Billy Billy, can't you speak to me?" But the silent form showed no sign of life, except for the uneven breathing.

Two days, three days passed by, with Wilhelmine sitting by his bedside as soon as school was over, correcting papers and watching, but Dickie had never moved or spoken. Every doctor of the city had been called to the case, but all shook their heads and said very little. The unanimous verdict was that he might recover if a specialist were called at once.

A telegram was sent to Dr. Foxley of Montreal, a young man in the profession, but a wonder in spiral cases. There was an anxious wait until he arrived.

School had closed and Wilhelmine sat watching, one eye on Dickie; the other riveted on the door. Her pale, drawn face told of the agony she was suffering, yet those darkly shadowed eyes had never shed a tear since Dickie had been hurt. To herself, she asked and re-asked the question, "What brought Dickie out on the streets that night in such haste that he still wore his little pyjamas?" But she knew only too well whom he must have been seeking. "Oh!" she thought, "If only I had stayed at home and finished correcting my papers as I should have done, this would never have happened."

A day and night passed without world from Dr. Foxley. He surely would come any minute now. Dickie's breathing was more regular—the only sign of improvement. He looked so pale and beautiful; but, Oh, so pitifully helpless.

Footsteps briskly yet quietly approached the door—halted; then the white-capped nurse's head looked in.

"A gentleman to see you, Miss Wilson; he insisted on me sending you immediately—he seems very uneasy, and anxious to be away."

"Who," she thought, "could be in such a hurry—surely news had not reached her step-father." Her mother, she had decided, must not know of the calamity until the specialist had given his verdict. Perhaps this was the specialist waiting for her. With this hope in her mind, she slipped quietly out of the sick room and for a second hesitated at the waiting-room door. Inside was no other than Leonard Ross pacing restlessly up and down the floor, his head forward and his hands shoved deeply into his pockets. On seeing Wilhelmine he began immediately, "I ran over to say good-bye. I must be out of London on the next train. If the kid dies. I'll be up for manslaughter and my past reputation can't stand that—you shouldn't have allowed him on the street at night, anyhow. Good-bye."

It was all over; she turned on her heel and fairly ran back to Dickie's room. He looked just the same. Her head ached and things moved before her eyes. She caught at the bed, missed it, and fell with a dull thud to the floor.

Five minutes later she wakened with the feeling that someone was looking at her, and looked up into the kindest pair of masculine brown eyes that she had ever seen.

"Now, Miss Wilson, you shouldn't frighten us like that; the nurse would have prepared a bed for you if I hadn't detained her for a few minutes."

Wilhelmine struggled to sitting posture. "Are you Dr. Foxley? Oh! I'm so glad—look at Dickie. Can't you do something to make him better?"

"Quiet yet, Miss Wilson, I don't want two patients needing my attention at once, just lie down again and rest while I take a look at your brother."

The specialist disappeared behind the bed screen and Wilhelmine lay, almost fearing to breathe lest she disturb the examination already begun. He surely could cure Dickie if anyone could, she thought. What marvellous eyes he had, and—voice! It sounded like notes of deep, low music. He was speaking to the nurse—how hopeful it sounded.

After what seemed an endless period of time, the nurse withdrew and Dr. Foxley again came to her, felt her pulse, smiled and sat on a convenient chair-arm close beside her couch.

"Do you live here, Miss Wilson, he asked, with interest?"

"On a farm fifteen miles south of the city," she told him.

"You remind me of a Mr. Sam Wilson I once knew."

"My father's Christian name was Sam."

"Then your father was my first teacher. I worshipped him when I was a boy. To him I give the credit for any success I have had in my life. Well I remember, he always urged us to aim high and we would never fall low. He kept constantly before us the idea that we must find our calling young in life and put the best of ourselves into that calling; then never give up until we reached the top. I have still far hills to climb, but I am trying to some day reach their summits, so that I may use all the power God has given me to be of use to my fellow-man.

"He also taught us to carry all our problems, both large and small, to God, and let Him guide us day by day. I still need to pray and seek guidance more and more as the years go by."

There was silence in the room when he ceased talking. Wilhelmine was not looking at the doctor but lay gazing into space—her eyes sad and wistful. Dr. Foxley thought he read her request aright, and kneeling by the arm-chair, so close to her couch that she could have reached out her hand and touched his bowed head, he offered a prayer for Dickie's recovery, such as she had never heard since her father had conducted family worship at home. The tension snapped in her heart and she cried and sobbed like a little child.

The doctor, knowing that she must cry that her taut nerves might relax, took her small white hand in his strong ones, pressed it slightly, then placed it gently at her side, made her as comfortable as he could, and left the room just as the nurse returned.

The afternoon of the same day he operated on Dickie, but it might be a week before the results of the operation would be known. Dickie's bruised body and weary young mind must gain strength before he would be able to talk. Dr. Foxley had received another urgent call, and must leave as soon as his patient was over the effects of the chloroform.

Wilhelmine, the nurse and the specialist watched the sleeping form that had again been placed in his own bed. A moment—and Dickie's eyes opened, glanced from one anxious face to the other, the lips moved but only the keenly-trained doctor's ears caught the words: "Take care of sister Billy."

The train was almost due. Dr. Foxley had just time to leave instructions with the nurse, shake hands with Wilhelmine and linger only a moment to give his address and ask for a letter, letting him know the final results of the operation.

Wilhelmine watched from the window until his taxi was out of sight, then with a lonely yet happy feeling about her heart, stationed herself by Dickie's side. He did not speak again until the next day, but he smiled occasionally. Patiently, the doctors waited for results, and within a week Dickie could talk a little to sister Billy.

His mother and step-father were informed of the accident and successful operation, and came often to the sick room; the other nearly heartbroken; the step-father having little to say.

Dickie's recovery, however, was slower than expected. His voice had returned to normal, but his body still remained helpless. No improvement could be seen in that respect. Nothing more could be done for him now, so he was removed to his mother's home, much to the annoyance of his step-father.

Three different times Wilhelmine wrote to Dr. Foxley, but received no reply. Later her letters were returned from the dead-letter office—no one in Montreal by that name.

Still determined that since she was the cause of Dickie's accident, she would never give up trying until he was cured. Her plans were quickly made. She decided to teach one more year and save every cent but her necessary board money. She would go in training for a nurse the following fall and learn all she could about spinal troubles. "Perhaps," she thought, "she might meet a great doctor who could make it possible for Dickie to walk again.

IV.

It was almost four years since Wilhelmine left London. She was now an R.N., and had been earning a neat salary for nearly a year. Much of her earnings were sent home in books and clothing for her brother, who although now grown a fine specimen of boyhood was unable to walk. This Christmas, Wilhelmine promised herself and Dickie she would get her two weeks' holidays and come home.

Three years was a long time to be away from those she loved. Both Dickie and her mother had been faithful in sending her weekly letters, but Christmas was the loneliest time to be away from home.

At the beginning of the year she had enrolled in the Detroit General Hospital and was now in charge of the Children's Ward. Poor suffering little ones were brought in from street accidents almost daily. The majority of these cases were cured enough to return to their home. One little fellow, twelve years of age, John Adams by name, had been lamed for life. He was still in the hospital acting as chore boy in so far as he was able. A year ago he had run away with an older chum and since then had knocked about the streets of first one city and then another, until now, penniless and broken in body, he pleaded to go home. Nurse Billy, as the children of the hospital called Wilhelmine, was always the kindest of all the nurses to him, and quieted his pleadings by promising him she would find some way of sending him home.

Christmas drew nearer. Lovely gifts were purchased and laid away in her club bag or stored in safe hiding places, for the hospital tree. So many beautiful things had she purchased that her money was all spent with the exception of her last cheque and twenty-five dollars.

With these carefully tucked into her hand-bag she set out on her last half-day off duty before Christmas to make a few last-minute purchases and cash her cheque. The day was gloriously bright and clear. She was in a happy mood—the happiest she had been since that terribly foggy night in London five years ago. She cashed her cheque at the bank, purchased a ticket for Montreal, wired the station agent of that city for information regarding the whereabouts of Mr. Harold Adams, father of John Adams, and waited for the return wire giving his address. Light-hearted she boarded the street car—it was crowded, so she stood most of the way, clutching a strap and smiling to herself at the thought of the pleasant days she would spend at home in the near future.

She reached the hospital just in time for tea. Amidst the chatter at the supper table, her mind flew back to her purchase for John Adams and plans arose for the best way to surprise him with his ticket. She decided to give it to him that evening.

As soon as she had finished eating she ran up to her room, where she found her purse, hat and coat still laying on her bed as she had hurriedly thrown them. She dived into her purse for her treasure when—— There was the ticket, but where was all her money? She frantically searched all her pockets, but it was not to be found. Quickly her mind re-counted the events of the afternoon. Had her purse been out of her hands? No, she was sure of that. But now she remembered having seen the clasp undone as she had stepped out of the street car. She had reclasped it without giving the incident any extra thought. Now she knew her money must have been stolen while standing in the crowded car. Who stood beside her or near her? All was blank—one might as well look for a needle in a haystack. "How," she wondered, "was she going to go home for Christmas without money. Perhaps she could return the Montreal ticket and buy one for London. But then poor home-hungry John would be disappointed. No! he must go home.: She must bottle up her loneliness once more.

With a heavy heart she immediately sat down and wrote her mother and Dickie a note explaining that circumstances would not permit her to come home as planned. Her holidays would not be forthcoming for another month.

Wilhelmine gave John his present on the morning previous to Christmas and it was a happy tear-stained face that bid Nurse Billy farewell before the taxi whisked him off to the station. He reached Montreal that evening and followed out his kind benefactor's instructions by phoning his mother from the station. He could scarcely talk when his mother's voice answered at the other end of the wire. Through her sobs of joy he learned that she would come for him right away.

He found a seat in the waiting-room and was so happy his lameness was for the time forgotten. At the other end of the same seat sat a man reading the newspaper. As John limped from the telephone booth to his seat, the gentleman saw not his paper, but the lame boy. He tried to continue reading, but his eyes refused to stay on the paper but roamed continually to the occupant of the other end of his seat. This shabbily-dressed boy of the world attracted him. He was no ordinary boy, for although his young face showed lines of pain and worry his eyes radiated kindness and love.

Dr. Foxley (for it was he who was observing John) moved nearer and began a conversation. Soon he had the whole story and knew in his heart that John's Nurse Billy was no other than Sister Billy to the little boy in London, who five years ago had started him on his life's work. England and parts of Europe had been his school for the past five years and now he was home once more to give his best to Canada as one accomplished in the cure of spinal troubles.

The next train leaving Montreal, bound in the direction of Detroit, carried an expectant, happy doctor seeking the one girl who had filled his heart, first with pity and tenderness, then with love.

Christmas morning dawned, bringing thoughts of home and Dickie. Put them away as best she could, they still came back to haunt her, and take away the brightness of the day. Wilhelmine moved among her patients, attending to their needs, but unable to cheer them as usual with her cheery words which seemed empty this morning instead of encouraging.

John's bed was still unoccupied, so she shunned it. She was lonely for those she loved. A letter from the morning mail lay unopened in her apron pocket. The post-mark was Detroit, yet she know only too well from whom that letter came, and feared to break the seal and read its contents.

At last the rush of the morning was over, so she sought a quiet corner and read the words from Leonard Ross, telling of his search for her whereabouts and begging her forgiveness of the past.

"Darling Billy," it ran, "only let me see you some time to-day, that I may tell you all that is in my heart."

Tears dimmed her eyes, but they were not for he who wrote the letter but tears of loneliness. She did not want to see him—yet he was someone from home.

She slipped into John's room and fell on her knees beside his empty bed. In those seconds she prayed for guidance as she had never prayed before, and roes comforted, knowing that she must never see Leonard Ross again. Her love for him had died five years ago, and must remain dead. Her loneliness had passed and her lips smiled again as she turned toward the door to resume duties with new powers.

With a start that almost drove away the smile she saw that the door of the room was open. "That's queer," she thought, "I am sure I closed it as I entered."

Her thoughts registered nothing more. Her heart skipped at least three beats, but her smile danced as she walked straight into the inviting arms of Dr. Foxley who had been a silent witness to the little bedside scene. His arms enfolded her but not too quickly for his eyes to tell their story. She knew now that her loneliness was gone forever.

Leave was soon secured for Wilhelmine to go home. Hours flew by like minutes on that joyous trip. Tears were in Dr. Foxley's eyes as he stepped out of the room leaving brother and sister encircled in each others arms.

MINNEAPOLIS FLOUR

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 5 (Canadian Press).—Flour 10c higher; in carload lots family patent quoted at $6.80 to $6.90 a barrel in 98 lb. cotton sacks; shipments 30,967 barrels. Bran, $32.00 to $32.50.

Wheat No. 1 Northern, $1.12⅝ to $1.13⅝; Dec. $1.11⅝; May, $1.17; corn No. 3 yellow, 78½ to 79½c. Oats, No. 3 white 44⅝ to 45⅝c. Flax No. 1, $2.34 to $2.42.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Coast grain increased in activity and showed an upward trend yesterday, contrasting with weakness of wheat. Exporters in need of corn to fill contracts which call for December shipment were apparently becoming anxious. Scarcity of oats resulted in March and May oats outdoing the highest prices heretofore attained this season.

Corn finished irregular, varying from ¼c decline to ½c advance; with oats ⅝c to 1⅛c gain. In wheat, the close was easy, ⅛ to ½c net lower. Provisions at the last were 5c off to 2c up.

Final quotations on corn and oats were near to the day's top level. A careful check-up on the corn export situation as it affects the price of December delivery in Chicago was said to show that exporters had in general sold corn for December shipment hedging the sales by making purchases of the December future delivery, but were now in a dilemna because rural holders have not been letting go of corn to the extent which was looked for.

In this connection, talk was current that exporters who thus are short are finding themselves unable to turn over December contracts and get immediate delivery corn substituted in time to fill requirements.

Corn Worked Higher

It was farther asserted that corn premiums have worked higher on the grades which have been sold for export, and that as settlement time approaches, anxiety is apparent to increase. Meanwhile, yesterday's purchases of corn to arrive in Chicago were small, and fresh export business was announced, despite gossip in some quarters that there had been trans-Atlantic selling yesterday of corn future deliveries here, and that Europe had also relinquished certain amounts of corn bought for January shipment from the United States. Meanwhile, vessels charters were made yesterday for 190,000 bushels of corn to go from Chicago to Buffalo and Georgian Bay. Charters to Georgian Bay were also made for 250,000 bushels of oats.

Extension of wheat harvesting in the southern hemisphere, with Argentina offering wheat freely to Europe at cheaper prices, acted as a weight on the wheat market. However, sellers were as a rule disposed to be cautious pending developments in farm legislation at Washington.

Provisions averaged a little lower, reflecting the action of hog values.

SHIPMENT SUGAR LOWER

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(Canadian Press).—There was not much activity in the raw sugar market yesterday, and while spot prices remained unchanged at 3.96 duty paid, shipment sugars were a little lower. The only sale reported was 17,500 bags of Phillipines for December-January shipment to an operator at 9.93 delivered.

Except for some steadiness early, raw sugar futures were a little easier, closing with net decline of 1 to 4 points. Trading was not very active, and a considerable part of it was in the form of exchanging from the near to the more distant positions. Approximate sales 39,050 tons. December closed 3.09; Jan. 2.00; March 2.13; May 2.20; July 2.29; Sept. 2.36; Dec. 2.41.

The refined market was unchanged at 5.25 for fine granulated. Withdrawals on old contracts were of liberal proportions, but new business was light. The sugar institute placed the meltings of 15 United States refiners for the week ending Nov. 24 at 84,240 long tons, as against 81,893 tons for the same week last year.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, December 5. — An active trade was done in all grades of eggs and prices were steady with the declines noted by larger dealers on Monday. Due to the steady inward movement of fresh eggs from British Columbia the trade has revised its quotations to country shippers in Ontario for fresh deliveries this week. Prices to the retail trade are unchanged with the exception of a drop in values for fresh firsts which have been marked down to 60 cents per dozen. Shippers' quotations are ruling at 55c to 60c per dozen for fresh extras and at 50c to 52c per dozen for fresh firsts. Owing to continuance of mild weather the trade is looking forward to an increase in current production throughout Ontario. Dealers are bearing down on prices this week owing to the steady inward movement to Eastern markets of fresh egg grades which has relieved the local situation to a larger extent.

It will be noted from the above that there has been a steady decrease in butter holdings, which are down approximately 32,000 boxes for the month of November. Cheese stocks show a drop of around 3,000 boxes and fresh egg stocks have been reduced to a little over 2,000 cases. Cold storage eggs register a much more liberal decrease, roughly 32,000 cases having been withdrawn during the month of November.

The local butter market yesterday reported a fair amount of business passing at prices which were steady to a shade higher for finest creamery. In a jobbing way values were marked up ¼c per pound for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids, widening the range of prices from 40¾c to 41½c per pound. Dealers anticipate no shortage of butter from now until the end of the present year, and continue to look for higher prices later on.

With inquiry for cheese limited on spot and with English importers showing an indifferent attitude to Canadian cheese at present levels, this division of the produce market is quiet. Seaboard prices are working lower, but the local market, owing to lack of business, is unchanged. Quotable rate for No. 1 large colored, paraffined and Government graded, is from 21¼c to 21¾c per pound, delivered basis.

KING PASSED FAIR NIGHT

the King's temperature has been rising the world has obtained no information other than that contained in official bulletins.

Yesterday morning the view of the doctors was that the King had a chance, but that his unsatisfactory pulse—it is significant that the pulse has never been mentioned in bulletins—and the weakness of the muscles of his heart, made the case one on which no definite opinion was possible.

Late Sunday night and early Monday morning the doctor expected the end to come at any moment owing to weakness of the heart, the microbes of the lung disease in the blood having weakened that organ. But oxygen, strychnine and saline injections pulled the King through the night.

CHEVROLET TRUCK BACKS INTO WINDOW

Driver Cranked Engine When Vehicle Was in Reverse Gear.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 5. — Now that horses have given place to motor vehicles, the latter sometimes follow the example of some of the more unruly of their predecessors. Just before noon yesterday, a Chevrolet truck backed into a plate glass window, shattering the glass to innumerable fragments.

The truck was stopped on the west side of Front street, and when the driver was ready to proceed he cranked the engine. But it was in reverse gear, and the truck shot backwards across the street and into the plate glass window of the Birmingham hardware. The window is about six feet by ten, and of heavy plate glass. George Philpin, the driver, tried to climb aboard the truck and turn off the ignition but a child who was inside the truck was trying to get out, and the driver's efforts were thus hindered until it was too late. He immediately went into the store and gave his name and address, producing his license when requested by Chief Light, who arrived on the scene. The truck is from the district of Codrington, ten miles south of this town.

CORONERS JURY FREES F. REHA FROM BLAME

refinery. They had not been friends and had gone hunting once before. This had been about a month earlier. The shot gun, he claimed, was one he had borrowed from Herbert Crawford. On the previous trip he had used a .22 rifle, which had also been a borrowed firearm. On the last occasion which had ended in a fatality, it had been Reha who had suggested they go hunting. They had arranged to meet at his house before ten o'clock, and had gone up the river. It was while on their homeward journey that the accident had happened.

Saw Reha Step Out

In his own words, Emigh related the events. They had not had a shot at anything during their entire tramp. Coming to a hill they had each gone around one side hoping to beat up something to shoot. He, Emigh, saw a blue jay rise from a tree and decided to try his marksmanship at it, since nothing else had shown up and he did not want to have his trip without at least one shot. He took aim at the bird which was on the wing, and just as he pulled the trigger, he saw Reha step out from behind the tree. It was too late then, he said.

He saw Reha sink to the ground and ran to him. The stricken man only said three things, he claimed. He called for his wife and his child and asked Emigh what he had done. As the witness spoke these words, Mrs. Emigh sobbed aloud, but with remarkable control, recovered her composure and listened eagerly to the remainder of the story. Emigh told of trying to carry his wounded friend but not being equal to the task. Then he took the guns and ran to the house and broke in the door, telling Mrs. Reha as he did so, what he had done. They had got help and returned for the injured man. Later he had re-visited the scene with the Provincial constables and described in detail to them just how the accident had happened. He had always been friends with Reha. "I never had a word with Frank," he said. Since the accident, he had been arrested and detained by the police, he said. The accident had occurred about half-past two in the afternoon of November 30.

Post Mortem Examination.

Dr. David Thompson, Marmora, who had performed the post mortem, was called to report on his findings. He had not known the deceased, he said. In his report he described Frank Reha as twenty-five years of age, one hundred and fifty pounds in weight, dark hair, and brown eyes. The examination had been made fifteen hours after death. There were thirty small marks on front of left chest in the region of the heart. The back of the left hand also showed numerous wounds from the same cause. The first phalanx of the ring finger was fractured. There was post mortem staining on the back. The plural cavity on the left side contained about a quart and a half of fluid. The left lung had collapsed, due to the pressure of the fluid. Fine shot had been taken from the fluid. Small shot had been found in the heart sac. Everything else was found to be normal. Frank Reha's death was caused by the penetration of small shot.

Dr. Hamilton Crawford, Delora, testified that he was the physician who had attended Reha. He had not known him, although he remembered having seen him on the street. He had been called about half-past two on the afternoon of November 30 and had found the man lying about half a mile up the river and close to the bank. He had made a hasty examination of the wounds and ordered his removal to the plant hospital. There had not been much hemmorhage, and at first the case had not appeared serious. He would not say that Reha he had made requests at time for re had made requests at times for water. Dr. Crawford described the treatment he had given and said that death had occurred about midnight on the same night.

Provincial Constable H. T. Hammer, Belleville, said he had investigated the affair on November 30 and December 1. Darkness had fallen on the first day before he had completed his observations. He had secured a statement from Emigh while the latter was detained in the Marmora gaol. After looking over the scene of the shooting, the constable was satisfied that the man could not have been seen till he stepped from behind the tree as Emigh had described. He was of the opinion that the shooting had been entirely accidental. Investigation regarding the relations between the two men showed that they were friends.

After a brief address from the Crown Attorney, and being formally charged by the coroner, the jury retired. Nine minutes later they filed back into the court-room with the verdict which made Emigh once more a free man.

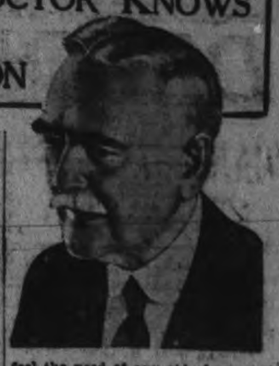
OBITUARY

FRANK REHA.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Dec. 5.—The funeral of Frank Reha, victim of the lamentable shooting accident which occurred near Deloro last Friday took place on Monday afternoon. St. Paul's Church was well filled as the cortege arrived. The principal mourners were the widow and little daughter and the parents of the deceased Mr. and Mrs. A. Reha. The casket was surmounted with beautiful flowers, fellow employees acting as bearers. The service was conducted by the rector, Rev. A. B. Caldwell, who delivered a consoling message from I Chron. XXLX 15: "We are strangers before Thee and sojourners as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are a shadow, and there is none abiding." The three points dwelt upon were the fleeting character of our earthly life, the believers support under the transitionness of the present life and the believer's home after this life is passed. Familiar hymns were sung. Burial was made in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

WHAT A DOCTOR KNOWS ABOUT CONSTIPATION



There is a way of overcoming the tendency to constipation. And here is how you can PROVE it.

The next time your bowels need any assistance, don't take the first laxative that comes to mind. Take one the druggist can assure you is made with CASCARA. Just as effective as using force, and it's good for the system. Indeed, it helps make good blood. For cascara is nothing but the bark of a tree. The Indians chew this bark, and live to an old age without a day's sickness.

What happens when you cascarize the bowels? They will usually function well for SEVERAL DAYS. One more dose—no larger, and perhaps no smaller than the first—and the bowels function of their own accord for a still longer time. Until you don't feel the need of any aid of any sort for weeks-on-end.

So, the only habit you get from cascara is that of natural and normal regularity. How different from things one must usually repeat on the morrow! Cascara is the ideal laxative; and the familiar little candy Cascaret is doubtless its ideal form. Children beg for these tasty tablets, and many men and women wouldn't think of taking ANYTHING else for the purpose.

And EVERY drugstore has them.

DELORO MAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT, SAYS JURY

CANADIAN DISTILLERS INDICTED AT UNITED STATES' INQUIRY OF SMUGGLING LIQUOR AT BORDER

Several Well Known Brewers Named in U. S. Grand Jury Indictments.

TORONTO FIRMS.

Washington Authorities Propose To Wage War Against Smuggling Ring.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 5 (A.P.).—More than a score of well-known distillers and brewers, with several large distilling and brewing companies of Canada were named in indictments reported yesterday by a Federal Grand Jury. The indictments charged conspiracy to smuggle liquor into the United States.

Among the more prominent indictments were Harry C. Hatch, chairman of Gooderham and Worts, of Toronto, and the Hiram Walker Company of Windsor. Both these companies recently merged to create the largest distilling company in the world, also were named in the indictments.

Others indicted include: Herbert C. Hatch, and Larry J. McGuinness, members of the liquor firm of Hatch and McGuinness, Toronto; Edward T. Sandell, president of the Taylor and Bate Brewery, St. Catharines, Ont.; C. A. Savard, Windsor, Ont.; Stanley B. Sutton, Simcoe, Ont., and Jules Thibideau, Port Lamberton, Ont.

Others Held

Twenty other men, all held to be identified with the liquor smuggling traffic between Canada and the United States were named in the indictments, but United States Attorney Templeton declined to make their names public until arrests have been made.

The indictments reported yesterday are declared to be the opening guns in a major war which Washington authorities propose to wage against what is called a big Canadian smuggling ring, said to have shipped liquor valued at more than $26,000,000 into the United States in the past year.

Half a dozen investigations are now being pressed by the division of foreign control of the Treasury Department, with the result that indictments are expected shortly which may involve not only other persons nigh in the liquor smuggling traffic, but officials of telegraph and railroad companies as well.

Liquor smuggling over the Canadian border, in opinion of Prohibition Commissioner Doran presents the most serious problem in dry law enforcement to-day. To correct it, he suggests a revision of the treaty with the Dominion to prevent Canada from clearing liquor cargoes to this country.

CONTROL BOARD HAS NEW PLAN

Will Form Company in Which All Ontario Exporters Will Be Members.

ELIMINATE BOOTLEGGING.

TORONTO, Ont., December 5 (Special to The Examiner). — Pressure will likely be used by the Ontario Liquor Control Board in an effort to get a greater measure of control into the export of beer and liquor from this province.

The Board and the Federal Customs Department take the view that the formation of a big company in which all the Ontario exporters will be members is one of the effective steps to the establishment of such control and the elimination of bootlegging and short circuiting.

If any of the thirty-eight breweries and distillers in Ontario prove to be balky the Ontario Control Board has a trump card up its sleeve, all ready to play, according to information today. The card is to cut the balky ones off the list of firms from which Ontario buys for its hundred liquor stores.

The month of November has been a particularly busy one when compared with last year, according to Plumbing Inspector Metheral, who this morning furnished the following interesting totals regarding the work of his department. LONDON, England, Dcember 5. — Canadian Press. — An anxious public learned to-day when the medical bulletin of the King's physicians was issued that His Majsty was suffering from renewed activity of infction in his chest. Previously improvement in this condition had been noted. To-day it was said that this was what caused the rise in temperature yesterday.

There was a measure of relief, however, in the announcement that there were reasons for hoping the recrudescence was being moderated, and that the King had had a comfortable night.

The bulletin said nothing regarding the King's temperature, nor was any mention made as to how his heart was reacting to the long strain. Recently it has been strongly reiterated that his heart was the vital point on which the King's chances for recovery rested.

In the palace the physicians' morning report was regarded favorably. It was said recrudescence of infection was part of the normal course of the illness, and had been expected by the physicians.

No Afternoon Bulletin.

Lord Dawson of Penn, returned to Buckingham Palace shortly after two o'clock this afternoon to join Sir Stanley Hewett, in consultation on the King's condition. It was stated that an afternoon bulletin, which was issued yesterday, was not expected to-day.

Lord Dawson remained at the Palace about an hour. Soon after his visit the Queen and Princess Mary went for their usual afternoon motor ride.

It was understood at Buckingham Palace this afternoon that the King's condition was unchanged.

Patents Sealed.

Letters patent under the great seal in connection with yesterday's appointment of six counsellors of State have been sealed and to-day Queen Mary, Premier Baldwin and the Duke of York signed various documents which have accumualted during the King's illness.

A despatch from Aden, Arabia, says the Prince of Wales arrived there at noon to-day aboard the cruiser Enterprise. He appeared in good health and much sunburnt.

VALETTA, Malta, Dec. 5.—(Canadian Press.)—It was understood here to-day that the Prince of Wales would not transfer to the cruiser Frobisher from the cruiser Enterprise which is bringing him from Dares Salaam, Tanganyika. He was expected to go directly to Brindisi, Italy, on the Enterprise. The Frobisher meanwhile, would remain at Alexandria, in case she were required.

WORKMAN DROPS DEAD AT AUBURN

John Kemp, Trusted Employe, Dies From Heart Failure.

John Kemp, 158 Smith Street, dropped dead of heart failure at the Auburn Woollen Mills plant during the noon lunch hour to-day. It is said that Mr. Kemp had eaten his dinner, and at about 12.30 went outside to get some fresh air when his heart suddenly failed and he died within a very few minutes.

Dr. J. M. O'Brien answered the call, but the man was already dead when he reached the plant. Mr. Kemp had been a long and trusted employee of the Auburn Woollen Mills and was chief of the warp dressing room.

CANADIAN LEGION ASKS COUNTY COUNCIL TO RECONSIDER ACTION

Trent Waterways Association Seeks Grant of $200—Work Is Outlined.

COMMUNICATIONS READ.

First Strikes Note of Misery and Adversity in Fragmentary Discussion.

The County Council began its December sessions on Tuesday afternoon in its customary unceremonious way.

One of the first communications struck a note of adversity and misery in a fragmentary discussion of a broken, misspent life, the unpleasant story of a man who has become a charge upon the community.

"He was a good worker when he was sober," said one of the reeves, and the inference was plain that the unfortunate had spent his earnings and undermined his health by long continued carousals. To-day cold, official charity is grudgingly held out to him, one municipality passing him on to another until finally the cost of the care he needed and received falls upon the County.

"He never received as much attention in his life as he's getting now," one of the members of the Council remarked. And he came near to the truth, except that this man often was thrust upon the attention of the police magistrate.

"His home was wherever he hung his hat," was one of the expressions casually jotted down as the discussion rambled on.

"And very often he had no place to hang it," said another. "You might have found him many a night out under the sumachs back of the jail."

He even found shelter in the corridors of the Court House, sleeping on the hardwood floors and going for days, almost a week, at one time, without food.

A tale for tears to all who endorse Burns' line, "A man's a man for a' that."

The City Council will be asked to pay half the bill which has been referred to the County.

Request From Legion.

James Abraham urged the Council to reconsider its action last June in withholding this year the grant to the Canadian Legion which the County has made for a long time. He recounted some of the unwritten activities of the Legion in assisting ex-service men and the families of others. The Legion had put into effect rigid economies in its own affairs, and needed the money which the municipalities might see fit to grant.

"We feel we need it now as much as ever," said Mr. Abraham, "and on behalf of the Legion members, I ask you to give our request some further consideration."

It was referred to the Finance Committee.

An account from John T. Hornsby, Lindsay architect, for plans of some alterations in the county jail was received through the provincial secretary. It was explained that the changes had been made upon instructions from sheriff F. J. A. Hall, complying with the Department's program of precautions against jail deliveries.

Prix Garcourt Prize Awarded French Writer

PARIS, Dec. 5. — (Canadian Press.)— The much coveted Prix Goncourt has been awarded to Maurice Constantin Weyer of France for his psychological novel, "A Man Inclines Towards His Past," dealing with the Irish and French in Canada. The author, who was a resident of Manitoba for twelve years, hunted, farmed and travelled widely in North America. He then went back to France and took up newspaper work.

YOUNG PEOPLE IN CAR ACCIDENT

Party Were On Way To Visit Y.P.L.Y. of Cottesloe United Church.

VEHICLE RETURNS.

Seven young people of Peterborough enroute to visit the Young People's League of the Cottesloe United Church last evening, narrowly escaped serious injury, when the large car in which they were riding, turned completely over, and came to rest on its side, with the top a complete wreck, and the radiator cap torn off. The accident occurred as a result of the driver not expecting a "goose-neck" turn in the road at a point about two miles east of Warsaw. He attempted to make the unexpected second part of the turn, and the car skidded. Minor cuts and a severe shaking up were suffered by the occupants, who were able to return to the city in their car, under its own power. It is understood that this is the third accident to occur at the same turn cently. The evening was spent in passengers in the car feel strongly that some signal of danger should be placed at approaches to it.

The party includde Max Pomeroy (driver) of 171 Douro street; Misses Olive Delong, 51 River Road; Marjory Hamilton, Division street; Grace Currie, Armour Road, and Cleve Robb of 136 James street, Charles Bachelor and E. Forbes of 151 River Road.

OSHAWA, Dec. 5.—Missing from his home in Peterborough since last Thursday, Roy Walsh, aged 20, was finally located at the home of his brother, Leo Walsh, 115 Ritson Road South, Oshawa. Walsh had left home to go to Detroit with friends in an automobile to obtain work, without notifying his parents. It is expected that he will stay in Oshawa at the home of his brother for a few days.

PRINCES' DASH TO KING'S SIDE STIRS NATION

FROM AFRICA.

England Sees Tragedy in Absence of Two Sons of Monarch.

LONDON, Dec. 5 (Associated Press) —All England has been profoundly stirred by the drama of the dash of the Prince of Wales and his brother, the Duke of Gloucester, to the bedside of King George.

The King's "boys," as he lovingly called them, to-night were speeding from the far-off hunting fields of Africa to reach his side. Somewhere along the eastern coast of the Dark Continent north of Dar-es-Salaam the fast British warship Enterprise is ploughing homeward at full speed with the King's eldest son and heir aboard.

Although the Prince is speeding home as rapidly as possible, he probably will not reach London before December 12 or 13. Through the long trip he will be in constant touch with Queen Mary by radio.

Flying Boat Ready.

Far ahead at Alexandria, another cruiser was waiting to meet him and even a flying boat has been prepared if it should be advisable for him to complete the latter part of his journey by air.

News of the King's illness was brought by runners to the Duke of Gloucester down in the Bangweulu swamps of Northern Rhodesia, where he was hunting.

The young duke immediately made a break for rail communication by means of a canoe, which is the fastest transport available.

The Duke's race will be fraught with difficulties, but, like his brother the Prince of Wales, he never gives ground at obstacles.

England can scarcely remember such another tragic drama, and it has stirred her to the depths.

Greeting For Duke.

BWANA NKABWA, Rhodesia, Dec. 5 (Associated Press).—The Duke of Gloucester passed through here on a train bound for Victoria Falls.

The Duke was taking a bath as the train pulled into the station. When he greeted the local reception committee he was garbed in a dressing gown and was briskly rubbing the moisture from his face and hands.

Drinking the health of the Duke being in order, he smilingly tipped a bottle to his lips and passed it to members of the committee, who were unanimous in declaring him a jolly good fellow.

S. A. GILROY IS NEW PRESIDENT

Lambton County Man Is Head of United Farmers' Co-operative Company.

DEFEATED LAST YEAR.

TORONTO, Dec. 5. — (Canadian Press.)—S. A. Gilroy, Lambton County, was elected president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company at the annual meeting here to-day. He had office in 1927 and was defeated last year by James Ross, Woodbridge, who with four others contested office to-day.

G. W. Buchanan, Lanark, Harold Currie, Middlesex and Herbert Miller, Renfrew, were elected to the Board of Directors. R. J. McMillan was elected vice-president and J. J. Morrison was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Lowered membership but financial retrenchment which more than compensated for the loss of revenue, was recorded for past year which faced the United Farmers of Ontario.

Strong resentment at action of the Ontario Government in not including U.F.O. in the itinerary planned for the 500 young farmers whom it recently brought to Royal Winter Fair, was expressed by secretary J. J. Morrison. Mr. Morrison opposed the motion to extend the invitation to the government in anticipation of next year's visit but was overruled. Next year Government will be asked to bring young farmers to co-operative headquarters.

CORONER'S JURY FREES FRANK REHA FROM BLAME IN DEATH OF JOHN EMIGH

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

DELORO, December 5. — John Wesley Emigh, held on a nominal charge in connection with the death of Frank Reha, was freed of all blame for the fatality by a coroner's jury of eight men after they had deliberated for nine minutes. From the beginning, the inquiry into the affair required less than three-quarters of an hour.

"We, the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of Frank Reha, find that he came to his death on November 30th, at Deloro Hospital, as the result of wounds received on that day when he was accidentally shot by a charge from a shot gun in the hands of John Wesley Emigh."

"Is that all?" the coroner asked when Harry Loveless, foreman of the jury, had finished reading. He was apparently somewhat surprised at the brevity of the official statement. When the official document had been signed by all the jurors, Emigh was allowed to leave the court room, free of any cloud which might have been hanging over him in connection with the affair.

There were approximately thirty people present in the auditorium of the Town Hall in Deloro to hear the story of the tragedy. Well toward the front in an aisle seat on the side aisle sat the young widow with her child. Half way back in the same aisle, sat the man who had fired the fatal shot. There was marked contrast between the two. The slim figure in black gave her evidence in a clear voice, and only once did the tears come. That was when Emigh told of the words her husband had spoken when he fell to the ground after receiving the fatal charge. But she quickly recovered her composure. Emigh displayed the nervous tension from which he was suffering. Inspector Lougheed, Provincial Police, and S. B. Wright, general manager of smelting plant, were also present at the hearing. At the rear of the centre aisle of seats was seated the mother of the youth whose fate was in the balance.

Dr. W. H. Harper, Madoc, was the coroner presiding. B. C. Donan, county Crown attorney from Belleville, adduced the evidence. George Frank O'Neil, county constable for the County of Hastings, was the first witness to be called. He said he had known the deceased, Frank Reha, and had viewed the remains before the post-mortem examination. He had also assisted the provincial officers in making their investigation.

Married Three Years

Bertha Reha, widow of the deceased, was allowed to be seated while being questioned by the Crown. She said she had been married in Canada three years ago, September 5, 1925. She had one daughter who was two years old on June 5th, 1928. She and her husband's friends. She had been the twenty-fifth of June two years ago. She also knew Emigh. He had come to the house two or three times with her husband, and she had always understood that he was one of her husband's friends. She had been aware that they were going hunting on the day of the fatality. Asked regarding the gun her husband had carried, Mrs. Reha identfied the gun which had been placed as exhibit A. She also identfied a leather mitt as the property of her husband. The gun was her husband's, she said. He had often gone hunting, but this was the first year he had done any of it since they had been married. She had seen her husband after the accident for she had gone to where Emight had left him when he ran back to the village for help. He seemed to be unconscious and unable to speak. He had, however, uttered a few words, but she did not think he knew what he was saying. He had said that he was going to die, complained of a pain in his stomach and asked for a drink of water. She had been one who had helped bring him to the hospital. The accident had happened about three-quarters of a mile from their home, she thought. Emigh and a man named Feitz had carried him most of the way. Then the crowd arrived and she was unable to say who all had helped carry him.

John Wesley Emigh was the third witness called. He gave his age as twenty-one and said he had lived in Delora all his life. His father was dead, but his mother was living in the village. He had worked at the plant about two years and had known Reha about four months. During that time they had worked together at the Satisfactory reports of financial and other business, including changes in the public school staff, were received at a decidedly brief but busy meeting of the Board of Education, held last night in the library of the Collegiate Institute and Vocational school with every member of the Board in attendance. Particularly satisfactory were the reports of medical inspections and of attendance in the various schools, and the Board was pleased to welcome back to the office, Chairman E. Bruce Fowler who had been absent through illness on past occasions.

ATTENDANCE REPORTS.

The communications included applications and acceptances of positions on the school staff while one from the pastor of the Bethany Tabernacle requested use of the little chapel near Queen Alexandra school for Sunday school classes. The building having been vacated by the George street Sunday school. E. F. Reid spoke in favor of the request and on his motion it was acceded to on condition that the necessary regulations regarding its upkeep be complied with.

The reception of reports brought to the Board much information and many accounts to be passed upon, the various committees reporting through their chairman. Doctors McPherson and Green reported considerable activity in medical and dental inspection work while Inspector A. Mowat and Principal H. R. H. Kenner, of the Collegiate Institute and Vocational school reported attendance as follows:—

SETTLING THE WEST.

The extent to which the open spaces in the Prairie Provinces have been filled up in recent months is shown by the statement from the Department of the Interior, that during the first ten months of this year land amounting to 1,800,000 acres has been taken up by settlers.

What such an influx means can best be appreciated by a realization that if these new settlers have reasonable success in their operations the wheat yield of the West will be increased by some 20,000,000 bushels, and the national wealth will show a corresponding growth of $20,000,000.

More than 11,000 families (11,521 to be exact), totalling 30,015 people, have this year taken possession of free land in the three Western Provinces—a notable contribution to the future growth of the Prairie Provinces.

The rate at which the free lands are being disposed off justifies the prediction that in ten or twelve years all the quarter-sections at present surveyed will have gone, and in this connection the Globe issues a timely warning to Canadians in the East to realize their opportunity before it is too late.

NO HESITATION OVER THIS.

No hesitation is likely to be shown by the ratepayers in deciding that the bylaw providing a fixed assessment of $10,000 for ten years for the Johnson Outboard Motor Company is a measure entirely worthy of support.

In return for this concession, which has been granted without quibbling in the case of other local industries, the Johnson Company will undertake to begin manufacturing here, not only to take care of their Canadian trade and that of the British Isles, but eventually for export to other parts of the British Empire.

The company is foremost in its field, and there is every reason for confidence in the rapid growth and expansion of its Peterborough plant and the development of the latter into an outstanding industry, employing much skilled labor and advertising this city the world over.

The Johnson enterprise, in a word, is much too good a proposition to lose, and The Examiner has confidence enough in the judgment of the people of Peterborough to predict that on New Year's Day they will show most emphatically that this is the kind of industry they believe should be encouraged and retained.

THAT SERVICE STATION.

It is submitted on behalf of the new service station proposed for George street opposite Confederation Square that it will be the best looking structure of its kind in the city.

That statement will readily be accepted in view of the manner in which rival companies are vieing with each other in the competition to produce the most ornate plants possible.

But granting all that, The Examiner does not believe that a site on Peterborough's principal street and facing a park that will eventually be the most beautiful in the city is the proper location for such a business enterprise no matter how much paint and how many bright lights may be involved, nor does the fact that there are other features in the same block that do not fit in excuse the addition of a still further cause for complaint.

A service station in the middle of the block on a street where traffic is at its heaviest and where hundreds of children en route to and from school, the Public Library and other buildings in the vicinity are already facing many accident hazards, would add another element of danger to a situation already menacing enough.

No matter how beautiful the building may look on the company's plans the site chosen is not in the best interests of the public, and the public's interest should be paramount when this and similar propositions are under consideration.

THE GAS PLANT PROPOSITION.

Believing that it would be good business for Peterborough to have the gas plant municipally owned and operated rather than have it pass into the hands of a private company with all that would be involved in the transfer of such a liberal franchise, the City Council is asking the ratepayers of Peterborough to authorize the purchase of this utility and other local property owned by the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario.

The final price named by the Hydro Commission is $335,000, and the other property, valued at $39,500, which was not named in the first offer, is included in this figure.

Members of the Council have satisfied themselves that this is a reasonable price for the utility, and it is believed that the gas plant, which has been operating under Hydro control and showing a considerable surplus, could be profitably run as a city enterprise, and on the returns for last year, could meet the interest charges and the yearly instalment of principal and still produce a surplus of some $9,500.

The alternative to municipal ownership is to allow the gas plant to be picked up by a private company, which in acquiring the utility would also come into possession of a franchise that no municipality would nowadays dream of granting and which would have no competition and no check upon its rates.

Along with the gas plant goes property that would be of considerable value to the city, and this is another consideration that will enter into the situation when the ratepayers are deciding how their ballots should be marked.

NO LIMITS FOR CANADA.

By the middle of December, it is estimated, 500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat will have been dispatched to India through Vancouver. In comparison with this year's record aggregate shipment from the Pacific port, the amount is trifling. It nevertheless represents a movement of profound significance, the beginning of commercial shipments of wheat from Canada to India, one of the world's great wheat-growing countries. Report says that the hardier Canadian grain is to be used experimentally in two directions, one exclusively in catering to a possible market for a higher grade of flour, the other to mix with the softer Indian grades for their improvement. Apparently no one directly interested desires to be dogmatically assertive on the outcome. Yet there is a feeling that the far eastern market for Canadian wheat has possibilities beyond computation.

Coincidentally, and with a storage capacity of 10,000,000 bushels, Vancouver shipping interests fear congestion of traffic. A few years ago that possibility would have been outside the realm of discussion even. To date this year, more than 20,000,000 bushels of grain have been shipped from this port, mostly destined for old world lands, compared with 7,600,000 bushels for the corresponding period of 1927. Early next month a new elevator of 1,000,000 bushels capacity will be in commission, which will help to relieve the strain. But shipping men are urging that the construction of additional jetties and more storage facilities must be immediately undertaken. That is their view of the future of the trade of Vancouver.

There are other developments on the Canadian Pacific coast that have much promise. One is the recent establishment at Victoria of a plant for the manufacture of worsteds. It is a British venture with strong backing, the kind of industry that promises for the West new phases of development along sound lines. There are no known limits to present and potential possibilities for Canadian trade and industrial expansion.—Brantford Expositor.

NEWS MUST BE CLOSELY GUARDED.

The newspapers have rights which must be respected, and that they are entitled to legal protection against persons who supply them with false news items, for personal gain, was borne out in judgment recently handed down by Mr. Justice Walsh at Calgary, Alta., in a case brought by the Calgary Herald against the A. G. Barnes Corporation, Charles Cook and James VanShyke.

The action arose from a fraud perpetrated by the Barnes people on June the 10th, 1927, who caused to be delivered to the Herald office a faked dispatch to the effect that the Barnes Corporation was considering the expenditure of a huge sum of money on a movie picture enterprise in Calgary. It was accepted in good faith and published. Later it was found that there was no truth in the story.

In pronouncing judgment in the case, His Lordship declared that the defendants' conduct was reprehensible, and constituted a deliberate, a fraudulent and unfortunately a successful attempt to impose on the plaintiff as an item of news and to give publicity to it as an item of news, something which to their knowledge had no foundation—in fact, something which they apparently conjured up and exploited for their own purpose of self-advertising.

Further comments by the presiding judge were very interesting and elucidating. He said:

"One of the most valuable assets of a newspaper is its reliability, and anything which seeks to undermine the confidence of the public in a newspaper as a purveyor of public news is something which is wrong.

"One who intentionally and fraudulently causes a newspaper to become the innocent disseminator of false news, does it a wrong for which it is entitled to recover damages."

His Lordship in estimating the damages did not compel the paper to prove pecuniary loss through the publication of the false article. He assessed the damages at $2,500 partly to reimburse the newspaper and at the same time to punish the wrongdoers. This case will be interesting not only to newspaper proprietors, but also to the public at large.

Most newspapermen who have been following the profession for any length of time can remember well the days when the practical joker thought it an extremely funny thing to "stuff the reporters" and cause them to publish untrue items, which sometimes had a damaging effect upon the victims of the false news thus contributed. Those days are fast disappearing, and it is just as well for the practical jokers that this form of joke is losing its power to produce a merriment, in the light of this judgment, which makes it clear that all such bearers of false news are liable to punishment and the payment of damages.

A newspaper is in the greatest sense a public institution. While it may be published by certain persons, it really belongs to the people of the community in which it appears. It is their paper, and they have a right to demand that the news which appears in it is as accurate as it is possible for it to be. The person who engineers a false item through a newspaper is committing a wrong not only to the publishers, but to the public as well, and it is only just that he should be made to pay for the wrong that such an item is capable of creating.—Belleville Intelligencer.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Whoever may be in the field for municipal offices, the two bylaws to be voted on will provide the electors with a real incentive to exercise their franchise on New Year's Day.

It must be admitted that the cold waves the West sends down are much more formidable than the football teams from the Prairie Provinces.

Public opinion is a bad thing to run foul of, and the Barrie Hydro chairman who was defeated by 1,914 votes to 195 will be the first to admit that fact.

As a result of the protest of Simcoe County Council, no snow-plowing will be done on the Provincial highways in that county. This is one instance where the cutter and the bob-sleigh have scored a victory over the more modern means of transportation.

Despite the high cost of paved highways, the people of Ontario still demand more, neglectful of Premier Ferguson's frequent warning that they'll have to pay for them.

Peterborough is showing no signs of awakening to the fact that the municipal election is but a month away.

A Thought

DEPENDABLE PEOPLE

The world depends upon dependable persons. A reputation for being reliable is the key to most of life's successes. Friends, work, honor, all gravitate to the reliable person. Being reliable is not easy, surface work. It takes day after day and year after year of patient acceptance of responsibility, of picking up the threads that the careless drop, of being in place and on hand in emergencies where others fail, of doing uninteresting, faithful work that others tire of and slight—it takes all this to make the dependable man and woman known and valued. But how good they are to know, and how valuable. To be depended on, and not to fail anyone who trusts us—this is worth living for and makes life better worth the living.

GOD'S MINUTE.

For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing.—11 Tim. 4:6-8.

Give to us a larger vision of Thy glory and make us more faithful to Thee and to the needs of our fellow-men. Teach us how to pray.

Give us more faith and love. Give us clearer vision to see the deeper meaning of Thy truth. Bless our land, and Thy Church in all lands. Bless the young, the aged, the sick and the troubled. Fill our hearts with sympathy and hope. Let us live to be of service to Thee, and to our fellow-men. Thine shall be the kingdom, the power and the glory, for we ask in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

LIKE YOUR MOTHER

I'm not complaining of the styles,
Of women wearing more or less,
But you can't blame the man who smiles
When people talk of proper dress.
I've seen them walking down the street,
The decent girl, the brazen kid,
But not a one has looked as sweet
To me as their own mothers did.

Not cotton now but silk to wear.
And brighter plumage than of old,
And yet there's something missing there
That women ought to try to hold.
Though I'm not wise enough to say
Just what the lovely secret is,
A girl one never sees today
As sweet as some old girl of his—

As sweet as one more sweet than all.
Of course, I like your dress and hat,
Although the hat is rather small,
The dress is rather short, at that.
And yet I'm puzzled, daughter mine,
A little troubled, too, because
I wish you looked as pure, as fine,
As gentle, as your mother was.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLIX

Then one evening, as she was walking along by the sea with the sunset light in her face, Julie met Schofield.

He was upon her before she recognized him, or she would have turned and fled, and after the first panic-stricken moment she just shrugged her shoulders and stood calmly waiting for him to speak. He looked ill, she thought, and old, and as her eyes searched his face it seemed impossible that only a few days ago she had seen him and talked to him. Surely months must have dragged away since she told him he must go out of her life.

Schofield gripped her wrist with fingers that bruised, as he said hoarsely: "Thank God I've found you!"

Julie managed a laugh.

"Do you know that you actually sound sincere?" she taunted him.

"I was never more sincere in my life. Where can we go to be alone? I have so much to say to you.

Julie glanced down the almost deserted sea-front.

"If you have anything to say that must be said, I hardly think anyone will overhear you. But I am in a hurry ——" Her voice broke angrily. "Why are you here at all?"

"We have been hunting for you ever since you left London." His agitation was unmistakable; she could feel how his hand shook as he held her wrist.

Julie laughed again.

"We?" she queried.

"Yes—Giles Chfttenham and myself."

"Giles Chittenham?" The color died from her face. "I am indeed honored," she said with a bitter sneer.

Schofield winced as if she had hurt him.

"Don't talk like that. If you only knew——Oh, Julie, for God's sake let me explain—let me try to explain!"

"There is nothing to explain—nothing I want to hear."

"You don't mean that. It is not like you to be hard and cruel."

She tried to free herself.

"Let me go. You and I have finished with each other."

"Yes." He released her wrist, but now she made no effort to leave him. There was a haunting sadness in his eyes that held her against her will. "But there is still Chittenham," he said very quietly.

Julie tried to speak, but no words would come, and before she could resist he had drawn her down to sit beside him on one of the seats overlooking the sea, and was holding her hand in both his.

"We've been searching for you day and night, Julie. It seems a lifetime since you went away."

"A lifetime! Only two weeks!"

"Sometimes two days can be an eternity," he told her with unusual eloquence. He did not heed her when she tried to interrupt him; he went on rapidly.

"So much seems to have happened since—since you and I parted. You know——" He stopped abruptly, only to go on again with quiet deliberation. "Chittenham's wife is dead—Chittenham is free."

Julie tried to speak, but her lips felt too cold to frame any words. She sat staring before her at the fading sunset with a sense of numbed unreality.

Chittenham's wife was dead! Sadie dead! Sadie! Sadie to have died like the butterfly she had been, after a few short hours of vain fluttering in the sunshine!

Like a voice in a dream she heard Schofield speaking again.

"We've searched for you everywhere—Miss Lennox——"

"O —Bim!" A little sob broke from Julie's lips.

Bim had never failed her—the only friend who had not. He went on without noticing the interruption.

"We've searched everywhere—Miss Lennox and Chittenham and I. It is pure chance that I came here to-day. Something seemed to force me to come."

"Poor Lawrence!" Julie whispered.

He winced and turned away his face. "I've been a fool—all my own fault—and yet, you never cared for me, Julie; I always knew that you never cared."

"I don't care for anyone," she said harshly. "I will never care for anyone again. It hurts too much—it's not worth the little happiness one gets flung to one in return."

They were both silent for a moment, then she broke out feverishly:

"Why did you send my letter back to me? Why were you so cruel?"

He told her unhesitatingly.

"A man named Lombard came to me with a lying story about you and Giles Chittenham. He said that you and he spent the night together on the St. Bernard." He turned his sad eyes to her. "Forgive me, Julie—I must have been mad to have believed it!"

"Forgive you? I don't understand—what do you mean?"

Then suddenly she knew, and the blood rushed in a burning tide to her face.

"You thought—that?" she whispered.

"Yes."

The last streak of sunset warmth had faded, and there was a chill wind blowing in from the sea. Julie shivered and rose to her feet.

"It's cold, I must go."

"Let me come with you, Julie. Now I've found you, don't send me away like this—without saying you forgive me."

"It cannot matter to you whether I forgive you or not."

"It matters everything in the world, Julie. If there is anything I can do for you—anything, anything—to make amends for the past——"

Julie half-smiled as she looked at him. It mattered so little to her that he had been unjust; he had never had any real power to hurt her; forgiveness between them would be an easy thing.

She touched his hand with sudden kindliness.

"Don't let us say any more about it, Lawrence. It's over and done with. We'll part friends, shall we"

"And you will come back with me to England?" he asked eagerly.

Her face grew cold.

"Come back—to England? I never want to go back again."

"But Julie—your happiness——"

She laughed mirthlessly.

"There is no happiness for me. That's all finished. Don't look so tragic. We must all live our own lives and work out our own salvation—if there is such a thing. I'm glad to have seen you again. It hurt, the way you sent me about my business."

"I shall never forgive myself, Julie."

"You must; there isn't really anything to forgive. I wasn't too kind to you either, Lawrence."

"You gave me the only happiness I have ever known, and that is why I want to give you your happiness."

She drew back sharply.

"Why—what do you mean?"

"That I want to take you back to Chittenham. He's a fine fellow, Julie, and you mean everything in the world to him. There was a time when I hated him, but lately, now we understand each other, I can see why I never stood a chance where he was concerned."

"What do you mean? How dare you say such things to me?"

"I dare anything if it means your happiness."

"My happiness is no concern of yours" She turned and began to walk away from him. Her heart was beating fast and her eyes burnt with the tears which she dared not let fall. Chittenham was free—the words hammered against her heart and brain, but they gave her no happiness. What did his freedom matter to her? She would never forgive him—she never wished to see him again. At that moment she dreaded him more than anyone on earth; she felt that she could not put a great enough distance between her life and his.

Schofield was walking beside her, pleading earnestly.

"Don't throw away your happiness for foolish pride, my dear. Life is short, and it so seldom offers us anything worth having. Don't throw away the greatest thing that will ever come your way."

She looked at him scornfully.

"You pretend to love me yourself, and yet you plead with me like the hero of some story-book romance to go back—to another man," she taunted him.

He met her eyes steadily.

"I can do that only because I love you so much," he answered.

The tears suddenly blinded her.

"Oh, if you would only go away and leave me!" she said, almost sobbing.

She broke into a run, never stopping till she was safe in her own room again. But she knew Schofield had followed her; when she looked from the window she saw him crossing the neat little square with its beds of flaming geraniums and severe little wooden seats where the old people sat and dozed.

In the evening he called at the pension. He brought a large bunch of roses and he kissed her hands as she took the flowers from him.

"Say you forgive me, Julie!"

"Of course I forgive you!" But in her heart she knew that if she cared for him forgiveness would not have been possible.

"Of course I forgive you," she said again with an effort. "But in return you must promise me something, will you, Lawrence?"

"If I can—you know I will."

"Then promise me that you will not tell anyone in London where I am." He hesitated, and she said again sharply: "Most of all you must promise me not to tell Mr. Chittenham."

Schofield looked away from her.

"I have already wired to him. I wired this evening after you left me."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an uncertain day with benefic and adverse aspects in more or less conflict.

Early in the morning there is a good sign for ordinary domestic and business pursuits, but later much caution should be exercised.

The sway seems to presage delays and even misunderstandings where contracts, agreements and correspondence are concerned.

It is especially perilous to write a love letter under this direction of the stars. Women may be exceedingly exacting while this rule continues.

The afternoon should be an auspicious time for attention to land and property. Real estate is well directed.

There is a sign indicating that deceit and misrepresentation may be prevalent through this month when there will be many applicants for office or high place.

All who wield power or influence are subject to the best possible aspects at this time when those who occupy places in the Sun will benefit through national prosperity.

Milliners and modistes now come under better planetary vibrations which promise much work, inasmuch as there will be a trend on the part of women for individuality and special modes.

The seers have prophesied that America is to have a place in history as the home of the most beautiful women ever produced by any nation and they declare that the evolution of this super type is even now strongly revealed.

Again the stock market is to execute startling fluctuations and warning is given to beware of wild speculation.

Bankers continue under the most auspicious rule of the stars, making for world expansion, but new international problems will arise.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a really good year in which financial and domestic affairs are satisfactory.

Children born on this day probably will have exceedingly attractive personalities and bright minds. Both boys and girls may have the gift of eloquence as well as charm of manner. Usually the subjects of this sign have successful careers.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY BOYS QUIT SCHOOL

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Among questions from readers about the reasons for our conduct is a letter from a high school boy who wants to know if he should quit school, and then answers his own question by stating that he has already made up his mind to drop out and for me not to advise him to remain in school.

This letter suggested the title of "Why Boys quit School." Assuming that it is desirable for boys to remain in school there are only two possible sources of difficulty which lead them to quit. One has to do with the school, the other with the boy and his home.

The schools and the whole educational system are partly to blame for their inability to hold the interest of every boy and to give him something worth while. The difficulty is sometimes found in the personnel of some particular school staff. Some misunderstanding or open animosity between a teacher and the boy often leads to the boy's quitting school. But this does not account for all such cases in which the school is to blame. Our educational system is at fault in that it is of necessity designed to meet the needs of the average student. This means that the student who is different, one way or the other, is out of luck.

It sometimes happens that the methods and materials of the schools are poorly adapted to certain boys of peculiar make-up. There is nothing in the curriculum that interests them. They are bored and look upon school as an instrument of torture and are glad to quit the moment the law permits and sometimes before. Truancy and delinquency are due to this cause. When it becomes financially feasible to give individual instruction a large part of this difficulty will be done away with.

The major difficulty is with the boy and his home. Too often parents encourage boys to quit school in order to go to work. Not infrequently parents are found who look upon their children as an investment which should bear interest at the first possible moment.

Boys sometimes quit school to earn spending money, to buy the things that their parents cannot or will not buy them. The few dollars they receive look big to them and they are too young to see the value of staying in school. In the majority of cases boys quit school because they fall behind in their school work and get discouraged. There was a hint of that motive in the case of my correspondent.

The boy contemplating quitting school is maladjusted to the school system. Quitting offers itself as a solution because of the general tendency to get away from a difficult situation. This is the motive that prompts a man to secure a divorce, to change jobs, to commit suicide. It is the human desire to escape the heat of the frying pan even at the risk of jumping into the fire.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE CLIMBING VINE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Around an old, dead tree in the woods twined a stout vine which had climbed up from the ground until it clustered far at the top. In summer the leaves on the vine were green and cast a pleasant shade for grasshoppers and June bugs.

But now that winter had come and Jack Frost had touched the vine with his chill fingers, the leaves had turned brown and shriveled up. Most of them had fallen from the vine, but some still clung to it and the vine itself was still twined around the old dead tree like a ladder up which sometimes, the boys climbed when they were playing Scout and Indian.

"Dear me!" said the Vine to the Old Tree one day after a crowd of boys had been climbing up and down its twining loops. "How lonesome it is now!" For the boys had run away to go look in store windows at Christmas presents.

"They will come again!" said the Old Tree, for though it was dried up and never would have any more green leaves, still there was a little life left away down in its roots.

"I hate winter!" said the Vine. "I always lose my pretty green leaves and in winter no June bugs or grasshoppers sit in my shade. Nor do any butterflies come to get honey from my flowers with their long, curling, black tongues. I am of no use at all in winter! I might just as well flop down in a heap and let the snow cover me."

"Oh, don't say that!" spoke the Old Tree. "I'm sure you will be of some use, Climbing Vine. Think what fun the boys have playing Scout and Indian!"

"Yes," said the Vine, "if those jolly, noisy boys were here all the while I wouldn't be lonesome. But now they are gone and I wish I could flop down in a heap and let the snow cover me until simmer comes again."

But the Vine was too closely twined around the Old Tree to fall. Even the North Wind, strong as he was to blow Uncle Wiggily's hat along like a rolling hoop could not loosen the Climbing Vine. So it clung to the old tree and the dried leaves rattled like beans in a box.

Now, soon after this talk between the Vine and the Old Tree, Uncle Wiggily was hopping along twinkling his pink nose. And, all of a sudden, the Fox and Wolf, who were out hunting for something to eat, saw the rabbit and began to run after him.

"If you catch him first save me some nibbles!" growled the Fox, as the Wolf ran on ahead.

"I will," promised the other Bad Chap.

Then Uncle Wiggily heard the paws of the two hungry ones scrunching on the crusty snow and, pricking up his ears and making his tail stiff, the rabbit gentleman began to run. Faster and faster he ran, almost as fast as the day when the North Wind blew off his hat.

"Ho! Ho!" growled the Wolf, seeing the rabbit hop along. "Two can play at that game!" and the Wolf unkinked his legs, as did the Fox and both were soon close behind Uncle Wiggily.

Now, it happened that the bunny uncle ran toward the Old Tree with its Clinging Vine and close to it grew a big pine tree that, for a moment, hid Uncle Wiggily from the sight of the chasing Fox and Wolf. And in that moment the rabbit saw the Vine which was like a rope ladder up the side of the Old Tree and Mr. Longears cried:

"Ho! If I can climb up that Vine and keep still those Bad Chaps may run along under me and not know where I am, I'll do it!"

As quick as a wink Uncle Wiggily, making believe he was a Boy Scout, climbed up into the vine, setting his paws into the loops. And soon he was snuggled behind the dried leaves that still remained.

Pretty soon, panting and with their tongues hanging out, along came the Fox and Wolf.

"He just passed here! I can smell him!" howled the Wolf and they were so eager that they ran right along under and past the vine and never looked up in it to see where Uncle Wiggily had climbed above their heads. So the rabbit clung there until the two Bad Chaps had run far off and away, thinking he was in front of them. Then jumping down Mr. Longears made a low and polite bow with his tall, silk hat and said:

"Thank you, Climbing Vine, for saving me from the Bad Chaps."

And the Vine was so glad it was of some use in the world, though dried up and with only brown, rustling leaves, that it no longer wished to curl up and be buried beneath the snow.

DRURY FAILS TO STAND FOR RE-ELECTION

To Accept Position Under Federal Government, U.F.O. Leaders State.

DECLINES DIRECTORATE.

System of Grading Is Described By Commissioner of Agriculture.

TORONTO, December 5. — Hon. Ernest C. Drury's refusal to stand for re-electoin to the directorate was one of the sensations at last evening's session of the annual meeting of the United Farmers' Co-Operative Company in Hygeia Hall.

Mr. Drury was nominated, but J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the U.F.O., explained that the former premier had withdrawn from the United Farmers' movement. Following this statement, Mr. Drury's nomination did not stand.

The opinion was expressed by several leaders of the U.F.O., in the course of conversations with a representative of The Globe, that Mr. Drury's decision was based upon his decision to accept a position under the Federal Government. The job which these U.F.O. leaders thought that Mr. Drury had or would accept, at the hands of the Federal Administration, was that of supervisor of grain elevators.

Elections are Quiet.

Apart from these rumors about Mr. Drury's position, rumors from the lips of not one but several of the leaders in his erstwhile U.F.O. party, the election of officers proceeded quietly at last night's meeting of the annual convention.

There were three ballots, resulting in the election of the following board of directors, the counties which they represent being given in parenthesis: R. J. McMillan (Huron), H. A. Gilroy (Lambton), W. A. Amos (Perth), R. H. Halbert (Ontario), Carl Jones (Elgin), Harold Currie (Middlesex), G. W. Buchanan (Lanark), J. G. Whitmore (York), Herbert Miller (Renfrew.)

Former members of the board defeated in the election were: James Ross, G. A. Bothwell and Neil McKay. The new members are Messrs. Buchanan, Whitmore and Millar.

Quality in Products.

H. S. Arkell, Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, gave a most interesting address in the periods between voting. Particularly he stressed the importance of quality in products if co-operative marketing were to be successful. He spoke of many branches of co-operative marketing. Another interesting statement of this speaker was his forecast of the inauguration of a system of grading Canadian bacon—for export at least. Questions on a variety of other subjects were asked him. In answer to one he expressed the view that the educational policy of the government should be tested out by actually going into the country and determining whether such policy was making dollars and cents for the farmer.

AUCTION SALE IS BIG SUCCESS

Cows Bring From $100 To $130 Each and Calves $36.

$3,700 REALIZED.

BETHANY, Dec. 5 (Examiner Correspondence).—Harvey Gray held an auction sale of farm stock and implements on Thursday; George Jackson and Son, of Port Perry, being the auctioneers. The stock brought good prices, especially cattle, which sold from $100 to $130; calves sold for $36 each, and young cattle from $70 to $80.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray are giving up farming and are moving back to Toronto. Altogether, Mr. Gray realized more than $3,700.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray have made many friends while in the community, and they will be greatly missed by their neighbors.

Bazaar Held

The United Church Sunday school room was the scene of a successful bazaar on Saturday afternoon and evening. The room was gaily decorated with red and white streamers, with pots of evergreens on small stands. The team room was separated from the main room with a partition of fine wire interwoven with red and white. The windows were draped with yellow crepe paper. The tables were spread with white cloths, silver candlesticks bearing lighted candles and large vases of roses. Mrs. Lloyd Kennedy, Mrs. Bertrand Monk and Miss Elsie Richardson presided over the tea room.

The Young Ladies' Mission club had a dainty booth where all kinds of delicious homemade candy were to be hand at very reasonable prices.

All sorts of useful and fancy articles were on sale for bedroom, dining room, kitchen, and for baby. These were sold by Mrs. R. L. Crerar, Mrs. W. L. Rowan, Mrs. Clarence Rowan, Mrs. Otto Spencer, and Mrs. Thorndyke.

Mrs. A. H. Monk had charge of the homemade cooking table, where all sorts of good things to eat could be purchased.

Mrs. Joseph Jones sold ice cream cones and disposed of a goodly quantity among the younger people.

A fish pond, over which Mrs. Clarence Neil had charge, did a splendid business among the children, many screams of delight were heard from the children over their lucky catch. Miss Helen McKinnon was in charge

C.N.R. BUSINESS HAS INCREASED

More Fregiht Has Been Carried This Year Over Lines Through City.

HEAVY GRAIN TRAINS.

"Our business shows a substantial increase over that of 1927, an increase which is general over our whole system," was only one of the notes of district prosperity sounded by A. MacNab, local agent of the Canadian National Railways in an interview with The Examiner to-day.

Mr. MacNab told of the increased freight being carried on the C.N.R. lines, owing to the vast quantities of materials being sent and received by the busy local factories. The large amount of building going on in the city was also said to have increased greatly the business of the railway.

"Our business for the ten months of this year shows an appreciable increase over that of last year," said Mr. MacNab.

"The grain carrying has now slackened up, and will drop off considerably as soon as the last boats are tied up. The grain traffic has been tremendous this year. Many people are of the opinion that there is less grain going through Peterborough this year than formerly, but they are mistaken. The trains going through are larger and are drawn by heavier engines now. In fact the trains to-day are about twice the length of what they were a few years ago. Naturally there are fewer trains and the grain traffic does not make so much noise but there was a great deal more grain taken through here this year than ever before.

"There has been an increase in the general business both inward and outward bound, as well as in the grain business. The factories are all busy and they are sending out heavier amount of goods than last year. Too the increased building going on in the city has pushed up our earnings considerably.

"However, our shed tonnage does not show proportionate increase with our car load tonnage. If it had increased in proportion we would have had to employ more help in our sheds. This is principally on account of the motor truck competition which prevents us from employing a larger handling staff."

Mr. MacNab, when asked what steps the railways were taking to meet the truck competition, replied: "None, aside from giving the best way freight service that it is possible to put on. We will be better able to meet this competition when the trucks are put under the tariff which is now being suggested, compelling them all to charge uniform rates."

Health can be earned

Says one of the healthiest men in the world

EVEN a perfect physical specimen like Gene Tunney doesn't just take health for granted. He has worked hard, unceasingly, to build himself up and keep in condition. Realizing the importance of regular habits, he takes no chances.

"I started taking Nujol internally seven years ago. The first month Nujol brought remarkable changes in my physical condition. My elimination became active and normal. My appetite increased and a desire for intensive training was created. Since that time I have taken Nujol about five nights a week. I have regulated myself to the amount necessary to keep my elimination normal. If I discover that I have taken an excess I stop its use for a couple of days, when I renew my daily practice of taking a swallow from the bottle before retiring.

"I have found during my seven years' experience with Nujol that it is not habit-forming, or in any way unpleasant or harmful."

Gene Tunney

Nujol contains no medicine or drugs. It is simply a pure natural substance perfected by the Nujol Laboratories (26 Broadway, New York). It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them) but aids in their removal.

You, too can earn better health with Nujol. Buy a bottle from your druggist on your way home today. Sold only in sealed packages.

German Who Was Ruled Dead By Court Appeals To Reichstag "To Resurrect" Him and Restore Rights

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—Not wanting to remain dead, as he was pronounced by a Hamburg court more than sixteen years ago, A. Wothka, a resident of Hanover, has appealed to the Reichstag to "resurrect" him and restore his political and civil rights.

During his absence in 1912 relatives made a motion to have him declared missing or dead. The court granted the request with the result Wothka lost a considerable inheritance. Shortly thereafter he returned to Germany hale and hearty and has been paying taxes ever since, although legally dead.

Numerous efforts to bring about cancellation of the court order reading him out of existence remained fruitless. The Reichstag will have to pass a law to bring him to life again and one Deputy is making efforts in this direction.

EARLY BULLETIN SAYS KING HAS PASSED A FAIR NIGHT

Losses and Gains in Grim Fight Said To About Counterbalance.

INFECTION MODERATED.

LONDON, December 5. — (Special to The Examiner.) — King George's physicians this morning issued this bulletin on his condition:

"The King has passed a fair night. There are reasons to hope that the recrudescence of the infection which caused the last rise of temperature, is being moderated."

King George has neither lost nor gained much ground during the last 12 hours of his grim fight against pleurisy, which began 15 days ago.

Indications justifying hope in his eventual recovery and signs pointing to loss of the struggle for life about counterbalanced each other last night.

Hope has been raised by the news that the royal patient has gained strength following several hours of sound, natural sleep. On the other hand, the condition of his overtaxed heart is a cause of continued anxiety as is the fact that his temperature is still above the 100 mark.

If the fight going on in Buckingham Palace groves a losing one, then a scene enacted yesterday morning in the King's sick-room will live in history.

King George's stern, constant attention to his job has throughout his reign been his dominant characteristic He knows how ill he is, for he insists upon reading all the bulletins. But he knows, too, that the business of the state has been piling up, causing confusion because the authority of the Crown, necessary for hundreds of administrative acts weekly, has been in abeyance for a fortnight.

Doctors Protest in Vain.

As a result, and on his own demand, a Privy Council was held in his presence yesterday. This was only granted after the doctors had protested in vain and tried to get the monarch to agree to sign a proclamation placing the Cown in commission, a mere formality which would only involve his writing his name while the pen was held for King George would have none of this. The Privy Council only meets with the Sovereign, whether the Sovereign be well or dying, and, accordingly, when yesterday morning the monarch was a little better, there assembled in the audience chamber of the palace the Duke of York and the King's most trusted advisers Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang (Archbishop of Canterbury), Premier Baldwin, and Home Secretary William Joynson-Hicks.

Standing in the door of the audience room, which opens into the King's bedroom, the Home Secretary read out in full the old world phraseology prescribed by usage.

The writ appoints practically as regents the Queen, an unprecedented honor insisted upon by the King himself; the Prince of Wales as Heir Apparent; the Duke of York as Heir Presumptive; the new Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor Hailsham, and Premier Stanley Baldwin.

King Writes Signature.

Then Sir William advanced to the royal bedside, and the King signed away—until his recovery—his royal power. His signature, "George, R.I.," standing for George, Rex Et Imperator, though made painfully and slowly, was clear and distinct, according to privy councillors to whom Sir William showed it as he retired and the door of the sick room closed behind him.

The gist of confidential conversations between responsible Ministers and the royal doctors became known in the lobby of the House of Commons, may be given as representing an expert view of the situation. Since

COUNCIL OPENS FINAL SESSION FOR YEAR 1928

Warden Morley Smithson, After Long Sickness, Is Able To Preside.

COMMUNICATIONS READ.

Smith Township Has 1,103 Municipal Electors According to Clerk's Statement.

The County Council's respect and affection for Warden Morley E. Smithson and their deep confidence in him was reflected at the opening of the December sessions yesterday afternoon by the warm expressions of welcome with which he was greeted after an illness extending from the close of the June sessions until a short time ago. To-day he appeared to be fully recovered and said that he felt well and strong enough to carry on his duties this week. There were stages of his illness which had caused his friends grave concern, and his fellow councillors had anxiously followed his progress. The remembrance of this recent and prolonged disability, and the serious accident which the Warden's mother suffered a short time ago accentuated the councillor's sympathetic greetings to the Warden yesterday afternoon.

Some of the communications to the Council were as follows:

F. J. Moore of Lakefield offered to sell 2½ acres of land adjoining the House of Refuge property at a "reasonable figure" if the county needed it for an extension to the House of Refuge Farm.

R. R. Hall reminded the Council that shortage of shelving in the law library was proving inconvenient to the members of the bar.

Not Perpetual Liability.

J. H. Burnham wrote to the effect that when he donated a silver cup to the Peterborough County Plowmen's Association, and also a commemorative bronze medal he did not intend to make the medals yearly gifts. The cup had cost him $75 and the medal $5. He asked the Council to relieve him of the cost of the medal to be given to this year's winner.

Notice of the resignation of Fred Fry from the Norwood Board of Education was received.

The total number of municipal electors in Smith Township is 1,103, according to information supplied by Percy T. Udy, clerk and treasurer, in compliance with the statute which provides for the determining of the number of deputy-reeves to which the township is entitled.

A True Story of Christmas

(By Mack)

In a large city in the north of England stands a church in a well-to-do district but about ten minutes walk away to the East is a very over-crowded and conjested quarter by a large railway station which has very many factories at the side, which give employment to many hundreds of men and women and, of course, they all try to live as near to their work as possible. Also in this district are many Public Houses—far too many which means that the streets are overflowing with under-fed, under-clothed and under-washed children, of all sizes and ages

In connection with the above mentioned church, was a teacher in the Sunday School who got the idea of trying to get some of these poor children off the streets, if only for one night a week, and try to give them something bright and useful to think of. So she and her friend started a class on a Wednesday evening and got some of the young children from 7 to 14 to come. About one hundred joined. Each evening when they met they sang hymns with great gusto, one of the girls playing for them. Then they started in and learnt to knit dish cloths. The writer went once or twice and helped to teach the boys to knit with in, over, under, off. The boys thought it lots of fun and tried to see who would learn the quickest. They also made wool rugs, rag rugs, and boot polishers, made of pieces of velvet which has been collected.

Near Christmas they had a sale of work—all their own, and the proceeds were used to give a party for the children, each being able to bring a friend, which party, you may be sure, they thoroughly enjoyed having earned the money themselves.

The next winter, the class was held the same, and one day at the beginning of November the teacher was telling a lady she knew about the Wednesday night class.

The lady was well off and had few ties, and she said, "Oh, I would love to give the children, especially the girls, a treat that they will remember, in memory of Betty"—a beloved niece who had lately died. So they talked the matter over and the result of the discussion was that it was decided to give each girl a doll, but it was to be one that they had seen in their dreams, but never hoped to possess.

The lady bought expensive undressed, waxen faced dolls, with long curly hair, also material to dress them, which the teacher and her friends undertook to do.

Each doll was dressed like a fairy, with wings all sparkling, a wand bright with tinsel and a silver star at top, also a head dress of tinsel with star in center. Then the lady also asked her friends (she lived in a very expensive suburb) to each give a doll, dressed like a fairy and all to be expensive. So the ladies all tried to see who could dress then icest doll, with the result that when the great day of the party came, there was a most beautiful collection of fairy dolls that one could wish to see.

Well the teacher, her mother and a friend got busy and they cooked for a couple of days all kinds of good things, but simple that the children would not be afraid to try, also jellies.

The tables were decorated with flours and crinkled paper with the tables placed, so that the weakest should have as much as the strong, and each child had a couple of crackers one with a cap or hat and the other with a whistle or other noisy toy. But the greatest attraction was the Christmas Tree. It was placed at the far end of the room right under a bright light, and all the Fairy dolls placed so that their silk and satin gleamed against the green of the tree, showing up all the lovely colours of the dresses and the sparkle of the lights and decorations were reflected back and forth by the tinsel on the wands, wings and head dresses, making a lovely spectacle.

At the bottom of the tree were arranged the gifts for the boys, all kinds of games and sport toys, and it was my great privilege to be there as the children came trouping into the room. I wish I could convey just a little of the look of wonder on the faces of the girls.

Scarcely a glance was cast at the heavily laden tables, though many of the children were hungry, but all were gazing at the tree and its beautiful contents.

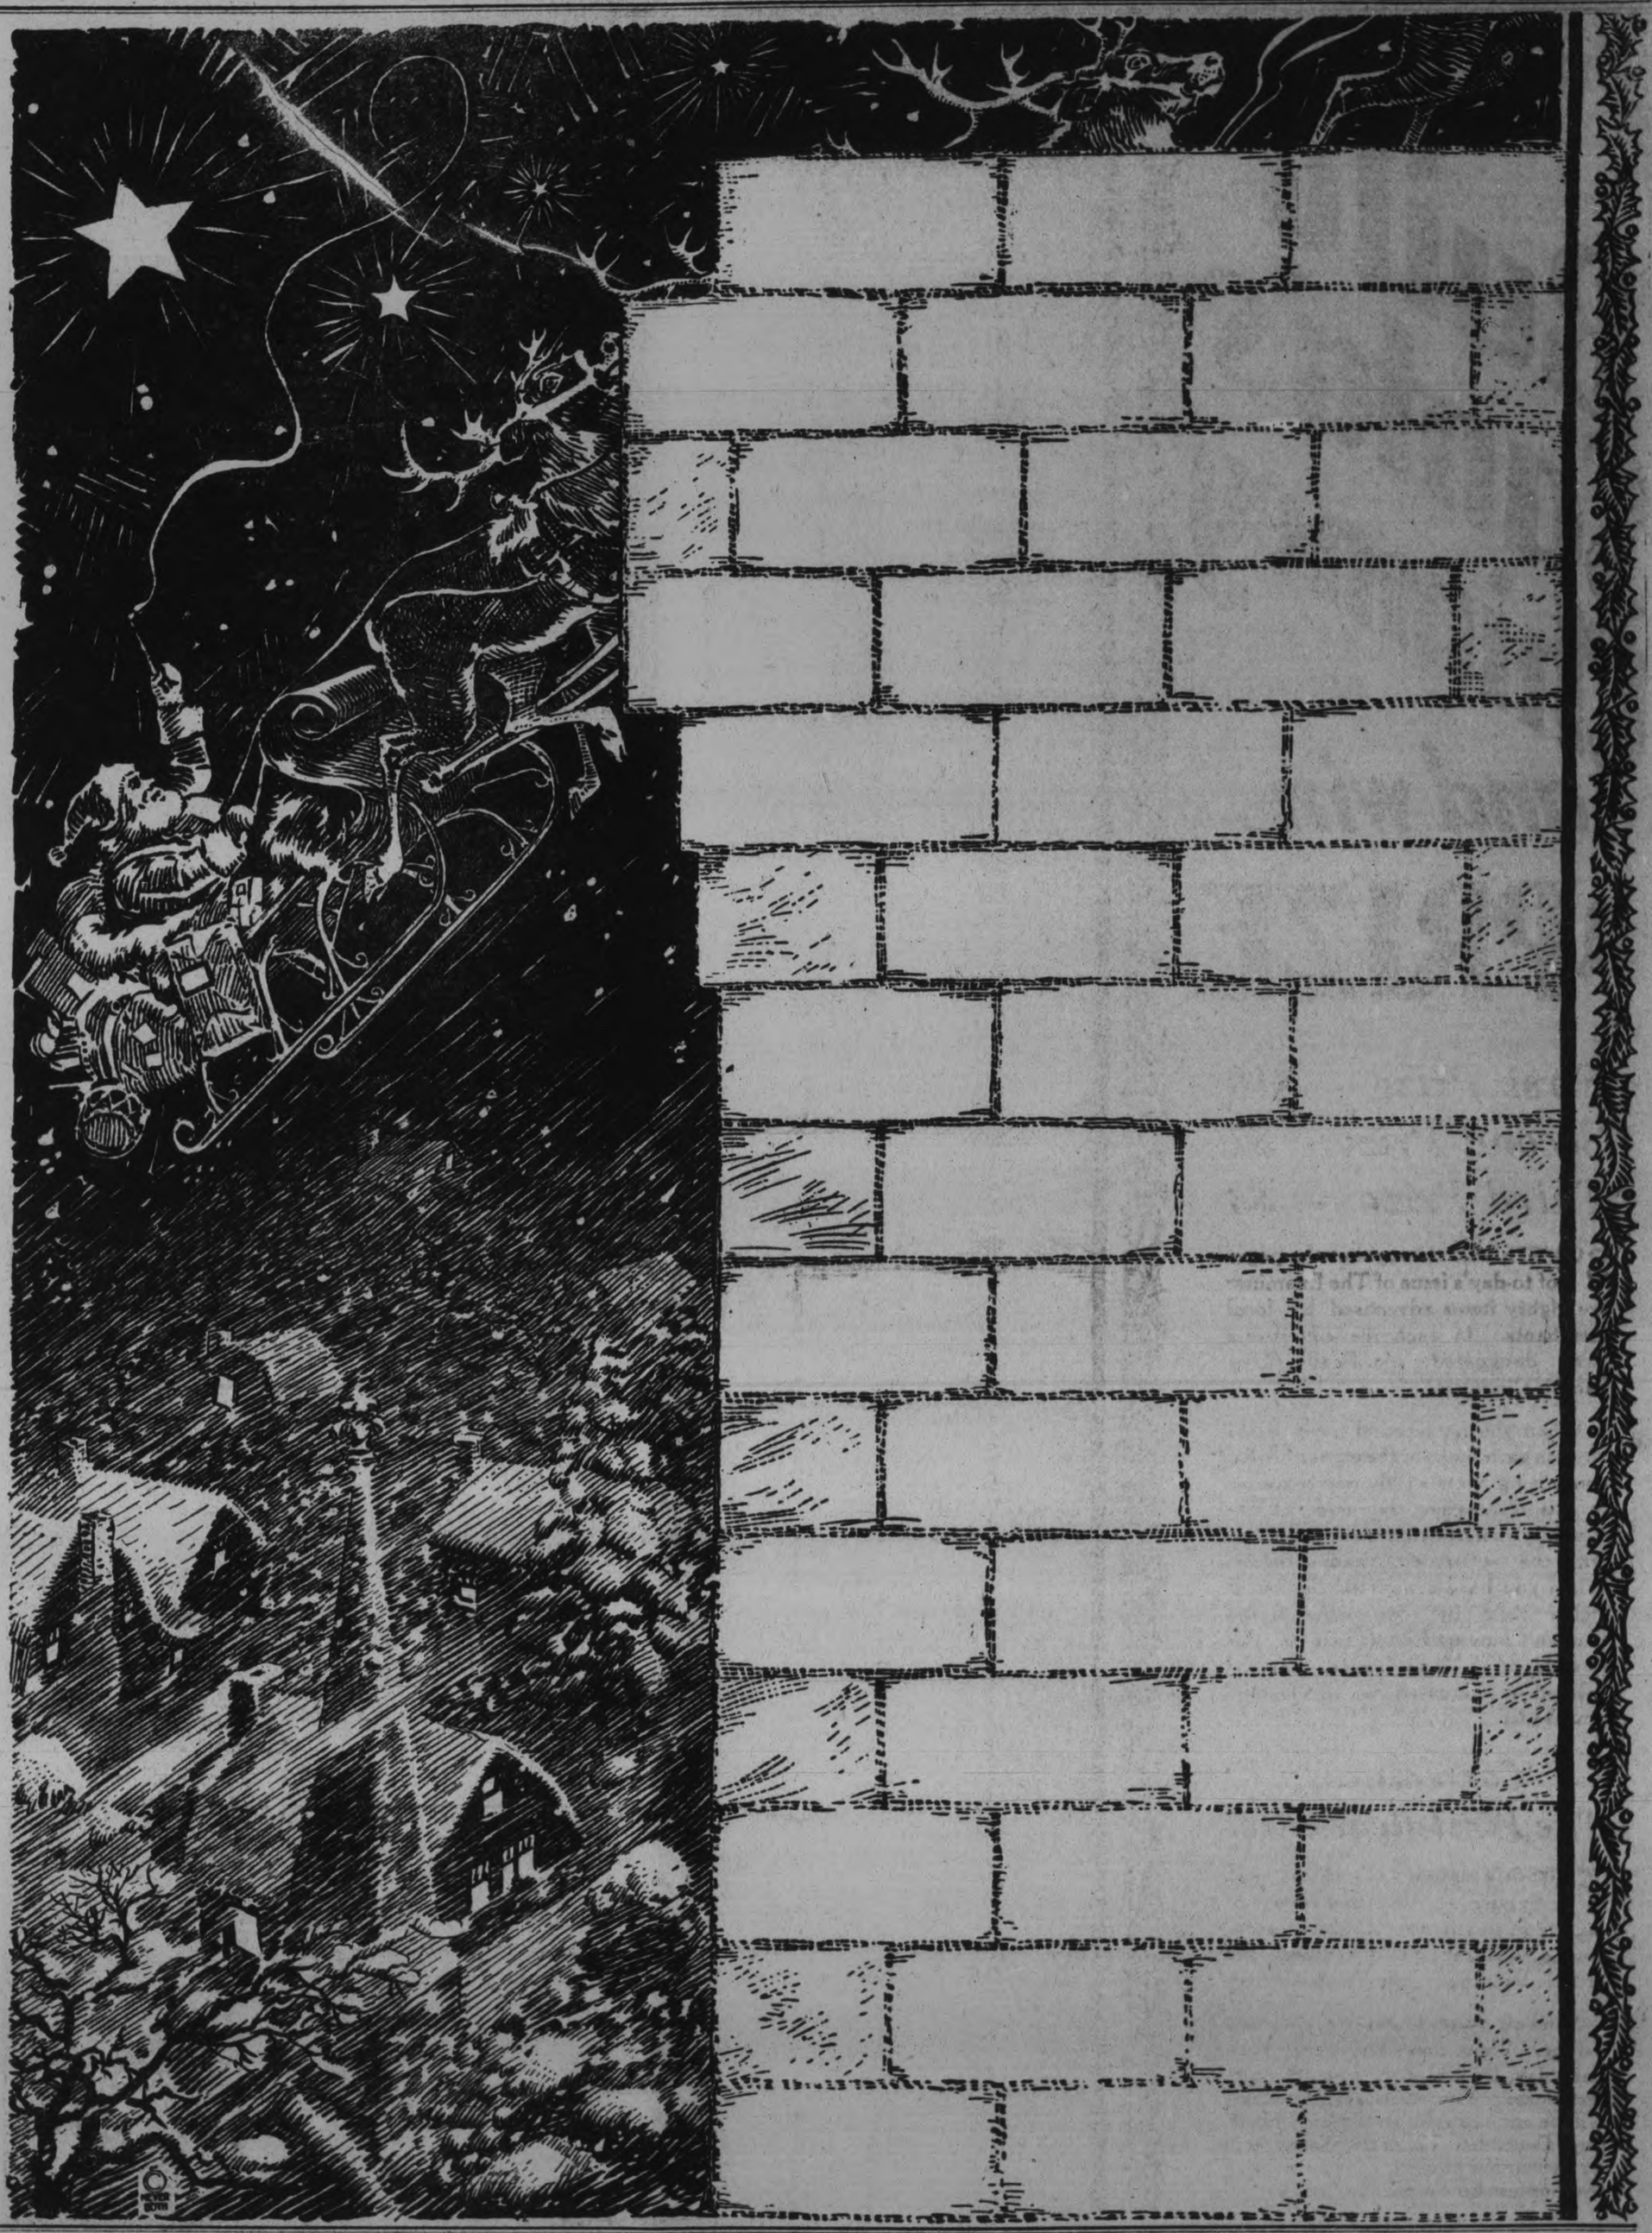
Well, after singing Grace, the children started their supper, and it was not so very long before the tables began to show traces of the heavy inroads made on the sandwiches, jellies, etc.

After supper they played half-heartedly a few games, then the dolls were given out and each girl seemed as if she wanted never to part with her own special treasure.

The girls were too much taken up with their own gifts and anxious to show it off at home, to wait to see what the boys received, except the girls who had to look after smaller brothers. Off they went, receiving on the way a bag of fruit and candies and some of the good things left over.

The boys were pleased with their gifts though they were not as expensive as the dolls, and after receiving their bags of fruit, etc., went off home and thus ended a real fairy doll Christmas tree.

The lady died very suddenly the next year, and her sister in memory sends money each year to help with a Christmas party, but there has never been another Christmas tree of Fairy dolls.



The Christmas Spirit

(By Pansy)

Maurice Williams passed back and forth across the floor of his apartment, in a sullen deliberate manner. Through the crisp morning air, the church bell chimed slowly, sweetly, softly. Still he paced onward with no trace of gentleness showing on his hard unlovely face. For Maurice was angry with everyone. He hated their calm, assured air, hated their smug appearance and even the joy they took out of life. A bitter smile curled his lip. What good was life anyway he wondered, unhappily, a harsh disillusioned man without friends, without interests. Fortune had smiled on him, surely in regard to money, but finding no response had left without bestowing any of wealth's pleasures on him.

Suddenly with a quick jerk he stopped, looked out of the window and made a wry face at that which met his cold unsmiling gaze. He wondered how anyone could be so unquestionably foolish. Out on the street men were laughing heartily and clapping one another on the back, girls were talking and smiling joyously, children were chattering and running about, all gloriously alive. The Christmas spirit, they called it. Bah! Christmas! Some carried presents in wrappings, elaborately decorated with holly. Presents they claimed were the very best part of Christmas." 'Tis more blessed to give than to receive," he had heard them say.

And so his mind flitted restlessly from one thing to another until finally it paused on the memory of a letter he had received the week before. In this letter was an appeal for money to buy gifts for the children's hospital. Children who were crippled, it said and who would never walk again. Maurice had refused them aid. His hard, embittered soul cried out against charity. What was the use he told himself wearily. Giving presents. All foolishness!

Then quite suddenly it came to him. Why not try it just this once? Of course it was Christmas day, but Jim kept a store and he would help him out. He grabbed his coat and hat, rushed the man to his shop and swiftly cleared him of everything—toys, dolls, candies. "No money will be spared this time. Just to see how it feels to be foolish for once," he thought roughly.

Hurriedly he made his way to the hospital. There hadn't been many presents this year the nurse told him sadly and the children would be so unhappy. But Maurice brushed her aside rudely, waved for the gifts to be brought in and quickly distributed. His eyes wandered to the pale little faces now bright with expectancy, they strayed to the attempt at decoration, the large red Christmas bell, the little, green, tinsel—decked tree and he wondered how he would be received.

Suddenly the harsh lines of his face softened as a little girl, clasping tightly in her arms a large doll, called to him eagerly, "You good man; bring me nice dolly." Another little lad said, shyly, "You're so kind. I want to be your little boy." A tear coursed slowly down Maurice's cheek as he looked about him. Everywhere a little child held tightly to whatever she or he most fancied. Some held large white bunnies, some teddy-bears and others dolls.

Then his hard heart melted and a smile lit up his face, a face which had not known a smile for years. He turned towards the door quickly, got out somehow or other. "I can't stand it another minute," he muttered huskily. "What a stupid I have been. I've never felt happier in my life. "Suddenly the church bell pealed forth again, rejoicing, triumphant. Tenderly he bared his head and whispered brokenly, "Peace on earth, good-will to men."

The Night Before Christmas

(By Mary R.)

It was the night before Christmas, and all through the Jessup house, fine young creatures in bright dresses were stirring about with great rapidity. Upstairs in Rosalie's sitting-room it was very quiet. Hanging from the broad chimney shelf were nine pairs of stockings, limp and empty. On the hearth little flames were playing, now hiding behind the logs, now leaping out to "tag" some shadow.

The door opened softly and closed again. A tall girl, in a rose-coloured gown, carrying a basket and pulling a sled behind her, entered. She proceeded to fill the largest pair of stockings with candy and nuts. Then she drew the sled under another pair. A doll came out of the basket and sat on the shelf between two tiny stockings; next a red automobile; and lastly a beautiful big book. Then setting her basket on the sofa, she vanished.

Soon the door opened again, and a girl, wearing a yellow gown, advanced with two red baskets. She filled two pairs of stockings, and then set a little cradle on the shelf. Beside this, she put a tiny chair, on which she hung some tiny garment. A cuboard, showing some dainty, little dishes behind its glass doors, was placed beside the doll, and beside the largest pair of stockings, she laid a pink kimona.

It was a little girl in blue, with a coronet of golden curls, who entered next. She played her part and disappeared, to be followed by a girl dressed in red. Lastly came a slim girl, clothed in white, who plumped herself down on the hearth-rug and studied the shelf above. This was Judy. She said not a word, but went straight to her work, and soon had emptied her baskets. The little flames were alone again, with the Christmas gifts. But only for a few moments.

Hark! Suddenly voices called along the hall, the door swung open and the room seemed full of brightly attired girls. A few parents hovered in the background; Santa Claus appeared in scarlet and fur, and took his place by the chimney.

"Jimmy O'Rafferty—Katy O'Rafferty" he announced, grabbing two pairs of stockings. "Will Jimmy and Katy please come forward?"

"Thim's me," said Mary, gathering the stockings into her arms. Mary plied the gifts on her sled and drew it away, while Santa Claus seized the next two pairs of stockings.

"Gladys Jefferson — Helen Jefferson," he read.

"Heah we is" said Rosalie, holding up the skirt of her yellow dress. He laid the stockings in it, and added two big dolls, a set of dishes and a small table.

"Emily Bailey," he called out, and Annette stepped up to take the pair of stockings, a pink kimona, and two picture puzzles. Then Tommie and Bessie Evans received their gifts and Catherine, responding to a call for Jenny Martin, and Eddie Dolan got a doll, a cupboard of dishes, and a pair of roller skates.

The young men carefully stowed the five girls, the baskets and the sled in the back of the car, and with a honk-honk and a jingling of bells the great car leaped away, tossing up a spray of snow.

They stopped at a tiny cottage where a little women met them at the door, with a lamp in her hand. Peter set the basket on the floor and with a "Merry Christmas" he was gone. The big car rolled on its way again.

"The O'Rafferty house next," said Mary. "This sled is a nuisance." They soon reached the house and delivered the parcel. Their rounds were completed after going to Jefferson's and soon they were all back home once more.

It was over at last, and a gay-coloured row of girls decorated the sofa, grateful for the hot chocolate which David and Peter brought them.

"Whose idea was it anyway?" Dave inquired.

"Judy's," said Annette, proudly.

"Now own up to it."

Judy only laughed, and held her cup out to David. David lifted high his cup of chocolate.

"Here's to Judy's idea!" he proposed. The four girls sprang to drink the toast with the men, while Judy sat on the sofa, blinking very fast.

A Christmas Souvenir

(By Ariadne)

Always the two families had met and as one large one enjoyed together the greatest of all holidays, Christmas. From the time that the first children had been born until now, there was an exact half-dozen in each; they had lived side by side. Fought with each other, played together, grown up from tiny tots to men and women. Many of them now scattered to different town and cities, but all meeting at Christmas, joined together by ties of love and blood; for the Smithson's mother and the Browne's father were brother and sister, and so all the children were first cousins.

This year the Browne's were providing the Christmas dinner. As in other years it was at twelve sharp; and it was a gay and happy throng which sat down to partake of the delicious goose and all the trimming that go with his majesty; from cranberry jelly to Christmas pudding, candy, nuts and apples.

The dinner had been taken with much jesting, laughter, and witty remarks from the different members. Now the dishes were done, and it was only three o'clock!

"I do wish we could do something to-day so that we would always remember this Christmas," said Florence Smithson, a dark girl of about fourteen, who attended Collegiate in a near-by city. "This may be the last Christmas that we'll all be together."

"That's just like you," spoke up Jim Browne, a bored-looking youth who was an insurance agent. "Always so peppy! Do something, indeed! I'm mighty glad just to do nothing," and he slumped deeper into his easy chair as if the matter of "doing something" was settled for all time.

"I think myself it would be a good idea." This from a tall young man gazing from the window at the whirling snow. "It would be wonderful in the coming years to have a souvenir of to-day." The rest of the twelve began to "sit up and take notice" for what Guy Smithson said usually "went." He preferred helping his father on the farm to holding an office position, and both families were well aware that he possessed more than his full share of brains. They also knew that the war, where he had spent three years had in a way embittered him and also that it was merely from choice that he was as he termed it "a bachelor-at-large." After some argument it was finally decided that they should all partake in the writing of a Christmas story to be kept in memory of their happiest day—Christmas Day.

It was only after they were all seated again around the long table that it was remembered that they had not decided what they were to write about.

"I have it!" said Eunice Browne, a stenographer, "We'll write about apples," seeming to catch her idea from a large plate of that fruit which was on the table. "We'll use the names of the different kinds as characters in our story. There are twelve of us so we'll each have to think of three different names so our story will be a real story. You start first, Guy, and then pass the paper to Florence and so on right around the table."

It is not necessary to tell of the laughter, the exclamations, the contradiction and the excitement; for anyone who has had the benefit of being a member of a large family knows what fun can be had. Those who had not been so fortunate, are to be sympathized with for their loss.

At last the "story" was finished and this is how it read:

An Orchard Idyll

"A King named Johnathan Alexander and a Duchess, whose name was Melba, were walking along the shores of the St. Lawrence in Ontario. The King was a Baldwin, but very Wealthy, and the Duchess looked both Sweet and Delicious.

"They met a Talmon, a Russian Spy, by name Peewaulkie-'itski' who was sometimes known as Ben Davis.

"Wagoner hand at him the Duchess asked him to go to the Iron Clad door and ask the Princess Louise to give him her Russet Macintosh, for it looked like Snow.

Not being able to find this immediately the Princess decided to seek no further and sent to the Duchess her Red Astrakan coat, which was quite Transparent.

When she had put this on, Ben Davis said, 'You're a Scarlet Pippin, I mean a Crimson Beauty.'

"At this the Duchess' face became suppressed with a Maiden's Blush and the King became very Crabby.

"But the Duchess said to him 'Let us go and gather Belleflowers along Wolfe River, and incidentally call on Salome.'

"This they did, but after a time the King became Stark mad and started to paint Canada Red."

This has been truly kept as a souvenir. Each girl and boy had a copy and many, many times it has been re-copied and re-read in the past few years.

Some of the children are dead; a few married, but their "Orchard Idyll" began as a jest and although not of Christmas remains to them a symbol of that time when all together they gathered for their last big Christmas dinner.

A Christmas Surprise

(By Alley)

"Well, that will just be fine, Mary, but think of the extra work it will mean for you."

"Oh, I shall not mind it at all," exclaimed Mary. "I know Mrs. Smith would be willing to come over for a few days, and help me get everything ready. She would only be too glad of a little extra money at this time of the year." Thus spoke Mary to her husband, as they were seated at the breakfast table, one December morning.

Mary's mother and father had retired from the farm, and now lived in a small apartment in town. Tom, the oldest boy, had married and gone to live in Detroit, some five years ago. Jim, the second bay, went also. Francis and Dora had both married and went to live in New York with their husbands, who were brothers in business in that city.

So Mary, who was the youngest, and last to leave the family roof, settled with her husband on a farm not far from town, and of course always went to see her parents each time she was there.

Her mother had remarked to her one day she was there, "Oh, how I would like to have you children home once more for Christmas; it would be so nice to be all together again; but in these small rooms. Well, it is out of the question, anyway. You and John and the children can come in for the day."

"Yes, Mother," said Mary smilingly, "or you and Dad come out to the farm."

"Well, perhaps we will."

Mary was very thoughtfu lon the way home, and became very happy as she thought to herself; "If I can only manage. I shall say nothing about it, until I know for sure." That evening she sat down, equipped with writing material, and wrote to each of her brothers and sisters, and unfolded her plans to them.

How shall I ever wait for an answer, she thought to herself. But she did not have to wait long. When a few days later, as she sat watching for the mail man. Sure enough, he left four letters in the box; each an answer to her letter; assuring her, it would be just fine, and would say nothing to Mother when they wrote.

How happy Mary was, and that evening she told her husband all about it. He was as delighted over the plan as she.

"Sure," said he, "and we shall have the two turkeys, instead of one, and the Christmas tree will have to be a bit larger, with four extra children besides our own two, and the grown-ups. Anyway, what a jolly time we can all have together will be worth all the extra work. You see if you can get Mrs. Smith, and I will help you all I can."

And so the time fairly flew. Mary was very busy getting things cleaned and put in order for the arrival of her brothers and sisters and their families, for you see, Mary had planned to have them all home for Christmas.

Christmas was now only a week away, and there was still a lot to be done; but Mary was so happy. Tomorrow she and Jack would go to town and buy presents. She had already quite a few which she had found time to make through the summer. Yes, she would get a big doll for Tom's little girl, and little Fred shall have a sleigh; and the others—well, she would choose for them when she could see what was to be had.

On arriving in town the next day Mary lost no time in doing her shopping. The back of the big car looked more like Toyland than anything else. She found time to call on her parents and arrange for them to come out for Christmas.

"You shall stay for the week."

"Oh, tnank you, Mary," said Mother. "Dad and I shall be delighted to spend Christmas in the country with you."

And so it was arranged that Jack would drive in Christmas morning for them.

Christmas Eve came at last. The big tree had been brought in and occupied a prominent place in the drawing room corner. Mary had been busy all day putting up the decorations. Mrs. Smith had come over and helped her with the baking and cooking. Jack picked the turkeys, and the children were helping, but mostly getting in the way.

At last everything was ready but putting the presents on the trec. and she would do that when the children were in bed.

"I shall take the team on the big sleigh," said Jack, he he came in from doing the last of the chores, "for the car will not hold them all; with lots of robes. And it's such a lovely night and the sleighing fine, they will surely enjoy the drive."

And so at the appointed time he set out for the station, and arrived back in due time, with the merriest crowd they had seen for a long time. Such greetings! Everyone wanted to talk at once.

"Come right in and upstairs, and take off your wraps, so I can see what you all look like once more," said Mary, laughingly, when they gave her a chance to speak.

"My, what fine looking kiddies, and you do all look well. Just lay your things there for now, and come on down to the kitchen for a cup of tea, I know you must be all hungry."

Tom assured her that they were, and so they did ample justice to the supper she had prepared for them.

The children were at last tucked away in bed, and fast asleep. The girls helped Mary put the things on the tree after emptying their own suit cases, which were fairly bursting with gifts, and the men folks looking on, till everything was finished, when they all retired for the night.

The children were the firs t to waken the next morning and hop out of bed for their stockings, but it was not long till the whole family were up and around.

At ten o'clock Jack drove the car to town for Mother and Dad. The children were were watching for them coming called out from the dining-room window: "Here they are, Mother!" at which they all beat it for the drawing room; and when the old folks came in, there was not a sound except the clock ticking on the wall, and Mary's two children calling out, "Merry Christmas, Grandma and Grandpa."

Mary soon ushered them upstairs to lay off their wraps, then back down. When they reached the foot of the stairs, Mary said, "Oh, you must have a peep at the tree first; then we can sit down and chat. With that she pushed the drawing room door open, and there they were, all sitting around. They all jumped up at once, shouting "Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas. How are you, Mother? You do look fine, Dad. Poor Mother and Dad; they could do nothing but stand and look. At last Mother found her voice, and said: "Well, this is going to be the merriest Christmas we have had for a long time." Dad said it sure was, and hugged Mary for her plans. But Mary said, "If the rest had not helped she could not have managed it herself.

After dinner Santa Claus distributed the presents from off the tree. The rest of the day they spent in talking and singing and music. The children, enjoying themselves on the hill, sleigh-riding and tobogganing.

Mrs. Smith came in later in the day to thank her for the big basket of things the children had brought in in the morning, and said the little ones were enjoying themselves immensely.

They all stayed at Mary's till after New Year's, when they left for their different homes.

Jack drove them to the station, and later took Mother and Dad back to town. Everyone left happy and said it was the happiest Christmas they had had for a long time.

A Bit of Spice Bread

(By Debbie in the Kitchen)

As the shortening days of early winter sped away, the interest at the farm house on the hill centered in the big kitchen.

A gentle, simmering took up and led the tune along spicy ways, until gathering strength it galloped into a rollicking chorus of rich bubbling.

Grandmother's kitchen was a most cheerful and heart-warming spot. Its floor was painted, in color like unto a shining pumpkin. A hand-made rug in a quaint blend of grey and blue with black was there to soothe the tired foot and please the eye.

The glass doors of a built-in- cupboard revealed willow-pattern cups, each hanging on its own little hook, plates resting on edge at the back in company with many a pretty jug and bowl, in lustre and crystal.

In a high polish, the stove shone and gleamed a black radiance. There were large capital letters, "Black Jewel," engraved on the oven door, which took a deal of my attention when as a small child, I visited my maternal grandmother.

Two windows flooded in the sunlight and gave a view of the pasture field sloping off to the south, where in summer lambs with their mothers nibbled at dawn the dew-wet clover, and at noontide sought shade of the solitary maple.

The leafless branches of this lofty tree offered safe roosting to the lordly young gobblers and demure turkey hens when the Autumn nights lengthened out, and the days shortened up, and the roasting pan yawned in quiet certainty.

Back in the kitchen, grandmother, herself was not the least colorful thing about. Her usual dress was one of a dark background besprigged with flowers, rosebuds and lilac easily being first choice. When she reposed in the afternoon with the mending basket close by, there was added, for comfort and adornment, a santag (I don't suppose I have the correct spelling for this word, but that is how it sounded). It was a pretty conceit, three-cornered in shape, worn over the shoulders, made of pearl grey wool edged with heartsease.

One December day, away back in the seventies, when engaged with the letters on the oven door, I suddenly said, "What makes the funny noise, grandma?" She briskly answered, "Why, Debbie, it is the Christmas pudding bubbling in the pot, and tomorrow I must make the spice bread."

The baking of spice bread was a time-honored custom belonging to the festival of Christmas. Grandmother had brought the formula with her from Yorkshire, when she came a bride to this "Lady of the Snows."

There was no haphazard throwing together of ingredients, but, rather, a reverential measuring of butter and sugar, raisins and currants, three pounds each; flour, fifteen pounds; twelve eggs whipped into a liquid amber; and heaps of candied peel—orange and citron; essence o falmond and drifts of cinnamon and mace.

This aggregation, en masse, through the mystice working of yeast sponge, "kneadings" and "risings" was at last molded in loaves and fast closed within the "Black Jewel." And then, what a glorious aroma there was throughout the precincts!

With the coming of Christmas day, a pretty complete possession was taken over by the young army of grandchildren. Slender young girls and tall lads home from the class room, for the time, cast aside their growing importance, to play games with the little toddlers and stand guard while the five-year-olds scampered up the stairway, to come down by way of the banister.

Never was it known that grandmother had underestimated their capacity, for roast turkey, plum pudding, mince pies, spice bread, pound cake, preserves and Devonshire cream.

Grandmother had also brought from Yorkshire a beautiful voice. She gave efficient help to the precentor at the English Line Church. When on a Christmas Sunday the congregation sang "Joy to the world, the Lord is come," it was something to be remembered. Grandmother did not approach that first high note of "Antioch" from the underside. She floated in on the level.

In youth, her voice might have taken her along the way of "arias," but as I remember her, she found expression in "The green fields of Eden," and other exquisite Songs of Zion.

Something seems to have taken the place of simple faith and devotion in the things of the Spirit, but who of us does not come up standing at the joy of another Christmas?

Christmas Eve

(By Dot)

"Bed time children," called Doris Clayton, as she walked into her spotless blue and white kitchen, everything was in apple pie order except the corner where the children were having loads of fun blowing soap bubbles

"What will Marie say," said Doris. "Marie said we could play bubbles just for one half hour while the was dressing to go down street," answered Margaret.

"Yes Mama, that's what she said" chimed in Teddy.

At this point Marie appeared in the kitchen. "It's all right Mrs. Clayton. I will clean it up before I go out. I told them they might for a while," she said. "They have been such good children to-day that I couldn't refuse them." "Anything you want me to get you down street?"

"Yes dear, there are a few things I want you to have sent up, as I don't know just what time the doctor will be home, as he was called out on a very serious case, and if Stanley is calling for you there are a few parcels I would like you to deliver for me"

"And by the way, Marie, are you going to the Christmas dance tomorrow night?" asked Doris.

Marie looked surprised at the question, but she knew it was asked for a good reason, when asked by her beloved mistress so she answered.

"No, I told Stanley I didn't think I could go."

"Don't you want to go?" asked Doris, kindly.

"Oh, I would love to go," said Marie, "but it will be a swell affair and my dresses are just not classy enough; of course, I didn't tell Stanley this and I suppose he doesn't understand and thinks I don't want to go, he is rich and doesn't think that I am earning my living, and by the time I send a little each month to help support my poor mother and little brother, that I really cannot afford evening dresses, or at least feel I do not want to spend my money on them, I don't mind just a party, but where there will be so many grand people I just simply can't.

The children had scampered into the drawing room and Doris crossed the kitchen to Marie's side. She put her arm around the slender figure. "Marie," she said, "I want you to tell Stanley that you have changed your mind and that you are going with him to-morrow night. Leave the dress to me."

"Mrs. Clayton, you are an angel, why should you take such an interest in me when I am just your maid, you are always so good and kind to me," Marie answered as the tears sprang to her eyes.

"Marie, you are more than a maid to me, you have been with me for ten years, do you think I cannot see how you love and care for those darling children, if it had not been for you how would I have got along these five years? Yes, five years ago this Christmas morn, since we brought them home and never once have I regretted it, and I know you haven't Marie, you love them truly as I do."

"You are a good girl Marie, and Stanley is a good boy and I don't want you to lose him because you feel you are not good enough to go out with him, if you ever marry him he will be able to provide a good home for you."

"How well I know it Mrs. Clayton, and I often wonder why he picked on me, a poor girl, to keep company with, and I have often wondered how you and the doctor felt about it, him being the doctor's nephew, but I didn't like to mention it, and now I don't need to, I feel happier than I have since I started to go out with him, and I care for him so much," she said shyly.

"This little chat need go no further Marie, you know now that the doctor and I both hope that some day you will be Stanley's wife. You are a darling good girl, and pretty besides, his mother and father will always love you as a daughter. They are not the kind to find fault where money is concerned, and the girl that Stanley loves, they will love her too." Doris gently stroked Marie's glossy brown head at is rested against her shoulder, so different from her own curly one.

"There's your car, run and get your hat and coat, I will see the children to bed tonight," and she kissed Marie's cheek as she brushed the tears away. "I will get the bundles I would like you to leave at Mrs. Carters' and Mrs. Blacks' for the children." Doris never forgot these poor families each Christmas Eve. "Good night Marie," she called, "have a good time and don't forget about tomorrow night."

"I won't," said Marie, as she closed the front door, and Doris knew that the little chat had meant much to her.

"Mama, the tree does look pretty doesn't it," said Margaret.

"I think so too, darling, and I am sure Santa will be here before you get to bed and then you know he won't leave anything on the tree."

"I wonder will Santa Clause bring me a little doggie, Mama" said Teddy. "I want a real live one, white and fluffy." "And I want a great big doll with eyes that go to sleep," said Margaret. "We told Santa in the letter to leave them whether he left the other things or not, so he will, won't he mama?"

"Of course he will, he tries to give little boys and girls that are good some of the things they ask for anyway, but he doesn't like them to ask for too many things, because he has so many children to visit that he wouldn't have enough to go around if they did."

"We must leave a lunch for Santa on the table, mama, he may be hungry," said Margaret

So, with mama's help the children fixed up a dainty lunch for Santa and then climbed the stairs to bed to dream happy dreams of toyland. When they were tucked snugly in and goodnight kisses had been exchanged, Doris came down to do Santa's work. Christmas bundles were brought forth and hung on the pretty decorated tree, this was the children's first large tree and how lovingly their little hands had helped to hang the little bells and tinseled ornaments in their places.

I wonder if Gerald will get the little dog, thought Doris to herself, she was sure he would if it was possible at all, and if he did not have to stay too late with his patient.

Again, to pass away the time she opened up the box which contained the lovely dress she had purchased for Marie, she knew it would look charming on her, a lovely ruby shadowed satiny creation which Doris knew would go so well with her dark hair and complexion, if Marie wanted to change it the sales lady had told her she would change it for her privately in the morning.

Now her thoughts flew back over the last five years, to that Christmast Eve five years ago, when Gerald had been called to the bedside of that young mother, how because she had nothing else to do, she had went with him, how she had climbed the rickety stairs to that room so dim, so lone on that Christmas eve, with aching heart and tear filling her eyes, she had heard that mother's pleadings to the doctor, to save her life for her children's sake, a darling baby girl of three years sleeping in a cot near by with one dimpled arm threw carelessly above the covers, knowing nothing of the loss which was so soon to fall upon her and then not far from the bed a chubby baby boy of three months sleeping in fitful slumbers in a tiny basket, what a pity thought Doris to be left so young without a mother's love, and her heart yearned to give them a mother's love and a plan seemed to form within her brain as she looked, if Gerald would only agree.

A fat motherly woman from the flat downstairs had been trying to wait on the sick mother along with her own duties She explained how the husband had died about three months before the baby had been born, he had died of pneumonia and the mother had not known hardly a well day since, she had been opposed to having a doctor because she had been so desperately poor and so she had struggled on until it was too late, she had tried to make a living sewing and if she had been well would have got along quite nicely, if her strength had only held, but she had developed a heavy cold and after had followed pneumonia, and life now was fast ebbing away.

"My babies, my babies," raved the mother, as she tossed from one side to the other, if it were not for them I would die in peace."

"They shall be looked after," said Doris as she stepped to the bedside, this seemed to ease the troubled mind for a short time, as she caught sight of Doris and a smile crossed her small face, as she said "My prayers have been answered, please love them always, my darling babies."

Taking Gerald aside Doris asked him if there was one ray of hope, but he sadly shook his head; just a few more hours and it will be all over. It was then that she revealed her plan to him.

"Why can't we take them" she said, "such darling children to be thrown on the mercy of the world. There is the orphanage, yes, but a mother's love, where is it? perhaps they will get it perhaps they won't and what a shame to separate that dear little brother and sister if that should be the case."

Gerald who had not denied Doris anything in their ten years of married life, was silent, a long time. He loved her as dearly as when he had married her, and then he said "Do you think you could give them a mother's live Doris?" If so, have your way, I will help you all I can, only I won't promise that I can be a father to children that I do not know any more than these?"

"Yes Gerald, I know I should love them always and I know you'll love them too."

"I'll try for your sake, Doris."

"Thanks Gerald," she said, "I'm sure we won't be sorry?"

They had watched beside the bed all through the lonely hours of the night, once she had seemed to gain consciousness and Doris had promised to take those little ones and love them as her own, she had understood for her eyes closed and a happy smile again crossed her face as she said "God bless you, the angels in heaven look just like you," and with her hand holding fast to Doris' own she had died in peace.

The happy Christmas morn was just beginning to dawn when Doris and Gerald left the lonely flat, with their precious burdens, Doris carrying the baby and Gerald the darling girl. "What a wonderful Christmas gift," said Doris as they reached their own beautiful home— the gift of a son and daughter.

Gerald had said little, but each day his love had grown until now, Doris knew he loved them as much as she did and they were so happy, always their children's happiness was their's.

The clock was striking ten as Doris heard Gerald's car drive into the garage, a few minutes later he came in, his arms laden with bundles and leading on a chain the dearest little white dog you ever saw. "I got it" he said, as he walked over to his wife and kissed her. "I was sure I could."

"You are a darling Gerald," said Doris.

"Santa Claus has certainly been here," said Gerald, laughing, as he began to place his bundles on the tree.

door when Marie rushed in the front the plate was emptied.

"How happy the youngsters will be when they see all their toys, I don't think Santa has left out a single thing that they asked for," said Doris, smiling.

"How queer Christmas would be without them new, eh Doris?"

"It simply wouldn't be Christmas at all Gerald," she said as she kissed him.

"You're right, it wouldn't be, Christmas isn't Christmas without the children. "Well, I guess I must take Terry to the shed to his kennel until morning."

He had just gone out the back said Marie, as she ran happily to she opened the drawing room door and seeing Doris alone, she crossed over and whispered something and ran swiftly out before the doctor should return, but not before Doris had spied the sparkling diamon on her finger.

"I guess Santa Clause has been good" she laughed.

"Yes and we owe it all to you" said Marie, as she ran hapily to her room.

What a happy, happy time Christmas is, thought Doris, as with Gerald's arm about her, they said good night to the Christmas tree, until the happy bells should herald the Christmas morn.

Adelia's Gift

(By Mrs. V. F.)

It lacked just three days to Christmas and and oh what a busy time it had been for Adelia. With all the gifts to select, for the folks at home, for Tom and the twins. What a time she had choosing gifts for her daughters! There were dolls, carriages, cradles and numerous other toys for Dorrie and Florrie.

The tree was ordered to be delivered on Christmas Eve. Oh what a time they would all have, for she was expecting mother, dad and the boys! What a merry time Billy and Joe would have with the twins.

As Adelia was preparing bed she fell to wondering what Tom had bought for her.

She must not bring his smoking jacket Home until the last minute or he would be sure to find it. For he dearly loved to hunt for his gift.

But what was he getting her? She had looked everywhere but no gift could she find. She was still wondering about it when she fell asleep.

At last dawned Christmas' day. Mother, dad and the boys had arrived the night before and everything was ready for the big day.

When Adelia came down, there in the living room stood a long-wished for piano. Now she could carry out one of her dearest wishes—to give the twins piano lessons.

What a merry time they all had that Christmas day!

Better Late Than Never

(By Mary C. McLellan.)

"Mother, what about Christmas?" It was the oft repeated question of eight-year-old Jack Alton. "It is only ten day away," he urged anxiously, as he gazed at the calendar.

"Oh, Jack!" his mother exclaimed, as she dropped suddenly upon the shabby couch and gathered the small brown hands in her own, "I've thought of little else lately, and oh, Sonny Boy, with Daddy in the hospital, and not a cent coming in, we are about broke"; a laugh that somehow sounded like a strangled sob, hurt her throat. "You see, Jack," she went on, Daddy thinks I had all of the twenty he left me when he had to go to the hospital, but when those cattle and horses got in pound, it took over half of it to pay pound fees, and we have had to get flour and other things, and although I've fairly counted every copper, we've only a dollar and eighty-five cents left."

"How long does it take a broken leg to get well?" he queried with a wistful sigh.

Compassion flooded the mother's heart. "Oh, my laddie, I've just one surprise for you. I had intended to keep it a secret until he came, but you are such a comfort to me, I will tell you now. Dr. Gershaw says Daddy may come home for Christmas; he will arrive Christmas Eve, and...."

"Oh, Mummie, I'm so glad," fairly shouted Jack, "and if Daddy can come home I don't mind doing without the dr—the—the—anything. Daddy will be our Christmas." Then looking straight into his mother's eyes of deep-sea blue, he asked gravely, "Are we really truly poor people, Mother?"

"Oh, my little laddie," she cried, "in money we are surely hard run just now, but we've one of the finest farms here one could well wish for, but the hail this year, and drouth last year making our big wheat field a dead loss, has put us in a tight place."

"Is there no way we can earn money?" he asked earnestly.

"No, Jack," she replied dully, "I have tried to think until my brain is tired. There's Zibe Lang owes us twenty-five dollars, and if he would only pay us..."

"Won't he pay?" eagerly asked the boy, his face brightening.

He seems to intend not to pay, but you've given me the impulse to ask him once more. Tomorrow I'll beard the lion in his den."

"Is he fierce?" followed up the lad.

"Yes, and no," replied his mother. He can be 'fierce' all right, but I have seen him when caught in some misdeed, and was scared silly, crying like a big baby because he was afraid of punishment, but the very hour he was let off, on promises, he was ready to boast he had shown them where they could 'git off at' as he calls it, and so he grows more beastly every year."

"Dare you go, Mummie; is is safe; would Daddy be willing?" the excited boy worried.

"Don't worry, Jack," she comforted him, "I'll not go in if I feel scared.

The following morning she set out, leaving Jack to "mind the place." As Pard and Pilot trotted briskly along the frozen trail, she drank in the beauty of the prairie and inhaled deep breaths of the invigorating air, seeking to fortify herself for the hated task.

She planned her line of attack. "I must use tact and diplomacy," she said to herself, "perhaps a bit of blarney, and then a touch of pathos ..." She was driving in old Zibe's lane, and the heart-rending howls of a hurt dog greeted her. She halted her horse, hoping the tumult would cease, but she heard instead a fresh outburst with an added note—a hurt whimpering. She seized her whip, and in a twinkling she stood in the door of the dilapidated old woodshed, her superb figure erect, her face flaming, and her eyes flashing. She saw the old man with a stick upraised over a big collie, once handsome, now a huddled heap of misery.

"Stop!" she called imperatively; you coward! Shame! Shame!"

"And who are you?" stormed the old man, "the dog is no good, and he belongs to me; so you hit that there trail miss, and you hit it quick."

"I'm not a miss," she snapped, "I'm Mrs. Jim Alton, as you very well know, and I've come for that twenty-five dollars you owe us. I need it; and let me tell you I'll hit no trial leaving a big bully abusing a dog that's too much of a gentleman to soil his teeth with a bite of you."

"Huh!" he browled, "I suppose you'd like to see him bite me."

"I would so," she rejoined, "I'd almost sic him on. I marvel at the patience of animals. Just because you have your animals under your power, you indulge the beast that is within you, taking it out on the dog. I have heard of the condition of your horses. I have heard of you having barbed-wire wounds on them never attended to, and other things beyond tell. How fearfully hurt your mother would be if she knew the boy she raised had become a bleary, boated old bully, dirty and disreputable."

The stick fell from his hand. He glared at her in a sullen silence as she moved over to the dog and caressed the quivering collie, the dog looking up at her with his great pleading eyes full of the pathos of unmerited pain. "Now give me the twenty-five dollars, for I need it, and I am in a hurry," she demanded imperiously.

"You'll get no twenty-five dollars from me," he blustered. This is four times you've asked me, and I've had it in my pocket every time, but I don't intend to pay, see?" He glared at her, and added, "and I can look after my own dog..."

"What is his name?" she suddenly asked.

"His name's Duke," he answered sullenly, and the beastly dog is no good, I tell you."

"All right, then," she flashed, "I'll take him off your hands, and while I'm in the mood, I am going to tell you something for the good of your soul. You are known this prairie over as 'Old Zibe,' and if you died tomorrow, it would be considered a good riddance. Think how worth while it would be to live a clean, decent, honest life, so when you go, people would speak well of you. You've left this faithful dog out here when it was forty below zero,—oh, bosh!" she exclaimed excitedly, I've got to get home to-day."

As she spoke, she led the cowering collie to her rig, then suddenly seizing him in her strong arms, she lifted him bodily into the buggy.

"Here!" shouted the old man, his anger flaming afresh, "you drop my dog, or I'll have you arrested for stealing."

"All right, do it!" she promptly replied, with cheerful emphasis, "send a policeman, and I shall tell him some interesting items about the time when Caleb Crowley was suddenly missing, and of how you as suddenly acquired four if his best horses. I'll tell him of how in '26 you sold seed wheat in sacks with our mark on them. I'll have him find if your new fence posts came from our post pile, and our fence cut and hacked one night and our cattle and horses driven into Carlson's wheat, so they would get into pound. I want to tell him of the three little unbranded colts of Andy Anderson's that you..."

Mrs. Alton found she was talking to empty air; the old man suddenly cowed, was slinking into his shack. She gathered up the lines and set off for home, finding her hands full in holding the excited dog. "I daresay I've done it, Duke," she said, talking as to a human, "he may come and burn us out now, and Daddy Jim in Medicine Hat. There! don't tremble so, it was an unlikely place to find a Duke,—in a dirty old wood-shed. There, there! we'll be good to you, though I'm the woman who has always said I'd not have a dog around; no sir, nary a dog, scratching fleas and tracking up the floors. Now here I am trucking you home against your will.

As she petted the docile but trembling dog, she said, "Oh, Duke, old boy, I didn't get our twenty-five dollars, and I suppose I've ruined any chance of ever getting it now. And oh, great grief! I was going to use 'tact and diplomacy' as well as a touch of blarney and pathos' The blarney was not very noticeable, or tact, or anything."

Arrived at home, Jack rush to meet her. "Oh, Mother!" he called, "did Zibe give you his dog, and is he for me, and did you get the money?"

"No, Jack," she answered hysterically, I did not get the money, and I-er-borrowed the dog, to give him a happy Christmas. No, I'll tell you the troublesome truth," and she related to the lad the details of her call.

In the days that followed the boy showed such love for the dog that the busy mother saw the mistake she had made in the past, and she registered a silent promise.

Together they washed the collie, and Jack spent hours combing and brushing the beautiful coat. "Oh, Mother," the lad would call, "he is a beauty now, isn't he?"

While the dog showed dumb gratitude, yet his gaze was often wistful, and many times he set his face toward the south, his head held high and his sensitive nostrils quivering.

At such time Mrs. Alton would playfully chide him, "Oh you collie clown, your dear old dunce of a Duke, to be homesick for old Zibe's Lang's place. Duke, old dog, forget the old home."

But Duke would come and leisurely lay his paw on her lap, and look up at her with his pleading eyes, until the heart of the woman ached, for she had known many homesick days.

"Duke," she said one day, as she took his fine head between her hands, "I don't know what I intended to do when I brought you home, but now I'd like to keep you, but—the look in your eyes,—oh, dog alive! how well I know the feeling. It's not Zibe you want,—it is just "home" you hanker for." As Jack came to them, she drew the boy close to her side, and told him what homesickness meant.

"It's when every waking hour you're swallowing something chokey in your throat, and your mind sees every little thing back home—even to the robin's nest in the second elm tree; in summer you can almost smell the honeysuckle; and no othe was one-half so fragrant; you can hear all the sounds of home, from the faint tinkle of the cow-bell at the edge of the swamp, where the winter-green berries brew, to the certain squeak of the cellar door, and every inch of you aches for it all. At Christmas time the heart is crowded full with memories. Oh, Jack, it is not any one thing, it is the hundred and one things woven together with love——"

"Mother, have you been homesick like that?" he asked with awe.

His mother nodded, then said brightly, "but not now, Sonny Boy; I've not been homesick since I've had you and Daddy Jim, but well do I know the feeling, and so I pity even Duke, and I must take him home, and as I know you'll miss him so, I'll promise you something for Christmas. It is not drawing instruments, but—well, I'll whisper to you.

The fair head bent close to the small dark one, then the boy clapped his hands delightedly and exulted, "oh, that will be all I'll want, Mummie, and with Daddy coming home we'll have a grand Christmas."

Annie Alton smiled a trifle grimly as she thought of meagre Christmas menu, and her heart ached as she set out on the morning before Christmas to return Duke to his unrighteous owner. He was tied in the buggy by a stout strap, for she said, "you are not going to hop out, and lope the last lap, sir; I am going to witness the reunion."

As she drove into Zibe's yard, the dog's excited barking brought the old man hurrying out.

"H'm!" whispered Annie, "he's washed and shaved." His face lighted as he saw the dog straining at his leash, yet he seemed an embarrassed man, and ill at ease.

"Well, Zibe," she said, "I've something to tell you; man alive! it has amazed me that although Duke was beyond doubt ill used, and gaunt for want of food, yet he was homesick; but mark my words, it was not for cold, or hunger, or abuse he was homesick..."

"Mrs Alton," he interrupted, "I've missed Duke terribly, and I'm ready to say you'll never need to come after him again."

"Then, that's that!" she commented crisply, as she untied the leash, and the big dog leaped lightly to the ground, bounding to his master with every sign of joy.

The old man lifted a haggard face to her, and said faltering,—"about them other things you said——"

"Zibe," she cut in, "I simply laid some things before you; I am neither judge nor jury, but there is a Judge who long ago brought peace and goodwill to the world, but foolish folk forget peace and goodwill brings happiness, and happiness makes life worth while, and they try to shut it out."

"Maybe you're right," he mumbled. Putting his hand in his pocket, he drew out a roll of bills and handled Mrs. Alton twenty-five dollars.

In her astonishment she was about to thank him profusely, but catching herself up with a laugh, she said "Thank you, Zibe, it is better late than never," and I wish you better things, and especially a better Christmas than usual."

As she drove out of Zibe's gate, she headed her horses toward town, her heart beating fast. It will be a real Christmas after all," she whispered happily.

It was after noon when at last she reached home, her buggy carrying many parcels. Annie was smiling as she told Jack the joyful news, and lifted out a covered basket. She set it on the ground, untied the cover, and the plumpest, fluffiest, jolliest little collie pup clambered awkwardly out of the basket, lost his balance and tumbled over at Jack's feet. In a moment he was in the boy's arms: "Oh, you dear little fellow, my own dog," he exclaimed. "Mother whispered to me you were coming. You're my Christmas gift."

As Mrs. Alton hurriedly hid a set of drawing instruments in the soap box, she called to Jack to come in, saying, "We have just four hours before Daddy's train comes in, and there's a batch of doughnuts to make, and one dozen other wonderful things to do."

"Oh, boy! We'll be busy," he exulted. "Say, Mother, it's better late than never."

When the evening train puffed and panted into the little station and suddenly jerked to a standstill, a tall, lanky man limped down the steps. A glad light was in his dark eyes as he saw wife and son waiting, and because his heart was too full to utter his own great gladness, he said in his tenderest tones, "Beloved, it is better late than never."

A Christmas Thought

(By Mrs. J. B.)

There are stories aplenty of glorious achievement and golden deeds. This is a simple tale of a child's beautiful thought which, like the Babe in the Manger, was born out of sin and its resultant suffering and which, like Him, brought a measure of peace and happiness to the saddened hearts of those who beheld it.

Bobby lay in bed trying ever so hard to fall asleep. It is well understood by boys of Bobby's age that Santa Claus, having some mysterious knowledge of the doings of all children, passes by the home in which the wakeful child lies. Bobby did not want to be passed by, and, besides, he wanted to sleep because morning comes so quickly when a fellow once gets asleep. Morning was bringing, besides the usual childish delights of Christmas, the added happiness to Bobby of having his mother home from the office all day.

Muver, as Bobby called her, was sitting in the big arm chair under the shaded lamp just outside his door. She had been reading again the big fat letter which had come from daddy. Bobby had heard the rustle of the paper. Now he is dismayed to hear another sound, that of soft weeping and little sobs. What could be the matter with Muver? She was no sissy and never cried, except that once, when old Sport, their pet, had died. Muver took her knocks standing up as she had taught him to do.

But Bobby had had no knocks to speak of in his brief life. It was this very subject of knocks which was causing mother grief, together with a great loneliness which had become more acute on this Christmas Eve, when all the world seemed so happy and jovial—when everyone had a right to be happy. She had had so many knocks that now she was almost immune from suffering. She had ceased to care when former acquaintances failed to see her as she passed. She had even ceased to think about the awful laugh which had rung down the street once, after she had passed a group of them. She remembered it now only when she had occasion to think of the place of eternal punishment. At the time it had seemed to her that it was with just such an ugly laugh each new arrival would be welcomed there by his host. It was not for herself but for the child she grieved. She had shared the blame with her husband and had shared the punishment also. They had given him six years. Five had passed. Each year brought the time nearer when she should have to tell the child the ugly story of their effort to become rich quickly, the taking of the bank's money for investment, the failure, discovery, conviction. How to present it to him became her constant problem. She wanted so much to soften the ugliness of it all. He had been taught to love this far-off mysterious parent who had gone away some place when he was a baby and who would come back again next year. Little childish letters had been sent to daddy and loving ones received in return. Bobby was immensely proud of this father and often boasted of him and his abilities as children do.

Bobby had not yet gone to school. He had not enjoyed much of the companionship of other children. Indeed he played with them only in his mother's presence. For Muver knew that there are those parents who carelessly or maliciously place in the unskilled hands of their children weapons which have the power to crucify the heart of the unfortunate child whose parent has erred. Bobby must not be allowed to suffer. She must not let him become ashamed of his father. They would call him ugly names and taunt him. So Bobby was taught privately by Aunt Jean—not his real aunt, but a dear friend of Muver's, who had been a teacher. Bobby enjoyed scarcely more liberty than his father. He was shut in all day with a woman in a neighboring apartment, who just "kept her eye on him," rarely spoke to him and discouraged his questions. As a result the child, in some respects, was more thoughtful and dreamy than most children of his age, while in other respects he was more child-like and innocent.

How could he know, lying in his little bed, of the weight of dread his mother carried for him? He would like to run out and comfort her but he felt she would not like him to do that. He could not intrude upon her sorrow. Perhaps Santa Claus could make her happy with a beautiful gift, but it was too late to reach him by letter now. Muver had only got a dull-looking book for Christmas from Mr. Madill at the office, with only one picture in the front, that of an old man with long whiskers. Aunt Jean would probably bring in a hankie, or a box of note-paper, tomorrow. How he wished he had asked Santa Claus to bring something for Muver! God and Santa were closely associated in the child's mind, so, getting out of bed, he knelt and offered an eloquent little prayer, beseeching God to tell Santa not to bring him the gifts he had asked in his letter, but to bring Muver a most lovely gift. He could not think for what article to ask, so he left that for God and Santa Claus to decide.

Creeping back into bed he again tried to sleep, and had almost succeeded when he heard a soft knock upon the sitting-room door. His first thought was one of dismay. Santa Claus had arrived, and he and Muver were still wide awake. But no, it could not be Santa Claus. He came by the chimney, and, anyway, Santa had never been known to kiss folks. Muver would not want to kiss him with his sooty clothes and his long whiskers. Muver was kissing somebody and laughing and crying and talking. Who could it be coming so late on Christmas Eve? Wondering, he fell asleep.

Bobby awakened in the morning to find his mother and daddy standing beside his bed. Yes, it was his daddy; he knew him from the picture on the living-room table. There were hugs all around and much laughing and talking about how big he had grown and whom he resembled and how well he could write. Then daddy and muver went off to the little kitchenette to make the breakfast.

Bobby as he dressed could hear the coffee bubbling and could smell the toast. He was glad daddy had come home, especially if he would watch the toast every morning. Bobby did not like watching toast, he kept forgetting, especially when the big fat spider was catching flies in his web outside the window. It was winter now and the spider had gone, but it was a tiresome job for a fellow at any time.

Bobby was surprised to find Santa Clause had left him toys. He wondered if God had not told Santa about Muver's present. Yes, Muver was showing him a big bunch of red roses. Muver loved the roses. Anybody could see that. She kept bending her face down to touch them as she set the dishes upon the table.

Bobby, who spent so much of his time pondering over things and solving problems in his active little brain, found himself confronted with new and knotty problems on this Christmas morning. He had viewed his new toys and found Santa had left all the things he had asked for. He wound springs, set wheels a-turning, and glanced through his new books.

He heard his daddy and muver talking. He wondered what "Christmas parole" was, if it was a beautiful gift. Daddy had got it and was very pleased about it. He wondered what "restitution" was. Daddy and muver were going to work very hard to make it. He wondered if Muver would help him to make a wee one out of his mecano set. They had made ever so many interesting things on the long winter evenings.

He wondered about the roses. Girls were so queer to be glad to get roses for Christmas. They looked nice and smelled sweet, but a fellow would not want roses. He could not play with them. Besides, they would die. Muver loved them. But then girls were made of sugar and spice and everything nice. That was why they wanted roses for Christmas. He had never heard of Santa Claus carrying roses. They would freeze at the North Pole. It was strange too that Santa Claus had left him gifts when he had told him not to trouble, to make Muver happy instead. Perhaps Santa Claus had been already on his way with his toys all packed up when he had offered his prayer. In that case God must have looked after Muver.

With a flash of sudden revelation he ran to his mother to verify his solution of this problem. Pulling her head down so that he might whisper in her ear, he asked, "Muver, did daddy bring the roses?"

"Yes, dear. Why do you ask?"

"Well, you see, Muver, I asked God to tell Santa to bring you a beautiful gift. But Santa must have been gone already with his toys. I asked him when I heard you crying. So God sent the roses Himself to make you glad, just like He sent the Christ-Child to make the wicked world glad. And he sent daddy a year before we were 'specting him to bring the roses. You like them, don't you, Muver?"

Muver pondered these words in her heart as that other mother pondered years ago, and was made very happy because of them. Out of the ugliness and failures of the past their beauty shone forth like a star. Whatever their child came to know of sorrow and shame because of their sin, there would ever be the sweet mingling in his memory of his father's home-coming with God and roses and the blessed Christmas morning.

The father and Aunt Jean would love the thought. She would like to reveal it to all the world. But the world would not understand or care. It was content with the unlovely facts. Three—only three—wise men came out of the East to seek and to find that supreme loveliness which was the Christ-Child.

Home For Christmas

(By L. M.)

It was a dull, dark, dreary afternoon, early in December, and Mrs. Dill was trauding her way through the mud from the barn to the house. She had just been out to the barn, feeding the turkey and chickens that were shut in to fatten for the feasts of the approaching Christmas holiday.

"I am glad that I am through with those fowl for today," she thought "except for getting a pot of potatoes from the cellar and getting them cooled for he fowl's breakfast.

It is such a nasty day, I just hate to be out. Poor little Fay will have a terribly slippy walk home from school to-night. I don't wonder that she is tired and out of humour, sometimes, when she has to walk two miles on such a night as this. The fall is such a hard time anyway. One is just so tired that—"

"Oh, mummie" Look! A letter from brother Dick!"

Mrs. Dill turned and saw Fay, her little ten-year-old daughter bounding up the road, her face all smiles, waving a letter in her hand, as she splashed through the mud. When Fay, panting for breath, reach reached her mother and panded her the letter, Mrs. Dill smiled too, for sure enough thel etter was from Dick, the grown up son, who had been away from home for three years.

"Hurry and open it mummie, so's we can see what he has to say," cried Fay.

As they entered the kitchen Mrs. Dill obeyed, while Fay stood at her elbow, eagerly waiting to hearn what the letter contained.

"He says he will be home next week!" enclaimed Mrs. Dill "and will be here with us till after Christmas."

"Oh, goody! goody!" cried Fay, clapping her hands gleefully, and dancing all over the kitchen.

"And oh, mummy," after her excitement had abated a little. "Mrs. Miller told me, when I called in at the post office for the mail, that one of her daughters, the one they call Barbara, is coming home for Christmas too. She's coming all the way from Nova Scotia. That's nearly as far as where Dick is in Alberta, isn't it, mummie? Mrs. Miller just got the letter from Babara this afternoon and she was just as tickled about it as we are about Dick. She says Barbara han't ben home in five years.

I'm going out to tell daddy all the good news. Isn't it just glorious around Christmas time?" she said, as she skipped out the door to find h erfather.

Mrs. Dill also was beginning to think it; "It was just glorious around Christmas time"; as she set to work with such new vigor to prepare the supper.

The Millers were very close friends of the Dills so Mrs. Dill was almost as delighted to hear about Barbara coming home as she was about Dick.

That evening as Mr. and Mrs. Dill and Fay ate supper, there was a great deal of planning done to make Dick's home coming a cheerful and interesting one. They hadn't expected him home this year, and with only the three of them, they hadn't felt as if it was worth while doing much preparing for Christmas; but now that another was to be with them to enjoy the result of their preparations, they set to work with a will, each task being a pleasure, now that it seemed worth while, rather than a burden. The days that followed jus flew past but by Thursday of the week that Dick was expected, everything was scrubbed and polished until the whole house was just shining, and of course, Dick's room was made as comfortable as hands could make it. Dick's favorite cookies were to be found in the cookie jar and his favourite tarts were also at hand. Mrs. Dill did not know just what day he would arrive but she anxiously watched the telephone in case he might 'phone for his father to meet him at the station.

Mrs. Dill was out getting an armful of wood, when she heard a plane pass over.

"That must be that sea-plane up from Peterborough again," Mrs. Dill thought. "They won't be able to make many more trips this year, for the lake will soon be freezing, and they won't have any place to land."

After putting more wood on the fire and working around the kitchen for a while, a knock was heard at the door.

'I suppose that is some agent or peddler to sell something," Mrs. Dill said to herself, as she went to the door.

"I suppose that is some agent or pedler to sell something," Mrs. Dill said to herself, as she went to open it.

"Dick""

"Mother!"

After embracing each other affectionately Mrs. Dill said, "but Dick, how in the world did you get here? I didn't see a car or anything come up the lane."

"Quite right mother. I didn't come up the lane. I came to the lake in a plane, and walked up the foot path through the woods, from the landing."

"Oh, That's just great. But how did you manage it, Dick?"

"One of my chums has a seaplane, and was hopping back to Peterborough for a few days before the lakes freeze, so when he heard that I was coming home, he invited me to come along with him. Of course I wasn't silly enough to let a chance like that pass by, so here I am at home, about a day and a half sooner than I dared hope for, and gee, it's good to be home again for a while, after being away so long."

After Fay's joy, at finding Dick at home, when she came in from school, had nearly spent itself, she said, "Mrs. Miller had a telegram from Barbara saying that she was on the train, and would be at the station to-night; so Mrs. Miller's going to have the concert practice at her place to-morrow night. She says that it will be a good way for Barbara to get seeing the people: and I'm going to make Dick come with me. It will be so much nicer, to have some one to go with, than just having daddy come after me."

When the people were at Miller's practicing, some of them remembered that both Dick and Barbara had a lovely voince, and insisted that each of them would sing a solo, at the concert. Babara consented, but Dick said that he did not like singing solos, but would be glad to help in any other way. It was then suggested that Dick and Barbara give a duet. They consented to this, but as it took them some time to chooose an appropriate number and the time for the concert was close at hand, it was necessary for them to do quie a lo of exra pracicing, together. Dick accompanied Barbara and Fay to the general practices, and quite often brought Barbara to his home, beween times, so that she could play the accompaniment on Mrs. Dill's piano, as Millers' did not have one.

The day before Christmas, Mr. Dill's car not being in use, Dick borrowed it and he and Barbara went to town. When they returned that evening, Mrs. Dill went to the door to greet them, but became speechless with amazement, when Dick introduced Barbara to her, as his wife. When she found her voice again, she said, "I never dreamed it would be so soon. I knew that you were very fond of each other, and I don't know of anyone that I would like as well, as Barbara, for a daughter-in-law. But this is such a surprise. You must forgive me, my dear Barbara, for any blunders I make in welcoming you as a daughter."

"I expected you would be surprised, mother" said Dick; "but I just couldn't think of leaving to go back out west, without Babs, and we didn' want to make a lot of extra work for anyone just at this busy season, so we decided to get married quietly and celebrate our wedding and Christmas at the same time."

Mrs. Miller was invited to the Dill home for Christmas and a very enjoyable day was spent by both families. In the evening the neighbours came to charivari the newly weds, but received such a hearty welcome that they spent the evening at cards and dancing instead.

The next day, Dick and Barbara left amidst all kinds of good wishes, for their honemoon out through the Rockies and back to Dick's ranch in Alberta.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:
I feel I must write a letter of appreciation anent your recent articles in the "Whatnot." The humor in Wednesday's issue was good. Give it to them, Marion. Then you had an article re the odours of different homes. Pleasant and unpleasant. I have tried to explain several times, that every person I know has a separate odour to me, but could not make them understand.

I had a group of friends here the other night, and brought up the topic of "Marion's Page" as I call it. Everyone was unanimous that it had made a vast difference to the paper. Some were curious to know who you were, but I thought it more interesting not to know. It must be hard editing a page like that, accepting this, rejecting the other, but you have satisfaction in knowing you are making a success of it. I know that lots of men read it, so keep up the good work.

Did you ever think of the humor of the telephone I have had a number of incidents, which when I retold them caused great hilarity.

Let me thank you for all the helps you sent me, I do hope I am not coming too often, if I am just let me know.

Wishing you continued success,

Yours very truly,
Quo Vadis?"

Why don't you tell the neighbors some of the humorous telephone incidents, "Quo Vadis?" I'm sure such a letter would be enjoyed.

It is very nice to know that you and your friends enjoy our page so well, and let me assure you that neither you nor they can come too often. I want this page to be so neighborly that everyone feels she may drop in at any time, stay as long as she likes, and talk about anything she likes. So come again soon, and often!

"Dear Marion,

I feel that I know you pretty well now, for I have written to you several times, and I have had some nice little notes from you. You are, in correspondence at any rate, a very likeable person!

We are trying an experiment in our house this winter, in which some of the neighbors may be interested. The only thing is, the fruits of the experiment take up most of the dining room table! My husband is interested in electrical work, and makes possible what promises to be a very nice affair. He and my bo/ ave built an oval frame of wood and tin, or zinc, to sit on the table, extended to its fullest length. In this they have piled up stones about two feet high, with a bowl and fountain on top. The stones slope down to the edges of the board, and in between them are earth and moss, with bulbs here and there, and even some ferns and flowers. Winding up the slope is a rustic path, with flagged steps. The bowl contains water, with an electric light in it, and through some mysterious electrical device, the water spurts up in a little fountain, and falls back into the bowl. The same water goes around and around—of course it doesn't run over the rocks and earth.

There was some muss when it was being built, but I really like it now, and when the bulbs bloom it wil be a real picture. Such a centrepiece could be made without the fountain, of course, and should be very nice.

It s very handy, having a man who can work with electric wires and things—I don't know how I would get on otherwise. There's so much work can be saved by having outlets in the proper places, don't you think? Last week I got the toaster all grease and crumbs so that it short-circuited or burned out. My husband brought me home a little brush such as if used for cleaning baby's bottle, and it's the handiest thing! After toasting (I had a new set of wires put in) I just give the toaster a brush, and it is as clear as new.

I'm looking forward to Christmas this year with more pleasure than for many years, thanks to you, dear Marion. Gifts have always been a worry to me, for we have a large connection and one just hates to give the same old ties and handkerchiefs and pictures. I have made three sets of the little bags of flower petals (I made a lot of pot pourri from your recipe in summer); two sets of holders; a portfolio with two pockets; and the laundry bag told about by Mrs. A. A. B. Now, Marion, don't you think I'm an industrious person? I'm planning a little gift for you, too, but it's to be a surprise!

Well, I've rambled on long enough—I hope not TOO long—so I'll close with my very best wishes.

Yours very sincerely,
Beryl."

You are certainly to be commended on your industry, "Beryl"; I doubt whether many neighbors are as far on with their Christmas gifts as you, and I am delighted that you found the little folder so full of inspiration. The description of the dining room table garden makes it seem very attractive—almost a recommendation to girls to marry men who know electricity! Your idea about the little brush for the toaster is good, too. I'll be looking forward to your next letter; you are always so interesting.

"Dear Marion:

I have been enjoying your page for so long I felt I should write and express my appreciation. I enjoy your page, it is the first page I turn to, I have received lots of helps from it and I think it is just the thing. You must have to spend long hours working for the page—getting it ready for us.

I am enclosing the coupon for the helps.

A. G."

I am very glad that you like the page, "A. G.", and hope the helps are what you want.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

You said it all and how! But here is more ammunition for the battle.

Are we supposed to realize how entirely unnecessary and superfluous we are in the great man-made scheme of "things as they are?"

Ever since Adam of Eden blamed a woman for what he did wrongly, mankind has had the pleasant little habit of taking all credit and praise to himself when he ever did anything worthy of note and in case of error of course some woman was to blame for his downfall or misfortunes.

"Thinker" reminds one of a self-important school boy whose mother has given him material to build something with the admonition, "Now be careful Don't hurt yourself or destroy anything," because she knows who will have the trouble and care if he meets with disaster! But see how he throws out his chest and "See that I have done! Nobody else could do that!"

Just for example look how women have had to nurse back to health and sanity the broken wrecks that war, another man-made institution of which we do not boast, has strewn over the world.

In the first place women have for generations accepted man's verdict that they were not capable of doing this and that and therefore what he said must be right. So, of course, they did not know just what they had it in them to do. With an eye to their own comfort they had regulated women's position so well that most of her time was spent in doing things for his well-being. The poor thing had no time for any of the big achievements that man had lesiure to give his brain to, and no interruptions if you please!

It's not for me to build up women's work by tearing down man's. Of course, men have done great things and have been untiring in their efforts to invent various wonders for their pleasure, convenience and too often destruction! One has no wish to belittle the worthwhile things he has done. Let us be generous, thereby giving him one better!

If woman's brain is not equal to man's even in the literary world, how come the works of George Eliot to be the most prominent of her time?

As for inventions women stand in the position so far as the 'man behind the guns' a very important one we think! I dare to say that anything women would invent would not be for the destruction and horrifying of fellow creatures!

Let us concede to man then the doubtful honor of inventing poison gas, bombs and implements of warfare! Do you think a woman's nature would allow her to give her mind to such invention?

From another point of view surely all this cleverness of man is not inherited from the paternal side. Do give mother credit for a few of the brains. Even though we are familiar with the father who says when beholding his offspring's unpleasant tricks, "Well, he doesn't get that from my side of the family."

Then, too, when did a woman ever grudge her men folks her most loyal support and encouragement? Why we have often ourselves heard some great man admit, "All that I am, I owe to my mother's training." But in most cases how grudging is the praise we win for any effort of ours not connected with man's comfort? How condescending the admission that it is good, how patronizing that "wonderful for a woman." How vastly different from woman's whole hearted pride and delight in the glory of her loved ones! He seems to have adapted the slogan, "They shall not pass' against her invasion of his territory, or so it seems to him. Certainly she must fight against odds and encounter opposition all the way.

Remove all women from the world and leave the men to it and you'll find the hub of the wheel is gone!

Do you suppose woman have never felt the urge to wander forth and discover strange lands, to adventure and to see? Why, sometimes she has envied the soldier going forth to battle and sudden death for his "crowded hour of glorious life," while she must perforce say at home and tend to her knitting —and wait. How hard a thing it is to wait. Takes more endurance than any dash to the Pole.

It is quite an ordinary thing now-a-days for women, the "weak" sex, to swim the English Channel; hop across the Atlantic in a plane; hunt big game in Africa, drive Red-Cross ambulances through dangerous country, even to "feed the brute" under shell fire at the front. All this with courage unwavering (as man's I nearly said) but I really mean as a woman's for what man would face willingly the horror that some woman is facing daily, time and time again throughout her life.

Too long have women been judged by the frivolous type which all real women abhor, who gain their wishes by appealing helplessly to the vanity and gallantry of the great big he-man for "poor, weak little me." Gold diggers we call them now-a-days.

The tearful, fainting half-invalid of Victorian fame was popular with men. She made them feel so superior, I suppose! I invite you to look at the new woman of to-day. Coming into her own, brushing aside all the stupid conventions and false ideals of past ages. Coming into what she has always hungered for and wanted to be, but held back by fear of stepping out of that mysterious abode man had bestowed upon her—a woman's place.

Not for the world would I advocate women casting aside her feminine attributes or taking the ways of man. I am no admirer of that masculine abnormality we occasionally meet. Women will never win acknowledgement by imitating the manners and customs of men. We want something better than that and we all know that "imitation is the sincerest form of flattery."

Mrs. Browning tells us about a woman who is worth a 'nearer view.'

"Through suffering and through sorrow thou hast past,
To show us what a woman true may be,
They have not taken sympathy from thee,
Nor made thee any other than thou wast."

I apologize for the length of my letter and shall not be surprised if it fails to appear in print. This time I will sign myself

A Woman—and Proud of it."

In the first place, I had to change your pen name, because another misguided man used the one you had chosen and I knew you wouldn't wish to get with that company.

Your letter is a splendid assertion of woman's achievements, and a few more letters like this will win me that box of chocolates I hope "Thinker" is man enough to put up.

RICH RAISED DOUGHNUTS (Contributed by Bessie, Peterborough.

1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
4 cups scalded milk
1 yeast cake dissolved in ½ cup lukewarm water
flour and 3 beaten eggs.

Cream the butter, add 1 cup sugar and beat again to a cream, add the scalded milk. After it cools to blood heat, add the yeast cake in lukewarm water. Mix with flour to make a thick batter. Cover and let rise over night. In the morning add to the sponge the 3 beaten eggs; another cup of sugar. Mix with flour to make a smooth dough. Let rise, turn out on a board. Roll 1 inch thick, but into shape and let rise again for about half an hour, then fry in lard and roll in powdered sugar, after draining a minute on paper or plate. I use half the amount and have thirty doughnuts. I find these good.

If you do not clearly understand, this, write your trouble through Marion and I will explain.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

I wish to thank Mrs. R. G. and "Lover," for their suggestions, which I will use shortly, and for their nice expressions of appreciation of this new column suggested by "Mariana."

DECEMBER 5, 1928

This is the anniversary of the birth of Christina Georgina Rossetti, born December 5, 1830, and I am reproducing her poem, "Mother Country."

Oh what is that country
And where can it be,
Not mine own country,
But dearer far to me?
Yet mine own country,
If I one day may see
Its spices and cedars,
Its gold and ivory.

As I lie dreaming
It rises, that land;
There rises before me
Its green golden strand,
With the bowing cedars
And the shining sand;
It sparkles and flashes
Like a shaken brand.

Do angels lean nearer
While I lie and long?
I see their soft plumage
And catch their windy song.
Like the rise of a high tide
Sweeping full and strong;
I mark the outskirts
Of their reverend throng.

Oh what is a king here,
Or what is a boor?
Here all starve together,
All dwarfed and poor:
Here Death's hand knocketh
At door after door,
He thins the dancers
From the festal floor.

Oh what is a handmaid,
Or what is a queen?
All must lie down together
Where the turf is green,
The foulest face hidden,
The fairest not seen;
Gone as if never
They had breathed or been.

Gone from sweet sunshine
Underneath the sod,
Turned from warm flesh and blood
To senseless clod;
Gone as if never
They had toiled or trod,
Gone out of sight of all
Except our God.

Shut into silence
From the accustomed song,
Shut into solitude
From all earth's throng,
Run down though swift of foot,
Thrust down though strong;
Life made an end of,
Seemed it short or long.

Life made an end of,
Life just begun;
Life finished yesterday,
Its last sand run;
Life new born with the morrow,
Fresh as the sun:
While done is done forever;
Undone, undone.

And if that life is life,
This is but a breath,
The passage of a dream
And the shadow of death;
But a vain shadow
If one considereth;
Vanity of vanities,
As the preacher saith.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

Many persons suppose that curry is a single flavor and imagine that somewhere in India grows a curry tree or curry bushes from which this popular flavoring ingredient is obtained. As a matter of fact, curry flavor is the combination of a great many ingredients, including cardamon seed, coriander seed, cumin seed, dried cassia leaves, cayenne, chilly, ginger, mustard, turmeric, cinnamon, mace and cloves.

A recipe from an English cook in India for making curry powder calls for turmeric, coriander seeds, cardamon, cumin, fenugreek, cloves, white peppercorns and cayenne. And in making any of the well-known curried dishes in true Indian style a number o seasonings and ingredients are used which can with difficulty be obtained in this country. The juice of taramrinds and the juice of fresh limes are sometimes included.

However, a very good curry sauce may be made with ingredients at hand, providing you have a good curry powder. Here is a recipe for making curry sauce for fish, lamb or mutton, chicken, etc.: Melt three tablespoons of butter in a saucepan and fry in it a small onion, sliced. When lightly browned, add a level tablespoon of curry powder and the same amount of white flour. Stir over a low flame until smooth and then add three cups of stock—chicken stock, if making chicken curry, and stock from lamb bones if making curry of left-over lamb. Stir well and cook gently for a few minut s. Then add a slice of tomato or a tablespoon of canned tomato, with a very little salt. Cook again for about twenty minutes and strain before serving.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

MAKING YOURSELF OLD

Your work is such that you can sit at a desk all day; perhaps you stand occasionally or walk into another room or even up a stairway. But as far as real physical work is concerned you simply don't do it. However, you have always been blessed with a good appetite, and enjoy your meals. In fact you are eating as much, if not more, than when you were doing hard physical work outdoors.

What is going to happen to all this extra food that is not used up by the cells of the body now that you are doing no real work?

It is quite possible that a considerable portion of it will not be completely used up by the cells, and these half used or half burned products then enter the blood and act as a sort of poison there.

This poison has a tendency to irritate the walls of the blood vessels, inflame them,and the natural lining and elastic tissue is replaced by a hard tissue just as the natural flesh is replaced by scar tissue after a burn.

Naturally, then, blood vessels that have hard unresisting walls, make the heart pump the blood harder through them, and this is called high blood pressure.

Now any poison in the blood from teeth, tonsils, gall bladder, waste from intestine and so forth, causes the same condition and hence high blood pressure.

This means then that high blood pressure can be due to poisons from infected parts of the body, or from food that has not been completely digested.

This latter explains why somebody you know who always appeared to be in good health, a good eater, perhaps hard drinker, suddenly finds himself with high blood pressure, and has to cut down on his food intake, and take light exercise to help use up the food he does eat. So, as we grow older and do less physical work, it is only good sense that we cut down on our food intake, because if food is not digested completely and used by the body, it is a source of irritation to the blood vessels.

Irritated blood vessels mean high blood pressure and continued high blood pressure means old age.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

If it is not too much trouble, will you please tell me whether it is possible to wash an eider down quilt?

Shorty."

I have never done it, "Shorty," but I am told that it can be done quite satisfactorily. Prepare a tubful of warm water and boiled soap (or soap flakes), and plunge the quilt into it. Squeeze with the hands till the water becomes dirty, then place in fresh suds and repeat the process until clean. Rinse well in as many changes of water as are necessary to get rid of the soap. Squeeze out the water and hang up to dry. When dry, shake the quilt till it is quite oft and full.

Reduce the Acid

In sick stomachs—Instantly

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Do prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Milburn of Smith township yesterday celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding. Fifty years ago, the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Milburn was solemnized on the farm across the road from their present homestead. They were both born in the township of Smith and have passed all their lives there. Yesterday, relatives and neighbors celebrated with them the golden anniversary of their wedding. Over sixty people were present at the reception in the afternoon and thirty relatives sat down to dinner with them later. Their four children were with them and seven grandchildren. Only one son was missing, the late Lieutenant Noble Milburn, killed in action during the Great War. One of the bridesmaids of half a century ago, Mrs. A. McIntyre of Bobcaygeon, was also present for the occasion. The other bridesmaid and the two attendants for the bridegroom were not able to be present. They are living in Western Canada and in the United States. Decorations of the table last evening were carried out in gold and white, with two large bouquets of chrysanthemums and a three-storey wedding cake. The toast to the bride and bridegroom was proposed by Mr. W. Mann of Smith township. In the afternoon, when a large number of pretty gifts were received, including the presentation of two cyclamen and zinnia, from the Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church in Lakefield, tea was served from the bridal china of half a century ago. Visitors during the afternoon from Lakefield were the pastor of the church attended by Mr. and Mrs. Milburn, the Rev. S. A. Kemp and Mrs. Kemp, also Mrs. F. Richardson and her daughter, Miss Margaret Richardson. The four children of Mr. and Mrs. Milburn were present at dinner; Mrs. H. Stubbs of Sarnia, Mrs. R. THERE was some talk in Peterborough a few months ago of a new apartment building in which suites were to cost more than most of us care to think of paying, at least $20 a room.

We all know the expense and trouble in ANY apartment—some 've been in had not room in the kitchenette to whip cream.

* * *

But read yesterday of some instances in United States cities that put the ambitious Peterborough project to shame—and they are actualities while this of ours has never materialized.

There came from California a quaint tale of a 38-room house built for a childless couple.

That caused discussion for a few days, until another scribe came along with the story of a New York Fifth avenue apartment of 41 rooms occupied by a bachelor.

There are 18 rooms for his servants, leaving a paltry 23 rooms for his own use. The bare apartment cost $375,000, but with furnishings stands Mr. Markle—from Wilkes-Barre, with coal mines—a cool million.

* * *

This apartment has everything, including a block-long Roman pool and a private switchboard with some twenty extensions and a day and night operator.

Unlike the sponsors of the Peterborough project, Mr. Markle shrinks from publicity. He shoos snooping reporters and photographers away. He wants to live simply and quietly in his 41 rooms, wandering about among his art treasures.

Those who know say the mere upkeep of such a castle-like apartment costs $75,000 a year, which looks big alongside the $1,200 that would have been required to pay for a five-room apartment in the locally projected skyscraper.

* * *

In a building to be erected in New York's 70's, on Park avenue, a middle-aged bachelor is to see Mr. Markle and raise him twelve rooms. He will have fifty-three rooms in all, sixteen of which are to be designed to meet especial needs of his friends when they are house guests.

* * *

Just fancy, sixteen spare bedrooms!

It seems that Peterborough will have to wake up if it is to meet the aspirations of those who say, while watching traffic at Charlotte and George, "It's getting more like New York every day."

* * *

We need a few apartments with formal gardens on the roof for informal parties, and arbored walks at the end of which one would gain a beautiful vista of a city to which New York can never compare for beauty.

Maybe some day we will have them!

* * *

The article printed last week, telling of the pouring of beer from the brewery into the sewer, reminds me of the use to which old breweries have been put in other places.

It has been found that old abandoned breweries are fertile fields for the quick growing of mushrooms, and provide a market turnover within a few days.

Mushrooms bring around a dollar a pound in large cities, and it is said several growers are realizing as high as $400 a day.

When one orders "mushrooms an ——" in a Peterborough restaurant, and pays about 60 cents or 80 cents, one realizes the profit there must be in the business.

Certainly more profitable than pouring treated hops and barley into the sewer!

But, don't you think, growing mushrooms in a brewery is somewhat akin to the business of growing them in the catacombs of Paris, as described a few months ago in a Sunday paper?

Did you ever hear, by the way, of preserving mushrooms? The proprietor of a Chinese restaurant in the city told me about imported mushrooms, dried like apricots or apples. They are brought in from China and Japan, soaked a few hours, and cooked.

* * *

These, my informant said, are not used in the restaurant, but are kept for personal use of the staff, by whom they are relished.

There has been a big demand for the Christmas party helps, but there are still some left. These helps, prepared by Laura, tell how to conduct a Christmas party, what games to play, and how to make decorations.

There are also some of the Christmas gift helps on hand, telling how to make dainty gifts at home.

SOME OF THIS YEAR'S TOYS

"DARLING!" exclaimed a tient exasperation one hears mother, in that tone of pasometimes, "you must not touch!"

And she gently unscrambled a fat, brown rhinocerous from the child's blonde hair. The counter with the circus animals was a little high for daughter to reach, but she had managed to bring one animal down—into her hair, as it happened!

To enjoy visiting a toy store, one must take a child along. The more imagination the child possesses, the better. A little girl, who started the day pleasantly by inventing a game of her own—of counting all the blue velvet coats she saw—was a great help. She had one objective—a doll—the price to be within a dollar. She wanted a small doll, anyway, she said, so she could makes clothes for it.

Do Your Shopping Early

This sort of excursion must be conducted early in the season to be truly enjoyable. One couldn't have near so much fun later, when the aisles are crowded and the salespeople are weary.

After stopping to admire some very beautiful little music boxes that tinkled little bell-like tones, and a glass case with a village, and a whole railroad system in it, switches, a station, street lights, a stop and go sign and a train, of course, it was decided to go and visit the dolls immediately. There were just ever so many dolls to choose from, even if one's purchase was limited to one precious dollar. They ranged in size from a tiny person who could hide under a stamp—a least under a Special Delivery stamp, all dressed, too, in a crocheted costume, to a large fat baby doll with a mild blank expression, all of twelve inches high—which was marked "Special, 95 cents."

Take Your Choice in Dolls

There were just a few dressed dolls—most of them were waiting for a small, loving mother to clothe them. How very difficult to choose There were ever so many sizes of small, jointed dolls, some with eyes that shut and opened, real hair and little painted shoes and stockings.

Here again a careful selection must be made—dark hair or light—blue eyes or brown—four little costumes to choose from. Having chosen a sweet little brown-eyed girlie with a white hat and a red dress, and white shoes and stockings, then, that important matter being settled, one could visit the other dolls at one's leisure.

The young lady often was very much interested in some lovely dolls from Italy. They had pretty "character" faces, fluffy hair, cunning full dresses with bits of bright felt for trimming, and carried most animated expressions. Then there were other American dolls, in quite modern dresses, pretty little corn colored organdie frocks with hand work on the front and tiny, fitted hats to match. The organdie costume came also in rose and apple green.

Dolls From the Funnies

There were the sartoon dolls, too—characters from the funnies, made of stamped, pebbled oilcloth, that should last for some time, even with the most energetic handling.

Oh, yes, there were the doll things to look at. Little trunks that would close and lock. When opened, there was the doll and all her wearing apparel. Some of these supplied brush and comb, and a tiny bar of soap and a wash cloth and towel.

At another place, one could purchase a complete outfit for washing dollie clothes. There was a tub on a little table, a real-for-sure-enough wringer, a clothes basket, a drying stand, and of course, an ironing board and tiny iron would follow.

Come in All Colors

There are only a few that one might call static toys. It is a demand of childhood with all its store of energy, that a toy "do" something. For the tiny folks—and even they enjoy rattles—there are soft toys to cuddle. Pale pink or blue plush animals of all sizes are waiting in the shop for them. Velvet creatures come in all colors—lavender pups, a fat blue pig and a charming kitten in tan, all ready to spring on a mouse.

But as soon as she or he starts to toddle about, the toy must be capable of more action, to hold the little one's attention. Then come the push toys, with a slender rod attached, so the toy may march ahead. A little boy would like a black bear who struck a drum and clashed cymbals as he was pushed ahead. There are other wooden toys that are to be pulled on a string, instead of being pushed ahead. These are varied from cartoony creatures to a fat duck that strikes her head into a pan, making a lovely rattle-bang every time she moves.

Things for Older Children

For the older children there are activities of many kinds suggested by the playthings. A boy can be an archer, one day after Christmas, and use his bow and arrows. Another day he can run a bus line for his sister's new dolls. Besides a fine looking bus, there may be a handsome coal truck to engage his attention. These gifts are all constructive. He can be an engineer and construct buildings. He may even find an elaborate concrete mixer below the Christmas tree, ready for his industrious hands.

If the young man decides to go into business, like Dad, there are desks just like Dad's to give him to use. One is a roll top affair in silvered oak with a swivel chair. Another is flat topped. One side will roll back and disclose a shelf for a typewriter. These days there are children's typewriters, too. These make useful gifts.

Here Are Musical Toys

If a young person is inclined to music, Dad and Mother will find all sizes of pianos at the toy shop for this person's use. There are cunning small ones for her doll. There are larger ones, the size of a packing box, that will really play. Then there is one still larger that is a really truly piano and has a complete keyboard and all. It stands about three and one-half feet high. This would be admirable as a gift to the child who cares for music.

With her doll and her beads and a present for her older sister, she was ready to go home and tell Mother all about it. She was to do her Christmas shopping a little later and felt amply prepared by the day's visit, not only to do her own shopping for gifts, but to advise, expertly, any member of the family bound on the same errand.

Two Spruce Trees

(By V. B., City)

Two trees stood side by side in the forest. Lofty Spruce was so called because she was so tall and stately. To Little Spruce, growing close beside, it seemed that the tops of her tall sister might reach nearly to heaven. Lofty Spruce was quite the most beautiful tree Little Spruce could see from her place in the forest. Her branches were so regular and tapered up in ever narrowing circles to her erect little tip. Her trunk was slim and erect. Without doubt Lofty Spruce was the most admired and most envied tree in the forest. The trees were all agreed upon that, and so indeed were the little forest people who came to play or to lodge there.

Little Spruce was simply a little spruce. She was not beautiful. Her branches were not regular but stuck out awkwardly in places. Her trunk was neither very straight nor very slim, like that of her tall companion. Yet the other trees in the forest loved Little Spruce as much as they envied and admired Lofty Spruce, and the forest folk loved to loiter in her branches and rest under her shade. It seemed to them that the spicy sweet smell of the spruces was spicier and sweeter in the immediate neighborhood of Little Spruce.

The two trees were the very best of friends and were often heard whispering together. Little Spruce would sigh softly at times as she looked at her friend and wish that she too could be tall and stately and envied and admired. But mostly she was content and happy with the friendship of so beautiful a tree. Lofty Spruce rejoiced in the admiration of her little friend for she dearly loved Little Spruce for her sweetness.

Now one day, near Christmas, there came to the forest a farmer and his boy in search of a Christmas tree for the little daughter of Judge Rolland who lived in the town. He spied Lofty Spruce and cried to his boy. "There is a fine tree. Let us cut this. The judge likes a large one and this is a beauty."

"Now I shall be lovely indeed," whispered Lofty Spruce in delight. "I am to become a Christmas tree. I shall have candles and tinsel and all sorts of sparkling things to adorn me. How fortunate I am." Then noticing the sorrowful aspect of Little Spruce, whose branches had begun to droop at the thought of losing her friend, she quickly added, "Of course I shall miss you, dear Little Spruce and all the other trees of the forest and the little forest people."

"We shall miss you so much, so very much, dear friend," murmured Little Spruce. "I cannot bear to think of how lonely we shall be here without you."

The farmer and his boy quickly brought their axes and were already chopping, chopping away at the slender trunk. Soon the great tree was lying in the soft snow.

Thus, left standing alone, Little Spruce caught the eye of the farmer. "Let us cut this little tree also, he said. "We shall take this to Little Mary Downs' whose mother works for the judge. She lives in a little house on the judge's estate. Little Mary will love to have a Christmas tree too. The poor have so few joys," added the kind hearted farmer.

Little Spruce's branches assumed their usual cheerful appearance. "I too am going to be a Christmas tree," she cried. "I shall sparkle with gay decorations and glow with lighted candles. At last, at last, I shall be beautiful to look upon."

Soon the two trees were on the farmer's cart and on their way to town. They talked carelessly in excited anticipation of the glory that each was about to enjoy. At the door of the great house of the judge they were parted. Lofty Spruce was set up in the big drawing room and Little Spruce was carried on to the humble home of Little Mary Downs.

For many days each tree stood in its respective home, taking its part in the festivities of the blessed Christmastide. At last having fulfilled its happy purpose each was taken down, shorn of its adornment. They were placed together in a far corner of the judge's garden. Pressing close together in a warm embrace and feeling very happy at finding each other they began to recount their experiences.

Lofty Spruce spoke. "Yes, I looked very beautiful, Little Spruce. Tiny electric lamps were strung among my branches and little glass icicles hung glistening from them. There were yards and yards of tinsel. Gay little baskets of sweets and ever so many parcels were tied to me or rested beneath. At my tip was a glowing star and over all was a glistening powder which looked and sparkled like snow in the moonlight. The judge's little daughter and the children who were guests said was the most wonderful Christmas tree they had ever seen.

"I hope you will not thinks me boastful, dear Little Spruce, when I tell you I was most lovely. I spread my branches with the utmost grace and dignity and my point with the glowing star nearly reached to the ceiling."

"No indeed, my friend, you do not boast. You were every lovely, even in the forest with no glittering ornament."

"Tell me, Little Spruce, how fared you in the home of little Mary Downs'? You too must have looked lovely."

Little Spruce replied, "I had hoped to become sparkling and lovely, but you know the Downs are very poor. Mrs. Downs made some trailing streamers of bright papers which she threaded through my branches. She also made little paper boxes and filled them with sweets for Mary and the poor children who came in to see me."

"And were there no bright lights, not even candles?" asked Lofty Spruce.

"No, you see the house belongs to the judge and Mrs. Downs thought it not advisable to have candles in case of fire."

"But oh, I say what a shame! You deserved better treatment, Little Spruce."

"Mary and the other children admired me very much and thought I was quite a beautiful tree. I was happy there and gave forth my most beautiful and spiciest perfume. And oh, I heard the sweetest story. It was about the Christ Child, who came to the wicked world and brought love and peace and goodwill to all men. He it is whose birthday we have helped to make glad." And Little Spruce told to Lofty Spruce the ever beautiful story of the Shepherds and the Wise Men and the Babe in the manger, as he had heard it.

"I say, how wonderful!" murmured Lofty Spruce when he had finished.

Darkness was descending upon the snow-covered earth. A beam of light from an opened door flashed across the snow. A child ran toward them.

"Who is this?" asked Lofty Spruce.

"This is little Mary Downs."

Mary caressed lovingly the branches of her late Christmas tree. "Good-night dear little tree" she said, "I miss you so. I wish I could always have you. I shall always remember you and love you. She inhaled again and again the sweet perfume of the tree and with one last caress she murmured. "Good-night again dear Christmas tree," and ran back to the house.

"It is sweet to be loved just for oneself," murmured Lofty Spruce.

"It is sweeter still to have gladdened the heart of a child, a poor child. He who was the Christ Child said, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unti me'."

"How beautiful, how very beautiful, dear Little Spruce!" murmured the tall tree. And so their branches intertwining the two trees cuddled down to sleep forever on the soft white earth.

Snow, gently falling sprinkled the branches. The moon shone down and Little Spruce and Lofty Spruce glistened as with diamond dust.

Up North

(By Busy Bee)

I was visiting up North among the hills. One afternoon. I was invited to tea at one of the neighbors. There were three young people there of teen age. They lived with their grandfather.

The eldest (who was eighteen) and I were chatting over our embroidery when in comes the second eldest, Miss Addie, saying, "Oh, Martha, I can never go on with the work in the kitchen, my fingers cramp so, I don't know any other way than the way we have always done Addie," said Martha.

Miss Betty do you know anything about it? mentioning the job.

"Why, yes, I have done a great deal of such work."

"I will tell you Addie, my plans," so Betty explained. "Oh thank you ever so much Miss Betty. How glad I am you came in to-day."

About one hour later the grandfather came in.

"Pardon me ladies," said the old gentleman, but Martha I must ask you, are you suspicious of Addie and Arthur being up to any mischief?

Would it be foolish of me to think they were laughing at my way of working? It is a tedious job."

"Perhaps not, grandfather. Addie was in an hour ago complaining of how tedious the work was and Miss Betty gave her some useful hints. Then Miss Betty instructed Grandfather.

After tea grandfather left the room, but was soon back again with a parcel. "Here is one of my old treasures, Miss Betty, which I have pleasure in presenting to you", taking a swift glance at the astonished Addie.

"I have books for Martha which have been in the family for some time."

The old treasure was a writing desk of fine mahogany.

Said grandfather to Betty, "I hope you will not find it too tedious a job to sometimes write to us,"

"You may be sure I will often write Mr. Allison."

"It will soon be Christmas. And if Addie and Arthur show a proper spirit of repentance, we may enjoy it much better than we have our job."

"The next time Addie, any one gives you useful information, I hope you will have the grace to pass it on."

"Never consider a joke smart that has the spirit of cruelty in it."

When I came back from the hills, my young friends wanted to know all about my visit.

"Please tell us a story about life up in the North," said my young friend Alastair, "Did you see or hear anything about the shooting or hunting?"

"I may come to that. I know I had some good partridge dinners."

"I will tell you about a Christmas turkey that was raised up there.

"My neighbors' son, a boy of twelve came to me one day with a surprised and delighted look."

"What has pleased you so, Tom?" I exclaimed.

"See the dandy pen-knife the American gentleman gave me."

"You know there are two Americans camping up in the woods. They are going to stay to shoot wolves that are coming south, killing the farmers' sheep.

"I should like to give the gentleman something for his kindness to me. I never met him before."

"Such friendliness is rare, Tom?" I answered.

Just then his mother's flock of turkeys lit on the fence. "How would a setting of turkey eggs do in the spring?"

"I'll do that," said Tom". A hen would hatch them."

"That's what I thought, too."

Tom was invited over to see them in the fall.

Tom reported a good time and how wonderfully the young birds were growing.

"You know they have no women to cook for them and many a dish of left-overs go to the turkeys.

"My friend and his brother say they seem to have a wild instinct for meat, and since they have given them more they are growing very fast.

"I would like you to hear my friend play the guitar and sing. Miss Betty. His brother plays the violin. You would think it was the wind sighing through the trees."

"I guess you had a good time, Tom."

"The best I ever had."

Talking about Tom and the turkeys to my hostess, it came out that she was a cousin to the Americans.

On Christmas Day my hostess served up the largest turkey I ever saw—one of the famous meat-fed turkeys. "It was a turkey."

A Timid Imposter

(By Anne Stuart)

As she sat at her table there came to Mairi a drift of childish voices, and the patter of hurrying feet, and now and again a ripple of laughter would reach her. She could see the falling snow in the darkened street, could picture the eager look on the faces as they passed. Mairi felt she could have guessed it was Christmas even if she had not known, and with a sigh she turned her attention once more to the invitation card she had picked up in the street that morning.

"The Hazelbank Tennis Club requests the pleasure of Miss McKinnon's company at their dance in Victoria Hall, on Christmas Eve. Fancy Dress. Masks to be discarded at 12 o'clock, when prizes will be given for the best dress."

"I'll do it," said Mairi, feeling better now that the great decision had been made. "After all, I am Miss McKinnon. Though not the Miss McKinnon," she added, as her conscience gave her a prick.

Rather shy, and slow to make friends, Mairi McKinnon, secretary to a wealthy business man, was very much alone. She had come to the city only a month earlier, and this was Christmas Eve. All day, merry parties had passed her; happy families and blissful lovers gazing into bright windows, and Mairi could scarcely stifle a little feeling of envy when the shought of the quiet Christmas before her. She tried to be grateful for her cosy rooms and kindly landlady, but the Christmas feeling made her restless. Then she remembered the card she had found, and she studied its bright letter whils her tea grew cold.

"Three hours before I must start," said Mairi. "Now, what am I to be? Of course! Cinderella, fleeing when the clock strikes twelve! I dare not be seen without my mask, for everyone there will known everyone else. I must order a taxi for twelve."

And now Mairi was all bustle and excitement. How should she dress? Cinderella had a godmother, who changed her into a princess, but Mairi had none. "Well, my white georgette is sweet," thought Mairi, "and I'm sure my silver shoes are pretty enough even for Cinderella," she added, surveying them with satisfaction. "How glad I am that my hair has grown long again; it's my only touch of fancy dress," and Mairi pulled the pins from her golden hair, and began brushing her gleaming tresses. At last she was ready, even to the mask which hid her great brown eyes, but could not detract from the charm of her dainty face. Cinderella gave a parting glance at her reflection in the mirror, and looking into her handbag to make sure that her invitation was secure, went downstairs to the waiting taxi.

Arrived at the hall, Mairi's confidence began to wane, and her heart beat painfully. So many of the girls seemed to know each other, despite their masks. They looked at her rather curiously; then went on with their chatter. Soon they began to go into the dance room, and Mairi followed, wondering if in all that assemblage she'd find anyone to dance with.

"He needn't be Prince Charming," she thought, ruefully, wishing she had stayed with her book and friendly fire. The girls who had partners were on the floor, and Mairi was wondering if she could slip out unobserved, when a tall young man in ordinary evening dress, except for his mask, came to Mairi and said, "Will you dance with me, Fairy?"

"I am not a fairy, only a fairy tale," said Mairi, smiling at her conceit. Mairi loved to dance, and the stranger danced so well, that soon Mairi had forgotten her shyness, had forgotten that she was an imposter, and was enjoying herself thoroughly. She did not lack partners, but the stranger claimed most of her dances, and by supper time they were exchanging confidences, and Mairi learned that the stranger—whom, in her heart even now, she was calling Prince Charming—was a stranger, indeed, having come to town only on a visit to a friend. His friend, who was on the dance committee had pressed him to come to the dance.

"My name," he said, "is John Munro," and he looked at Mairi expectantly. But Mairi had grown strangely silent. The thought of her duplicity was troubling her, and the stranger's frankness made her feel it the more, and she was glad to return to the ballroom, where she might shake off the gloom that was threatening her pleasure.

The hours sped, and Mairi, more like Cinderella than she knew, forgot that at midnight she must flee, and she was dancing with Prince Charming, when, with a blare, the music ceased. The dancers began to form a circle, and panic swept over Mairi, when she realized they were being judged for the prizes. Already some were pulling off their masks, among them, Mairi's partner, who was looking at her eagerly, wishing she'd pull off her's, too.

"First prize goes to Miss McKinnon," announced the judge.

"Me," grasped Mairi, overcome with horror. "Oh!" and slipping from her companion's side, she hurried from the room.

Hastily clasping her cloak around her, she ran down the steps into the snow-covered street.

Of course Prince Charming followed her, and of course he was just too late, and Mairi hated being Cinderella so much then, that she reached the taxi with both her silver slippers, and all that the Prince found, was their prints in the snow. But he did arrive in time to hear the driver say, "Is it 104 Laurel——"

"Her name is McKinnon," murmured the Prince, going back to get his coat, "and she lives at 104 Laurel something or other. I'll find her tomorrow."

Christmas morning found a lonely Cinderella, who was tormented by the thought of her foolishness on the previous night. "How could I think I was the one, when nobody knew I was there! I'd forgotten the other Miss McKinnon. And I wasn't anything, anyway! I should have stayed by the fire. And oh! what must he have thought of me, rushing off like that. I wish I had told him everything. Anyhow I'll never see him again, which is just as well," and Mairi sighed, to show how pleased she was.

After breakfast Mairi set off for a tramp in the snow, to chase away her gloomy thoughts, and to find an appetite for the Christmas dinner which would await her on her return. She had gone but a few steps; when, blinded by the snow, she almost collided with the man who had been in her thoughts all morning.

"Can you tell me——" he began, and stopped abruptly. "Ah! A Merry Christmas! A Merry Christmas, Cinderella!" he exclaimed, holding out his hands.

Peterborough's Smartest Store for Men

SOMETHING THEY MIGHT LIKE

By JEANETTE.

A noted French parfumier has doped it out like this: If you want to appear sophisticated, use his "Noir" perfume, and buy it in the black glass bottle that agrees with its name. If you wish for romance, get the "Bleu" in a blue phial. If you long for adventure, buy the "Vert" or green, and if you crave gaiety, there is Parfum "Blanc," in the white container.

They are charming perfumes from sunny France in this "Debutante" series and they come in the loveliest of little gilt and silver boxes with tiny silver acorn stoppers to the octagon and hexagon-shaped glass phials of different colors. "Blue Orchid" is one of the newest scents, with "Fleur de France" and "Toujours Fidelis." As a Christmas gift for Miladi, one could find nothing daintier, except, perhaps, the "Debutante" chatelaines that belong to the same series.

These are little cloisonne compacts, with brilliant, colored enamel tops. One beautiful little set shows a compact, rouge and lipstick set, done in orchid enamel on a silver base, enclosed.

The question of Christmas gifts is a burning one at this time of year, but Peterborough stores offer such a wonderful variety that none should be long in doubt.

It is said, quite truly, that the gift that can be used is the most appropriate for any person. And individual tastes should be consulted also. For instance, if a man is of the flashy type, give him a tie that speaks for itself, and if he has quiet preferences, give him a book or a jar of that cut tobacco that comes in such pretty glass containers. One man who presented himself with a jar of this tobacco recently donated the empty container to the table later, for use as a biscuit jar.

So, when you give a Christmas present, think of the preferences of the one you wish to remember. Give a flapper a Chanel necklet and present your maiden aunt with a sewing case. Both will be happier than if you waited until the last minute and then gave them handkerchiefs, which always mean that you couldn't think of anything else.

Although, for that matter, anyone should be glad to get handkerchiefs when they come as attractively done up as they do this season. A dainty court lady of other years preens herself on a cardboard cover. Her skirts billow about her in the folds of three dainty handkerchiefs. Or, again, handkerchiefs form the folded rose in the centre of a little basket that is itself made of two handkerchiefs and has a third "mouchoir" as a twisted handle.

A young man who has sportive proclivities would like nothing so much this year as a ski-ing cap. He has every other bit of equipment for this winter sport. Another young man, when consulted as to his preferences, told a story of being in rooms one season, while attending school in another city than his home town. He appreciated intensely Christmas gifts from home that included accessories for the little kitchen in his apartment, such as dish-wipers and a rubber apron.

And speaking of aprons calls to mind a story that we read once in an old book. A certain pious man opened the leaves of the Koran and was shocked and astonished to find therein concealed a peacock feather. Reproaching it for its presence there, it answered him pertly but quite truly in the words: "Beauty has a place anywhere and adorns even the pages of a sacred book." So don't be astonished if you discover a peacock, done in brilliantly stencilled colors, on the front of a green rubber apron that is designed for kitchen use. The bird is a lovely bit of adornment to a plain article.

Peacock on New Ensemble.

Again a peacock appears on the back of a new ensemble suit for boudoir use. It is made of black rayon and edged with broad bands of crimson. Pyjamas and dressing gown are adorned with stencilled roses, while a gorgeous peacock trails its lovely tail over the back.

Elephants too appear to be a favorite mode in the jewelry line. A white elephant centers the square glass medallion that hangs in the centre of a string of pearl beads, with amethyst section-dividers.

And an elephant waves its tusk in grey enamel as an ornament for a mantel piece.

It seems strange to think of people living in this country sending a Christmas cake as a present to Old Country relatives, but many do so. England and its Christmases recalls visions of Charles Dicken's descriptions of plum puddings and stuffed turkeys. But many a box of Canadian Christmas cake goes across the big pond at this time of year.

A novel and striking idea in candy boxes is the little Hope Chest of cedar wood, complete with brass hasps, rivets and padlock. This, when the chocolates are eaten, may be converted into a jewel box and it has a little mirror inside the lid. Another "Gift Chest" of chocolates is shaped just like an old-fashioned seaman's chest and has its gay covering wrapped in transparent cellophane paper bound with narrow Christmas ribbon.

A barrel of Canadian apples is another fine gift, especially if they go to places like New York and other big cities where red-cheeked apples are at a premium at Christmas time.

And speaking of gift boxes, what about one of the little Star and Garter boxes, as the famous decorations are named. But these are Stars and Garters of a different order. The Star is a tiny powder puff of pale blue ribbon and the garters are real encircling bits of blue and pink. A pink silk kerchief edged with cream lace makes the third accessory to this dainty box for the dancing maiden.

Frock of Georgette.

And for the dance, what lovelier dress could she have than the frock of georgette that looks like pink ice cream. It has an absolutely plain-fitting bodice, but the skirt is very fussy. It billows out in bouffant fashion, with innumerable rows, from waist to hem, of tiny pink ruffles edged with gold and sewed on to a net foundation. At either side is a broad panel of heavy cream lace.

With this, she could wear Cinderella slippers of silver or high-heeled black satin slippers with butterfly rhinestone buckles. And beneath it all one of the new "petti-knickers" that has a lace-trimmed brassiere top sewed to diminutive bloomers and a short silk slip attached at the waist.

For the dresser table this year brings variations of the lovely "Pearltone" and French ivory of other seasons. In gleaming yellows and dazzling whites, in misty orchids and pastel pinks, there are lovely sets inlaid, in some instances, with colored Dresden flowers. Trays with ivory edgings and real Alencon lace laid between their double glasses are a new note.

A visit to a jeweller's shop is an opportunity to see some exquisite things. Gleaming, glistening silver; trays with Arabesque foliage designs, Sheffield tea services and trays and candlesticks, silver knives with the new "Colormode" handles in tints of pale rose ivory, and white gold diamond rings with the new "step" setting of smaller diamonds and emeralds.

A large "Grandfather" clock stands against the wall. It has a case of walnut and its weights and pendulum match its metal dial. It has two tones. One is the dignified chime of Westminster Cathedral and the other is the "Whittington" chime, the eager, silvery tinkle of the bells that summoned Dick Whittington back to London Town to be its Lord Mayor.

Across the way is the modest "Grandmother" clock, also equipped with the Westminster chimes, carefully veiling its inner workings from the gaze of a curious world.

New Ideas in Book End.

Here are new ideas in book ends, in cream china simulating a butterfly lady or Psyche at the Well. Or you may have, if you like felines, a black and white china cat that sleeps quietly with half-opened eyes, in the manner of pussycats. This is an ornament, but the gentleman in Moslem costume who beats a rug is a useful person. He adorns the little persian rug that makes an ash-tray of novel design.

And the little blonde lady that adorns the top of a gilt standard is useful too. She may be used to deposit a hat upon, temporarily, of course. She has an orchid georgette hat and an orchid neck frill of ostrich feathers.

A liquer set of half a dozen tiny glasses is attached to a little barrel of frosted glass with a silver spigot.

Console sets are lovely gifts. In "Oriflamme" glass is a sample in mottled red with gilt edges, while another set shows enamelled china in colors of mauve, yellow and green.

For the lady who has housewifely tastes, nothing could be prettier than a table set of the new linens that are trimmed with Venetian lace, with long runners and place mats, or a centre-piece of Cluny lace. Again, for the woman who likes to dress a room to suit its paperings and curtains, give a box containing colored sheets and pillow-cases, that come in orchid, yellow and blue.

For the young Miss who likes rainy day accessories there are rubberette umbrellas made to match exactly the fabric of her rain slicker and rain hat. Goloshes for every woman come in many new shapes. One tweed idea has elongated tabs at the back, to protect the wearer's stockings. And still another light-weight golosh is made of satin in black and brown. A set of "Jiffs," little affairs designed to protect light shoes and hose from dusty goloshes, is another thoughtful present. Or a pair of boudoir slippers developed in brocaded velvet with heels and an inner shank to hold the shape.

Desk Sets.

The literary-minded person will appreciate the new desk sets with opaque marble bases and depressions for holding pins.

For the baby, there is a dress of pure white voile, embroidered in wiss style that reminds one of frosting on a cake. Or the little one may have a bonnet of bearcloth, a pure white, softly fuzzy material that is encircled with a band of shell-pink ribbon, caught over the ears with two tiny animal heads in soft brown fur. A set in brush and pure wool is in cream color. The little coat has a front of brushed wool, which is used also on the brim of the tiny bonnet and the cuffs of the bootees. Embroidery in pink silk flowers with blue silk leaves, is used on this darling little set.

And just to keep his mind entertained, give him one of the new plush toys, like the green Eskimo baby with the pointed hat and white gloves, or the pure white plush cat that has pink-lined ears and green glass eyes and an amused expression above its whiskered mouth.

Brasses are a feature of Christmas time. There are Tarantelle trays with designs that resemble fine embroidery. Indian brasses that show subdued colorings of red and green, beaten brasses with plain surfaces, ceramic colorings in relief and hand-carved brass bits from China.

Rubaiyat china in dull blacks and reds and gilts makes a lovely console set and there is a touch of German ferocity in the water pitcher of cream china that shows the black boar dragged down by wide-mouthed dogs that cling to its back and shoulders. Peaceful looking vines in red and green depend from overhead.

For the dresser again we find a tiny ribbon-covered powder box with a pink ivory elephant for a handle, or a little kewpie doll that has skirts of narrow blue ribbon.

For the dance frock, there are flowers of ribbon. One exquisite example is a black water-lily with silver-backed petals and trailing foliage of silver.

For the music lover, why not one of the Christmas records? Like Gounod's "O Divine Redeemer," the "Cantique de Noel" or a Christmas carol medley that includes "God Rest You, Merry Gentlemen," "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Still Night, Holy Night."

And for the chilly one, a fox scarf, developed in amber and red, or pure white.

As a decorative touch for the mantelpiece of the shut in, send a bouquet of those flaunting red chenille poinsettias or passion flowers, with their trailing vines of slender green chenille.

For the dainty lady, a perfume atomizer in wine red French glass, or a little red gold necklet with the new Egyptian touch in its pyramid fringe of gold beneath its red stone pendant.

The same modernistic touch, this time with a Cubist influence, is in the latest papeteries. Envelopes are edged with irregular, waving lines of color. A pale blue paper has edges of darker blue and old and rose pink and gold adorn the edges of a paper of light grey.

Children's Toylands.

As for toys, one enters a new world in the Children's Toylands at the different stores. Toys range in price from the miniature automobiles at $70 to the banana whistles at a nickel apiece.

There are toys that play, like the tinkling eight-noted pianos, toys that talk, like the "Mama" dolls and the fuzzy bears that grunt when one bends them forward politely at the waist, and toys that run on circular tracks, like the electric trains and the fire engines and trucks.

There are dolls like the pink "Beauties" in satin frocks, with golden curls, little "Tessie" dolls that prefer flannel frocks of bright colors, washable dolls with painted faces, made of stockinette, chocolate-colored nigger babies with fuzzy hair and petulant expressions, triplets that come with a little black baby and two white replicas, celluloid baby dolls of life size, with bright pink skin and big dolls that are jointed just like a baby and dressed like one, too.

There are big plush dogs that look very lifelike and do everything but bark. There are little monkeys that run up a stick and waggle their pink hands. There are flying ships and meccano sets, and "Tinker" toys that have a very impressionistic appearance and remind one of the figures in the big picture, "Merry Go Round," at the Toronto Exhibition.

There are tin soldiers: Highlanders and Scots Guards and Grenadiers, guns and heavy howitzer and naval guns, for the military-minded child, there are doll's hat boxes and bags and teasets for the little girl of domestic tastes and there are little dump-wagons for the industrious small boy.

Coming back again to the important persons, the adults, and taking a look at the Florentine and Italian glass that is developed in rose and amber and black, one finds a real novelty in a candy box of "Bunny Cottontail" ware. This resembles somewhat the gesso work that is such a fad just now and the circular cover is made of a rose with crystallized leaves and gilt edges.

And as for Christmas cards, their name is legion. They are lovelier than ever this year, and their colorings are exquisite. There is the modernistic touch to the yellow and rose flowers that clamber over the front of a little white house with yellow chimneys and there is an old-fashioned note to the court lady with the lute who sits at a casement window on a summer night.

And there is a note of fun in the mulatto wench who flaunts herself on the front of one card. Her hair is done up, more kinky than ever, in the little tubes that mean a lasting "marcel" and she says to the world at large: "I Hopes you Laks my Permanent."

PLOWING MATCH IS HELP TO DISTRICT

Peterborough Should Make Bid for 1929 International Match, Declares J. J. Duffus.

Peterborough should make a bid, and a healthy one, to secure the International Plowing Match, either in 1929 or the year following, in the opinion of J. J. Duffus, past-president of the Ontario Plowmen's Association and a well known judge of the Agricultural art. In conversation with The Examiner this morning, he declared that such a match, coming to this district would have far reaching effects upon agriculture generally and would almost certainly be a financial success, judging from the fact that at London this year, during the match, a profit of $800.00 or more had been realized from the car-parking alone. He felt that such a competition, witnessed by the younger generation of farmers, would instill in their minds, a realization of the benefits to be derived from more careful plowing and farming generally. "At the present time, Kingston is making an effort to secure the International Plowing match for 1929," he stated.

Mr. Duffus recently returned from attending a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, held in the Convention Hall of the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, final matters pertaining to the International Match at London last October, being attended to. While in Toronto, he also attended a meeting of the Ontario Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce and reports that one item of business was the preparing for presentation to the Federal and Provincial cabinets of resolutions, among them several proposed by the Peterborough Chamber representatives at the North Bay Convention earlier in the season.

Trade Commissioner Coming to the City

With a view to meeting all manufacturers of export goods, G. R. Stevens, for the past four years Canadian Trade Commissioner at Capetown, South Africa, is coming to this city on Friday, December 7 and will address a general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce at a dinner in the Empress hotel, at 6.30 p.m.

Mr. Stevens is now making an official tour of Canada and while he is immediately concerned with the development of trade with South Africa, he also wishes to meet Canadian exporters who are interested in the extension of their business to Peru, Bolivia and Equador as he has been selected to take charge of the new office, to be opened at Lima, Peru, in the early part of the new year.

Mr. Stevens is a graduate of the University of Alberta and entered the Commercial Intelligence Service in March, 1920. His first appointment was as Trade Commissioner at Kingston, Jamaica, where he remained for three years until assigned to Cape Town.

He served throughout the war in the Princess Pats, enlisting as a private, winning the Military Medal, and was demobilized as captain.

Corn Values Given Setback At Chicago

CHICAGO, December 5. Canadian Press. — Cold weather and clear skies gave an early setback to corn prices to-day. Such conditions were deemed likely to facilitate movement of the corn crop and sellers of future deliveries became more numerous. Opening unchanged to 7-8 lower, corn later showed declines all around. Oats, however, displayed strength; wheat was easy, starting 1-4 off to 1-8 up and afterwards undergoing a general sag.

Chicago: Wheat, December, 116 3-8; March 120 3-8; corn, December 85 5-8; March 87 5-8; oats December 48 3-4; March 49.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Patterson Copper, subsidiary of Barry-Hollinger, which is now commanding as great a price on the unlisted market as the parent company is on the Standard Exchange is now reported to have commenced operations with a recently installed steam plant. The shaft is down to 90 feet and will be continued to the 500-foot level before lateral work is attempted.

Amity Copper, working in the same camp, now has it's shaft down to 380 feet. The object is 1,000, feet. A station was cut recently at the 350-foot level. Shaft sinking is expected to proceed at the rate of about 120 feet per month. A new and larger hoist, capable of working to 1,000 feet, is being installed. When completed it should have a capacity of approximately 200 tons per day.

Reports from Rouyn are to the effect that ore was encountered at the Amulet between 153 and 212 feet in the vicinity of the "C" ore body. The new hoist will be working next week and should facilitate operations.

Western advices state that a party of thirty men in charge of J. C. Milligan have left the Pas for a point near Mile 224 on the Hudson Bay Railway to get in hand the first stages of development of the new Adair-Matson find at Oxford Lake. They were despatched by Ventures, Limited, holding company for Falconbridge Nickel and various other properties. The claims in question are on the mainland at Oxford Lake, opposite Hyre's Island, which is about 2¼ miles distant. Values reported from sampling run very high, the figures given being 6% copper, seven ounces of silver and $5 in gold across a width of 20 feet. The find is on the shore of the Lake and it is believed that another 20 feet of width can be established when low water permits the work to be done. The party will take in two diamond drills and if subsurface results stand up to the promise shown on surface the operation will increase in importance. Dr. T. L. Gledhill will direct the drilling and it is hoped to start early in the new year.

Good progress is being made in putting down a three-compartment shaft to a depth of 250 feet at he Dunkin Gold Mines, Limited, in the Patricia district. In cutting a station at the 125-foot horizon, a narrow vein of schisted material was cut, which is reported to have carried low values. As the shaft lies between two lakes, it is not the intention to do any crosscutting to the north and south veins, which comprize the surface showing, until greater depth is attained. The principal vein to the south is in close proximity to a lake which appears to have considerable depth. Anxious to avoid possible water trouble, no lateral work will be started until the object of 250 feet is reached. The plant is adequate to carry work to a depth of 500 feet, and the treasury is said to be supplied with ample funds to carry out the present program. The main surface showing is from 2 to 12 feet in width and has been stripped and traced for a length of some 1,700 feet.

The meeting of Sudbury Basin shareholders to vote on the offer to purchase shares of Falconbridge Nickel will be held in Toronto to-day.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

SISCOE

According to a report from Montreal, sampling from the dump and cars at Siscoe, which is being made in preparation for early starting of the mills, has shown a very good grade of ore. An official is reported as having said that on the 500 foot level they have eight feet of $20 ore. This has only been opened up for a short distance, but looks very good.

MANITOBA BASIN

Mr. A. J. Bone, engineer in charge of Manitoba Basin's Herb Lake property, is reported to have wired the local office results from their No. 1 drill hole Monday. According to the message, the core between 132 and 144 feet gave a total gross value of $19.78, made up of 67c in precious metals, $12.44 copper and $6.67 zinc.

SAN ANTONIO

A report in circulation Monday was to the effect that San Antonio have decided to increase their capitalization from 2,000,000 to 4,000 shares. It was also rumored that 500,000 shares would be offered to present shareholders in the form of rights at 20c a share.

ACONDA

An Ottawa despatch states diamond drilling will be started by Aconda in the immediate future on their new Kamiskotia holdings in Whitesides Township. In addition to this, engineers have gone in to spot holes on their holdings in Duparquet township on ground between Consolidated Smelters and Duparquet Mines.

WEST DOME GOLD

According to a Timmins report, West Dome continued to develop splendid grade ore at the 1,200 foot level. Work to date has shown a length of some 200 feet, most all of which is drift width. In the meantime, development throughout other sections of the mine are placing ore in sight at a fair rate. Earlier production showed a recovery of approximately $5 a ton, while the ore now being developed is averaging $9.00.

McINTYRE

McIntyre continues to lay the foundation for large scale operations in the future. The long drive east and west at the lower level is steadily progressing. It will give access to the main ore zone over a length of approximately a mile and a half. Fruits of present development should be garnered before this time next year.

WAITE MONTGOMERY

While few reports are heard of this Rouyn property, good production is being steadily maintained, and it is expected from the reasonably high grade ore being treated at Noranda that a profit of 25 cents a share will be established on the 2,000,000 shares this year.

ABANA

We are informed from Dupuy that the new Diesel plant at Abana is operating smoothly. Development work is proceeding underground and the gauge and counterbalance on hoist have just been installed. Mill excavation work is proceeding apace and it is now believed concrete will be poured about January 1st. Filter flotation machine and supplies for mill are on the ground. All this autumn the property has been handicapped by lack of power plant and by water trouble, but it is now in a position to proceed with real development and production program.

VOTE FOR DIVIDEND DESPITE PROTESTS

Farmers' Co-operative Shareholders Warned Reported Profits Are Doubtful.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—Representations to the effect that the profit reported by the United Farmers' Co-operative Company was largely illusory, failed to weigh yesterday with the shareholders who attended the annual meeting in Hygeia Hall. By an overwhelming vote they rejected the suggestion that the co-operative's treasury should be conserved, and endorsed the recommendation of the directors for a dividend on their behalf. The amount at issue was $70,000.

The discussion on the dividend was precipitated by the report which General Manager H. B. Clemes had presented. The claim to a net profit of $50,000 was challenged by J. S. Whitmore, who argued that the stock of sweet clover seed was being carried on the inventory at a figure at least $20,000 too high.

Mr. Clemes conceded that suth was probably the case. It would prove so, he said, on the supposition that the inventory must be realized.

"Then take $20,000 from the $50,000 and you have only $30,000 left. Where are we at if the other figures are all the same?" Mr. Whitmore commented, adding that in his opinion the dividend should not be paid. He would be happy to pay it if it had been earned, he said, but in his opinion, it had not been earned. He believed that the shareholders would be acting in the best interests of the organization if they rejected the recommendation of the shareholders and refused the payment.

Mr. Clemes agreed that it would cost $70,000 to pay the dividend recommended for this year and accruing from last year.

Mr. Whitmore argued that the dividend was not the important feature of U.F.O. operations. In the item of binder twine alone, he believed, the company had saved hundreds of thousands of dollars to the farmers. The patrons of the company could well afford to sacrifice both share and commodity dividends, he contended, in the light of the broad benefits that had resulted from its operations.

SANTA'S CHIMNEY IS FOUND IN ADS.

The Examiner Offers $10 Prize For Completion of Best Design.

The Examiner presents a rather unique feature in to-day's Examiner in our two page spread showing Santa's chimney. The idea is to find the eighty bricks with which to build the chimney, which consists of items scattered through the advertisements in this issue. In connection with each of 80 advertised articles, the words "for Santa's Chimney" will be found and these constitute the bricks with which to build the chimney.

Read the instructions in the centre of the chimney and make a study of the advertisements for the 80 bricks. The Examiner is giving $20.00 in cash prizes to those who build the chimney correctly. In case of a tie, consideration will be given to neatness, or the most attractively gotten up chimney. Colors can be used to produce a better effect if desired.

All solutions must be sent to the Santa's Chimney Editor not later than Saturday night, December 8th. Prize winners will be announced, if possible, in Wednesday's Examiner, December 12th.

Here is a way to get some easy Christmas spending money for sharp-eyed readers of to-day's advertisements.

CITY CHURCHES

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Reading from Luke 24, verse 36, Ensign Green reminded all that the incident happened shortly after the Resurrection. Some had already seen the risen Christ in body, and had spread the news, and some doubted, especially Thomas, and Jesus knowing this invited him to examine His hands and His feet. For a while let us examine the hands of Jesus; the Word of God makes numerous references. In Psalm 95, v. 5: "His hand formed the dry land." In the New Testament, Mark chap. 6, v. 5, that "He laid His hands upon a few such folk and healed them," and verse 40 of our lesson this evening. "He showed them His hands," and He urged that they all examine them. If we for a while look at the works of man, some having been very wonderful—those who have been privileged to visit the various art galleries in this country, or those in the old land, and seen the results of the genius of man's hands in the wonderful pictures exhibited—and yet never an artist has been able to perfectly portray the sky or blend the colors of the rainbow, the handiwork of God's hands. Again, in our own fair Dominion man's hands have given us the Transcontinental Railway. What an improvement on the days of the old stage coach, and follow the mode of transportation until to-day we can travel almost anywhere by rail and in the maximum of comfort—and yet a defective rail or some poor workmanship, a disaster; the work of man's hand still lacks perfection. The liner of to-day with its wireless, record crossings of the Atlantic, turbine engines, oil fuel, all the handiwork of man. Yet the sea has been the grave of many thousands.

"I am reminded here," continued Ensign Green, speaking with considerable emotion, "of an article published and circulated in a pamphlet this week. Doubtless many of you have read or heard of it. I was considerably angered at the reference to the Empress of Ireland and as I was present on the occasion on the scene, from this platform this evening say that if the divine wrath of God makes heroes and heroines of men and women, as I witnessed that evening, that wrath can come on me as often as possible. Speaking of my own father and mother and sister, we stood on that vessel with our comrades facing death, and my father said without a tremor in his voice, 'My boy, we are in God's hands,' and whilst they are enjoying their reward in heaven I am still in God's hands. Other glaring misrepresentations in that article might be answered, but this service has a far greater purpose, and one will leave the matter with a reference to the financial questions mentioned. All Salvation Army finances in this Dominion, and in every country, are audited by Army auditors and by competent firms of chartered accountants. Reference to the wealth of the founder in this article, shows the writer is apparently ignorant of the fact that William Booth was supported by a number of influential business men in England during his lifetime, and the will and its contents prove that William Booth was not a rich man. Possession of such a fund as suggested in the pamphlet seems to me only proof of the confidence of the people in the Salvation Army, if such a fund was existent; but the statement is erroneous. You will understand why I resent the contents of that article, but I am confident that the Army will not be harmed in the least by the statements so ruthlessly made."

Returning to our subject, man's handiwork as evidenced in some of the wonderful buildings, both ancient and modern, aided in their grandeur by the production of materials made by man's hands. But what of the handiwork of God. Genesis I says God spoke and parts of creation were effective. The work of man crumbles and is destroyed, but the handiwork of God remains eternally.

Sorrow and love flow mingling down."

Thus runs lines of one of the hymns we often sing. What do the hands of Jesus reveal to us? They were the hands of a workman; He was a carpenter. The Bible refers to Him as the Son of Mary, a carpenter. Such is a benediction on all manual labor. Some suggest that work is the result of the fall of Adam, but Genesis II tells us that Adam was to "dress and keep the garden." Therework existed before the fall. Trying to dodge work is one of the results of the fall.

His hands were wounded to bring a world of sin to salvation. Will you visualize His hands here this evening and accept the work of those wonderful hands."

A resolution from the Orillia Board of Trade suggests that the Toronto Exhibition should open on September 1st instead of in August. The later date would tend to prolong the tourist season and thereby would be generally helpful to all the interests catering to the tourist trade. The Orillia Board solicited the county council's suppor, but no action was taken.

An account for $385.50 from the Muskoka hospital for the care of an indigent patient who had lived in Galway township occasioned considerable discussion by the Finance Committee which met this morning with Reeve Frank Breckenbridge of Belmont in the chair.

The patient is a young married mother of four children. Her husband had worked a rented farm in the township. Some time after the woman had gone to the hospital for consumptives, the husband sold his chattels receiving $500 in the sale. Since then the family has moved out of the township.

According to the statute the county is primarily liable for such hospital service and may recover half the cost from the township or village, as the case may be. However, the council's committee assumed payment of the entire account on motion of Reeve Parker of Harvey seconded by Deputy-reeve Waterman of North Monaghan.

"I certainly appreciate this very much," said Reeve Clark of Galway.

Warden Smithson remarked that the Hospital Act should permit a municipality to have an independent examination made of patients admitted as indigents.

Reeve Rye said that a township may appoint as indigent officer the Medical Officer of Health to whom notices from the hospitals are referred.

The council granted $100 to (Burleigh township in somewhat similar case of public charity, on a motion by Reeve Windsor, seconded by Reeve Caldwell of Chandos.

TORONTO WINS FROM CANUCKS

Crippled Leafs Score Their First Victotry on Foreign Ice.

BY 3 TO 1 COUNT.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5 (Canadian Press).—Toronto's crippled Maple Leafs scored their first victory on foreign ice this season when they defeated Canadiens 3 to 1 last night at the Forum before a crowd of over 10,000 spectators. The win incidentally sent Toronto into first place in the standing of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League.

The Leafs, without the services of Doc. Carson, regular centre player, and with big Art Duncan, defence man, in none too good condition, were consistently outplayed on the attack by Montreal's "flying Frenchmen," but their light back-checking game, backed by Chabot's brilliant goaltending earned them the evening's laurels.

George Hainsworth, Canuck goalie, was erratic, two of the Leafs' goals being of the soft variety. Bailey scored two for the visitors, and Duncan one. Leduc obtained Canadiens' lone counter.

Bailey opened the scoring late in the second period, when his "hopper" from the right side of the net bounced over Hainsworth's stick into the net. Soon after the start of the third session, Art Duncan blazed one from the blue line which caught the local goaler flat-footed. The Canucks then got back into the fight on Leduc's goal on a pass-out from Joliat. Bailey clinched the contest for his team in the dying moments of the game, when he took Cox's pass to whip the puck past Hainsworth from fifteen feet out.

The teams:

Toronto—Goal, Chabot; defence, Duncan and Day; centre, Blair; wings Cox and Bailey; subs., Smith, Horne, Lowrey and Arbour.

Canadiens—Goal, Hainsworth; defence, Mantha and Burke; centre, Morenz; wings, Joliat and Gagne; subs., Leduc, G. Carson, Lepine, Gaudreault, Patterson and LeSueur.

BOSTON BRUINS DEFEAT RANGERS

Dennenay and Oliver Are Successful Marksmen in Boston Game.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 5.—The Boston Bruins spoiled Myles Lane's professional hockey debut before his home folks here last night by defeating his team mates of the New York Rangers 2 to 0 in a game that was dull and slow most of the time. Neither team showed any aggressiveness until midway through the second period when Cy Dennenay went into the Bruins' front line and joined Shore in a drive. Roach, the Rangers' goalie, was lured out of his cage by their thrust and while he was away from his post Dennenay scored. Harry Oliver, who played in good form all night, turned in another goal for Boston in the final period with a shot from the Rangers' blue line.

Before the game started a delegation from Melrose, Lane's home town, presented him with a travelling bag and later when the former Dartmouth star was penalized three times for holding in the second period, his admirers showered the ice with debris to show their displeasure. The teams:

Boston—Goal, Thompson; defence, Shore and Hitchman; centre, Frederickson; wings, Oliver and Galbraith; subs, Pettinger, Green, Gainor, Welland, Klein, Dennenay.

Rangers — Goal, Roach; defence, Bourgeault and Lane; centre, Boucher; wings, W. Cook and B. Cook; subs, Abel, Boyd, Murdock, Thompson and Keeling.

Officials — Geo. Mallinson and Cooper Smeaton, Montreal.

The Summary:

First Period.

No scoring.

Second Period.

1—Boston, Dennenay (Shore) 12.00.

Third Period.

2—Boston, Oliver, 15.35.

Penalties —First period (Shore); second period (Lane 3, Murdock, Oliver, Green); third period (Bunny Cook 2, Gainor, Galbraith).

TUNNEY IS NOT ONLY FIGHTER WHO KNOWS HIS 'SHAKESPEARE'

They say it's quite the latest rage
For pugilists of this weird age
To pull their jabs, forget their hooks,
And buy themselves a flock of books.

At this writing, Gene Tunney is still the only box-fighter who could get away with a Shakespeare lecture at Yale University, but there are one or two others, at least, who can and do read something more than the comic strips and their own press notices. There is, for instance, Sam—hundreds of people know him by another name, but Samuel G. McClurkin is right—who as a youngster fought his way from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast and back again to be lightweight champion of the Atlantic fleet, and who, twenty years later, uses his husky arms only to hoist stack of books from shelf to shelf of his bookshop.

"Kid Irish" was the name he prefered when, at the age of 17, he left the shelter of his home to seek the laurels of pugdom, and by his awn admission he was about as tough as they made 'em those days. A meal-ticket pug, which is all he was, had to be tough to make a go of it.

He fought bloody bouts to a finish with scrappers of all weights and sizes, in barn lofts and small-town opera houses. He emerged with black eyes and swollen face from woodland bouts with bare fists, where the purse consisted of a hat collection taken up among the spectators. He boxed at fairs, carnivals, and Labor Day celebrations. And when he could get no matches, he worked at whatever came to his hand.

SPORT LEADERS OF CANADA GATHER FOR A.A.U. MEETING

Delegates Will Air Olympic Differences at Port Arthur Session.

BEGINS ON THURSDAY.

Alberta Will Propose Motion For Re-organization of Olympic Committee.

PORT ARTHUR, Dec. 5.—Arrangements are complete for the reception of delegates to the forty-first annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada here Thursday, Friday and Saturday, a gathering which is expected to create athletic history in the Dominion. J. Leslie, of Edmonton, secretary-treasurer of the union, is expected to arrive in the city to-day, and the program will be drawn up following a conference between him and Thunder Bay officials. So far the first session has been set for 11 o'clock Thursday morning, when delegates will be granted the freedom of the Lakehead by Port Arthur and Fort William mayors.

Sport officials, definitely known to be coming to the three-day session included Dr. A. S. Lamb, president A.A.U. of C.; J. Leslie, secretary A.A.U. of C.; S. P. Quilty, and P. Duncanson, Ottawa Valley branch; H. R. Davidson, president British Columbia branch; His Honor Judge Jackson, Lethbridge, and C. E. Cheeseman, Alberta branch; Major D. Stuart Forbes, and E. H. Bourdon, Quebec branch; A. W. Steel, C. Higginbottom, Ontario branch; Misses Alexandrine Gibb, Marie Parkes, and Marion Belding, Women's Athletic Federation of Canada. In addition, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and the Maritimes are expected to send delegates, but these have not yet applied for hotel reservations.

Olympic Leaders There

A number of members of the Olympic Committee, including W. A. Hewitt, Toronto; Bobby Robinson, Bobby Kerr, and Captain Cornelius, Hamilton; P. J. Mulqueen, Toronto, and others are to be in attendance, and will report on incidents in connection with the 1928 Olympic Games.

Reports on the games will be given and a number of "charges" will be discussed and settled. Representatives of the Women's Federation will ask why Dr. A. S. Lamb appointed Miss Belding, of St. John, to the International body without consulting the Canadian branch.

Seek Reorganization

Alberta will have a motion on the floor of the house for a re-organization of the Olympic committee. This motion will have strong support, as the Western branches and Quebec strongly favor a more representative body of men to deal with Olympic affairs.

Soccer Question Important

Quebec's motion that soccer be added to the list of the sports in which amateurs and professionals may mingle is also expected to have support. Such a move would greatly facilitate amicable arrangements between the Dominion Football Association and the A.A.U. of C.

The Quebec delegation, however, is believed to be split on the question. Of nine voting delegates from Quebec who are going to the annual session, seven will vote against the allowing of amateurs to mix with professionals, it is believed, while two will vote for the measure, which is expected to form a most important topic of discussion.

Not Likely to Pass

British Columbia will suggest that a professional in one sport be allowed to perform as an amateur in others. This will likely be fully discussed, but is not expected to pass when put before the meeting.

ALLAN CUP HOLDERS HAVE STRONG TEAM

Fighting Squad Will Protect Canadian Amateur Hockey Trophy.

WINNIPEG, Man., December 5. — (Canadian Press.) — Shining on a polished pedestal at the University of Manitoba, the Allan Cup, emblem of amateur hockey supremacy in Canada, will be guarded this winter by a fighting squad whose personnel varies but little from that of the doughty Winnipeg band that brought it to the west.

And Blair, now ranging the centre ice area for Toronto Maple Leafs in brilliant style, will be absent from his wonted post, and Leo Collins, whose experience aided Varsity at left wing, has hung up his skates satisfied with having played on a Canadian championship team.

But Coach Jack Hughes, himself a veteran of many an Allan Cup melee, has every other member of the titled sextet on hand, plus a store of talent which he considers will render the trophy defenders fully as powerful as the team which swept out of Montreal last spring with the new won honors.

Though he starred half a decade ago as a defenceman when University of Saskatchewan struggled through to the Allan Cup finals, Ward Turvey is the tricky performer who is to fill the roomy shoes of "Racehorse" Blair. Built close to the ice, Turvey nevertheless has plenty of speed; his experience provides the added value that makes him a capable successor to the standout star of the 1928 champions.

Both Blake Watson, master of stick-handling along the left boards, and Gordon Mackenzie, ever-toiling right forward, will be back at their regular posts on the front line. These two medical students, who teamed up so well with Blair, promise to work just as effectively with Turvey.

The defense, which gained five shut outs in its seven play off contests last season, and was really the outstanding factor in the student teams' success, is intact with Art Puttee still between the posts and mountainous Ward McVey and husky "Weary" Williamson acting as outer guards of his citadel.

Toiling together in its second season this goal-denying trio is expected to be even more effective, according to the hopes of Coach Hughes. In addition the defense will have the aid of Stuart Musgrove, who towers over the six foot mark, and weighs close to 190 pounds.

Jack Pidcock, prominent among last year's relief men, will sub for Turvey at centre, and Frank Macdonald, a new member of the Varsity senior roster, is slated for work as extra man at right wing. Jack St. John, rated as the fatsest skater in the west, will relieve on the right side.

Grouped with Port Arthur, Fort William and Brandon in a fast four-team circuit, Manitoba Varsity will not open their schedule until January 7th, owing to the Christmas recess, but the head of the Lakes teams will get going in mid-December.

New York Rangers Want Rockburn Of Olympics

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Harvey Rockburn, versatile left defence star of the Detroit Olympics, leader of the Canadian Professional Hockey League, has attracted the eye of Col. Hammond owned of the New York Rangers and to such an extent that he to-day offered the Detroit Club $17,500 for Rockburn.

The Rangers are hard pressed for defence material at present with their two regular rear-guard performers, Ching Johnson and Taffy Abel, on the injured list. Leo Bourgeault and Myles Lane will have to shoulder the defence burden unless reinforcements are secured. Bourgeault is regarded as a first-class performer, having had several years' experience, but Lane is just breaking into pro. hockey fresh from his amateur days at Dartmouth College and needs frequent relief.

MINORS REFUSE UNIVERSAL DRAFT

President Toole of International League Quite Emphatic On Subject.

TORONTO, December 5. — "There will be no acceptance of the 'universal draft' at the National Baseball Association meeting." So spake Pres. J. Conway Toole of the International League yesterday. That precluded any discussion as to what would happen if the smaller unions decided to fasten this draft on Class A. In fact, Mr. Toole put it just that way. And why discuss what is not going to happen?

Mr. Toole reasons this way: Few minor league ball clubs of any classification can hope to make money through their gates. Any profits must come through the sale of players. He instanced one club this year in the International which did not begin to pay on its attendance, but it closed the year $75,000 to the good on the sale of players. If the majors could secure players in bulk quantity as they liked at $5,000 each, the minors of the highest classification could not live.

He did predict that a larger percentage than 12½ to visiting teams would come in due time to help the weaker clubs.

The reelected president made one statement that will be good news—the International League is on a good, sound financial basis for the first time in many years.

Sale of Baltimore.

Mr. Knapp, representing the Dunn interests in the Baltimore Ball Club, is here. He has three or four prospective buyers of the franchise, and they are discussing terms, ways and means, and other details. He is not sacrificing the club, and if a satisfactory deal cannot be made, the club will be carried on by Mrs. Dunn, who at the present time has a strong board of advisers and assistants.

Old-Timers Here.

Charlie White, looking young and chipper, is as usual in the corridors. Charlie was president of the original International League in 1895, and also among those present is Larry Sutton, who was given his first umpiring job by Mr. White. Larry was arbitrator across the Don in the days of Ned Crane, et al., and on his retirement was replaced by the greatest of all umpires, Bob Emslie, of St. Thomas, now dean of the National League umpiring staff.

President Barnard of the American League is on the ground with a hundred and fifty-odd others.

Eddie Onslow, Benny Myers, Charlie Carr, and Frank Gilhooley are among the visiting brethren, all former Toronto players of more or less ancient vintage.

HEADS REDBIRDS.

Warren C. Giles, president of the Rochester Baseball Club, and probably the youngest baseball executive. Mr. Giles had much to do with the transfer of the Syracuse franchise to Rochester and also with the winning of the International League pennant by the Red Wings last season. He will be a prominent figure at the big baseball conclave at Toronto this week when it is likely that he will make an amendment as to Billy Southworth's successor in the management of the Flower City club.

PREPARATIONS ARE MADE FOR DERBY

Non-Stop Dog Race To Be Held For Rice-Goyne Memorial Trophy.

THE PAS, Man., December 5. — (Canadian Press.) — Elaborate preparations are being made for the world's greatest 200 mile non-stop dog derby race for the Grant Rice, Walter Goyne memorial trophy, which has been re-established and will be run, starting Monday, March 4, from The Pas, to Flin Flon Mine and return, irregardless of weather conditions.

A purse of over 2000 has been set for distribution among the first four winners, besides the handsome cup which already bears the inscriptions of the world famous dog "mushers," Shorty Russick and Emil St. Goddard, who each have one win to their credit.

It requires three wins to own the trophy. This will be the eleventh annual dog derby, and the tremendous enthusiasm exhibited by both the "mushers" and booster citizens over the decision to revert back to the great 200-mile classic, points to the event being heralded as one of the greatest winter sporting features on the continent.

LEADERS WIN EIGHTH GAME

Goodfellow Is Prominent in Detroit's 3-1 Win Over Hamilton.

MILLIONAIRES UP ONE.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 5.—Frank Foyston's Detroit Olympics made it eight wins in nine starts in the Canadian professional hockey league this Winter by defeating Bernie Morris' Hamilton Tigers in a listless exhibition here last night, 3 to 1.

Olympics got away to a two-goal lead in the first period, carried the attack into Hamilton territory most of the route and won as they pleased. Hamilton made their best bid against the league leaders in the second period, Markle cutting down the Detroit lead late in the chapter on a pass from "Buster" Huffman. Abbie Goodfellow, former Ottawa amateur, who has been starring for the Olympics in recent contests, increased the Detroit margin to two clear goals again when he potted a long shot from fifty feet out that never left the ice, but which Charlie Reid failed to block. It looked as if Reid's vision was obstructed by two defence men.

Goodfellow had his hand in all three Detroit goals, scoring twice and assisting in the third. He gave Bellefeuille the pass that enable the Detroit right winger to beat Reid early in the first period with the opening goal of the night. The Hamilton goalie didn't have a chance to save it. It was late in the same period that Goodfellow tallied on Reid from close range with Bellefeuille handing out the pass this time.

Saved by the Bell

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—"Saved by the bell," is a term that can be stolen from the parlance of the ring to explain the Canpro contest at the Arena Gardens last night, when the Millionaires defeated Buffalo by a 2 to 1 score, for the timer's gong was just echoing through the rink when the invaders evened the count at 2 all, but the equalizer was not allowed, and the Bisons took another bump while the Doughboys grabbed the winning points and a boost in the standings. The game provided a thrilling finish after a close battle, but again the benches were barren, although there was a slight increase in attendance, with the visiting baseball delegates swelling the crowd.

Eight years ago, on March 1, 1921, the race was last run over this long and hazardous trail, through the rugged hills and over the ice and snow-covered lakes of Northern Manitoba, and was won by Will Winterton, driving nine sturdy huskies owned by C. B. Morgan.

The shorter, lap races were instituted and have been held from year to year since 1921, but greater interest is manifest in the daring 200 mile chase, from which heroes emerged in the past.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Although it was only an exhibition game, the match between the famous Winnipeg team and the Peterborough Seniors was by far the most outstanding event of the local hockey season back in 1898. The Westerners who had come east to compete for the historic Stanley Cup, were persuaded to visit Peterborough and their appearance on the small ice surface of the old Charlotte rink was a notable event in the sport history of Peterborough.

It is recorded that the visitors arrived in town during the afternoon of January 18, 1898, to find the C.P.R. station platform crowded with people anxious to get a glimpse of the celebrated Winnipeg stars. The western hockeyists were met by Mayor A. L. Davis and the officers of the Peterborough hockey club and escorted to the home of G. W. Hatton, patron of the local club and there entertained.

The Examiner in reporting the game remarked the next day: "It is difficult to recall an event of the kind in which the citizens as a whole took as much interest," and that statement was justified by the fact that over 1,200 people jammed the small rink which was crowded at 7.15 o'clock, although the game did not get under way until nearly two hours later.

Before telling something of this memorable battle it would perhaps be as well to point out for the new generation of players the difference between the hockey of 30 years ago and that of to-day. In first place the games were played in two periods of thirty minutes each with no substitutes so that everbody three decades ago was a "sixty-minute man," and thought nothing of it. There were seven players instead of six, the extra forward being known as a rover, although in this particular game the Winnipeg team used their rover as a third defence man and employed over three forwards. The defence pair back in 1898 were called point and cover point and instead of playing side by side they took up positions one some fifteen feet in front of the other. Little rushing was done by the defence men who relieved the situation by lifting the puck high in the air to the other end of the rink and the rival forwards chased up and down under these lifts much as football wingmen do under punts. A. A. Hollingshead, who played cover point for Peterborough in the game and in many a hard fought battle, was one of the most skilful lifters of his time and his long lifts over the rafters of the old rink on Charlotte street were always a feature.

These then were the conditions under which the Winnipeg Stanley Cup team and the '98 Petes played on the historic occasion and although the Peterborough club was defeated they held the Westerners to an 8-6 score and the Winnipegers admitted afterward that the result was always in doubt. The Stanley Cup hunters, as Western teams have usually been, were lightning fast skaters, but their play was largely individual while the Petes showed good team work.

As a commentary upon the style of play the following from The Examiner's report will be of interest.

"The whole merit of the Winnipeg defence lay in the faculty with which they blocked and intercepted shots made on goal. Not once during the evening did one of them attempt to play near their forwards but played strictly on the defence close to their flags. Their forwards did not go back with the puck when it was carried into their territory. At least all of them would not and consequently when their goal was relieved they were already far up the ice and frequently were on the Peterborough goal before the puck got there."

That extract shows how much the game has changed in recent years.

As to this particular match it seem to have been a real battle. The Winnipegers scored the first goal when somebody in the crowd blew a whistle and the Peterborough players thought an offside had occurred. It was 4 to 3 for the visitors at half time despite good goal keeping by Ernie Wasson, who in after years was destined to play a big part in Peterborough hockey victories. Walter Phelan scored three of the six Peterboro goals and Bert Belleghem, now in Chicago, got two.

If a personal reference may be forgiven this was the first hockey game witnessed by the writer who, as a small boy, got glimpses of the play from the gallery and developed a love for hockey that has outlived a score of years reporting of games good, bad and indifferent.

In the first article of this series Lionel King was referred to in error as the late Dr. King. It is with genuine pleasure that the fact is recorded that this sterling athlete who starred for Peterborough as a ball player, a lacrosse star, a crack halfback in football and a speedy hockey foward is still very much alive.

The line-up:

Winnipeg—Goal, Baker; point, Swinford, cover points, Brien, MacFarlane; forwards, LeVecque, Thompson, Neeve.

Peterborough—Goal, E. Wasson; point, W. J. Montgomery; cover point, A. A. Hollingshead; forwards, King, Phelan, Belleghem, Davidson.

Referee—F. W. Ashe, Norwood.

To-morrow—The Waterloo-Peterborough game of 1899.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

Clara Bow, in "The Fleet's In," Clara's Latest and Greatest, Will Be Seen at the Capitol Thursday, Friday and Saturday of This Week.

"The Fleet's In!" starring Clara Bow, will open at the Capitol to-morrow.

As may be guessed from the title, the picture, is a "sea-going" one however, the action of the story for the most part is laid in a seacoast town which is visited by the United States battle fleet just returned from a training cruise.

According to advance reports where the picture has had its showing, Miss Bow has one of the best parts of her career She is cast as a dance hall hostess whose duty it is to encourage the sailors on shore leave to spend as much of their month's pay for dance tickets as possible. It is during a visit of the fleet to the port that she becomes the centre of a rivalry between two "gobs" from the U. S. S. California. These parts are essayed by James Hall, popular Paramount leading man, and Jack Oakie, a newcomer to the screen, but none the less adequate for the role.

All the fire and dash of a Clara Bow performance is featured in this characterization by the popular star. By virtue of the story she is given ample opportunity to display her histrionic talents to good advantage.

AT THE REGENT.

Last Showing to-night of Gene Stratton Porter's "Freckles" and to Hear Dave Richmond Sing the Latest Popular Songs—Thursday Fred Thomson in "Kit Carson."

Forty years of thrills condensed into less than two hours of entertainment!

It sounds impossible, but Fred Thomson has done it in his new Paramount picture, "Kit Carson," which opens to-morrow at the Regent Theatre. Carson engaged in so many Indian fights, did so many seemingly impossible feats, traveled so far in hostile territory, that many modern historians have described him as incredible. The wildest imaginings of a scenario writer could not improve upon the story of the facts. Mr. Thomson selected them and arranged them into a swiftly moving drama of the west that will stand out for some time as one of the big achievements of his career as a star.

Some of the scenes of the picture were made on the actual locale of some of Carson's thrilling exploits. All the Indians in the film were familiar with his name and the older ones remembered him as an Indian agent in his later years.

One of the charming romances of the famous scout's career—his courtship and marriage to a beautiful Spanish girl— is threaded into the story. The girl's role is portrayed by Nora Lane, who created something of a sensation in "Jesse James" and "The Pioneer Scout." William Courtright, veteran of the stage and screen, furnishes many of the laughs in camp and on the trail which relieve the tenser moments of the story.

It is a sweeping drama on a spectacular background of mountain country. It is a real western, but a western with a poignant human story about a man, who was as much of a national hero in his time as Lindbergh is in ours.

ENGLAND WINS FIRST MATCH IN AUSTRALIAN CRICKET TOUR

Antipodeans' Second Inning Was Second Lowest Score in History.

TWO BATSMEN ILL.

Kellewey Suffers From Ptomaine Poisoning—Gregory Strained Knee.

BRISBANE, Australia, Dec. 5. — (Canadian Press).—England won the first cricket test match of the present tour in Australia to-day by 675 runs. The innings score were 521 and 342.

Australia 122 and 66.

The Antipodeans second innings was the second lowest score in test match cricket in Australia. They were compelled to bat to-day without the services of Kelleway, one of their steadiest players and Gregory, who were unable to continue in the match after Monday. Kellewey is suffering from an attack of ptomaine poisoning and Gregory from a strained knee. The eight batsmen were easy preys for the English bowlers today. White, who had been held in reserve by the English captain, was in deadly mood, his average showing he captured four wickets for only seven runs. He was almost unplayable on the wicket, which was "devilish."

Woodfull was the hero of the Australian side. He went in first and carried out his bat for thirty.

Australia, first innings, 122.

NO OFFER MADE BY GARDEN FOR FINNISH RUNNER

Despatch About $10,000 Contract Exaggerated According To Rickard's Representative.

RITOLA NOT TRAINING.

NEW YORK, December 5. — It's getting to be like that Jack Dempsey story, this yarn about Paavo Nurmi, the Flying Finnish fish eater. One day he is, the next day he isn't. Nurmi has not turned professional, all stories printed in the Helsingfors Idrottsbladet to the contrary notwithstanding.

Take it on the authority of Harold J. Dibblee, of the Madison Square Garden booking department, that Tex Rickard has not made and does not intend to make any offer to Nurmi.

Also take it on the authority of Hugo Quist, Nurmi's "trainer" when Nurmi was touring the sticks as an amateur (don't believe the dictionary) in 1925.

Yes, It's Not So!

There is not an iota of truth in the report coming out of Finland last last Saturday, according to Dibblee. The Idrottsbladet was responsible for the story that Nurmi had been induced to sign a contract to run as a professional when he was confrotned with a bonus of $10,000, which came from Tex Rickard's coffers.

Hear Mr. Dibblee:

"I can say positively that we have not been negotiating, either directly or indirectly with Nurmi. He has not received any offers from us and as a matter of fact I don't trink we would have any use for him. We know nothing about Nurmi's plans except through unofficial and indirect information from Hugo Quist, who happened to drop into the Garden because of his interest in the Ray-El Ouafi professional race.

"Even Quist is quite definite in the belief that Nurmi will not become a professional runner."

Quist, who has an inexplicable Finnish reticence, provides some enlightening information. The information was extracted through employment of the methods made famous by the Spanish inquisition. Laid end to end here are Quist's replies:

"Nurmi will come to this country, but not with the intention of running. Nurmi is being sent by the Finnish government to study some angle of our school sytsem—probably the athletic end. He will take up indefinite residence here. He may even make it permanent. He is going to study automobile mechanics, as that is his business abroad.

"It is possible, indeed probable, that Nurmi may run in this country, but he won't turn professional. It has been his ambition to break all the long distance records in the books, especially those held by Alfred Shrubb. When I met him at the Olympic games this year he still cherished his old ambition to win two Olympic championships in 1928 and take the Olympic marathon in 1832. He won only once in Amsterdam, but you can bet he will be in the marathon at Los Angeles."

This all sounds very reasonable especially in view of the sincere comment by some well known A.A.U. officials that Nurmi would be foolish to turn professional when he could make more money as an amateur.

Another item of interest:

The report that Willie Ritola did not defend his national and metropolitan cross country championships because he was going to turn pro., too, is apparently without foundation. Ritola, after running for Finland in the Olympic games, returned to his native land and spent considerable time in celebrating. He was not in fit condition to run when he came back to the United States, and he isn't training yet.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The meeting to draw up the schedule for the Lakeshore group is to be held in Port Hope to-night.

The Petes' intermediates are grouped with Port Hope, Bowmanville, and Oshawa in what has come to be called the Lakeshore group. With these four teams grouped together, local hockey fans can be assured that they will see smart hockey games at the Brock Street Rink soon.

* * * * * *

Oshawa is sitting on top of the world already this year with two Ontario championships, the intermediate lacrosse and the intermediate O.R.F.U. rugby titles, already to their credit and it is quite in order that a strong bid will also be made for a similar success in hockey

* * * * * *

The players trying out for either of the hockey teams are again reminded of the gym workout to-night at the Y.M.C.A.

* * * * * *

The curlers have already hit the ice at the Granite Club's rink in Toronto and one of the features of the first days play was the great curling done by Sir Joseph Flavelle, who is now in his seventy-first year.

* * * * * *

A strong appeal for western rugby was made by Al Ritchie, manager of the Regina Rough Riders at a banquet tendered the team after the game in Hamilton last Saturday. He voiced the conviction that western athletes were just as good and just as courageous as any and would some day come east and win. He reviewed the difficulties under which rugby is played in the West, thousands of miles from the rule-makers and rule interpreters and held that the only way the West could learn rugby was by playing the East. He said that although the team that the Rough Riders brought east was considered the best team that ever came out of the West it was not up to its full strength because some of the players could not make the trip and the team had had a layoff of four weeks before they met the Tigers.

* * * * * *

One of the best means to help western rugby in our opinion would be to have at least one of the Eastern champions go west and meet the Western champions there. This is done in the hockey play-offs, the senior alternating with the junior in playing in the East and West and each part always has an opportunity to see one of the championship series.

* * * * * *

Closer co-operation over the hockey situation is beginning to prevail in Kingston. The Kingston Hockey Club have withdrawn their senior entry and have promised Queen's University all their best players. It was impossible for any one to see how the Limestone City was going to get two senior teams, as it is now with only one they may get a team of senior calibre.

* * * * * *

The Maple Leafs by their three to one defeat of the great Montreal Canadiens in Montreal last night, won their first game on foreign ice and jumped up to first place in the Canadian division of the N.H.L. Irvine Bailey outskated the jinx that has been following him all season and supplied the scoring punch of the Leafs by planting two goals in the nets.

LOCAL STUDENTS ATTEND McGILL

Only Two Names from Peterborough Are Found in University Directory.

Only two from Peterborough are included among the three thousand students of McGill University according to the directory issued yesterday by the University.

Mabel I. Cunningham of 370 Monaghan Road, is enrolled in the Faculty of Graduate Nurses and William Edgar, of Chemong Road is in the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research. All nine provinces of the Dominion are represented in the list.

The British Empire outside of Canada is responsible for the greater part of the students from overseas, Ireland being at the top, with England and Scotland contributing about their annual quota. The entries from Newfoundland show that McGill holds its former attraction for ambitious youths in the ancient colony. The Union of South Africa sent one student while India is represented by several.

The University takes on an international aspect when the directory is examined for other countries. A total of twenty-four states of the Union is represented, as are all the British West Indian islands. The Latin-American group is made up of Cuba, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru and Gautemala. One student is present from Alaska.

Students from European countries include some from France, Denmark, Latvia, while from the Orient are students from Japan and China.

Practically all the largest cities of the world are represented by students at McGill, London, New York, Tokio, Shanghai, Pekin, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Belfast, Mexico City, Riga, Santiago, Johannesburg, Tientsin, Lima and a host of larger and smaller cities all over the globe sent their budding savants to mix with their white, yellow and black brethren enrolled at McGill

ROAD DELEGATION WAITS ON PREMIER

Urges Brighton - Campbellford Highway Be Taken Into Provincial System.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—A large delegation from Northumberland County yesterday waited upon Premier Ferguson, acting Minister of Highways, to urge that the Brighton-Campbellford road be taken into the Provincial highway system. They represented this stretch as an important factor in transportation in that county, and predicted that Campbellford would undoubtedly stagnate if some improvement were not made.

The Prime Minister promised to lay the views of the delegates before Hon. George S. Henry, on his return from overseas, in "a strongly sympathetic way." He said there were too many cases, however, where counties had ceased to do any work on certain roads in the hope that the Province would shoulder responsibility for maintenance.

Fred McArthur, of Cobourg, pointed out that Campbellford depended on trucking for most of its transport, and for three or four months of the year this was impossible. The main highway to the south was feeding other towns. Mayor Kingston, of Campbellford, said that several prospective manufacturing concerns had been discouraged by lack of adequate transportation facilities. Other speakers were Charles Davidson, warden of the county; Major J. F. B. Belford, ex-M.P.P.; W. L. Lethwire, Major Steen, of Campbellford Cloth Company; Mr. Carr, representing the creamery business, and Mr. Lott, of Canadian Paper Board Company.

Dickie's spine, pronounced it curable. With much persuasion on the part of Wilhelmine the wedding was held off for three months. The doctor could not be spared from his work for many days, so on New Year's Eve he left for home, taking Dickie with him to share his rooms and be a companion to him in his quiet hours.

All the knowledge Dr. Foxley had acquired in the past five years was used in the care of Dickie. Day and night he studied, planned and worked to bring about the fulfilment of his aim.

The day arrived when he could return to London and receive his reward; also present to Nurse Billy her much deserved reward.

On the twenty-fifth day of March a quiet wedding was solemnized at a little country church near London. The groom smiled contentment, but the bride's face fairly radiated happiness as the best man, Richard Wilson, slowly and erectly walked to his place beside the marriage altar.

KNOX CHURCH HOLDS SUPPER

Over Five Hundred and Fifty Attend Ladies' Annual Event.

SMALL BAZAAR.

One of the most successful fowl suppers in the history of the organization was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Knox United Church in the lecture hall of the church last evening. There were over five hundred and fifty people in attendance for a very fine supper of home-made cooking served at tables daintily arranged with potted plants and cut flowers.

A small bazaar of fancy and useful articles and home-made candy was held in the Ladies' Parlor and a very enjoyable musical program was given in the church at the conclusion of supper.

The president of the Ladies' Aid Society, Mrs. Robert Johnston, was general convenor, assisted by an energetic group of members. Young girl members of the Volunteer Bible Class and boy members of the A.S.K. Class of the Sunday School acted as waiters for the service of supper, which was supervised by Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. J. Londerville and Mrs. G. Davis.

Convenors of the supper tables were Mrs. R. Martin, Mrs. H. Anderson, Mrs. T. Sproat, Mrs. N. Gillis, Mrs. H. Beatty and Mrs. H. Hamblin, with Mrs. A. Finnie and Mrs. William Carter assisting with the service.

The sale of articles was in charge of Mrs. Robert Clifford and Mrs. Harold Baptie, assisted by Mrs. Frank Gray, Mrs. Howard Clegg and Mrs. Andrew McKenzie.

The sale of home-made candy was looked after by Mrs. Bell and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Bell.

An excellent musical program, in charge of Mrs. J. J. Pollock and Mrs. N. Gillis, included vocal solos by Mrs. N. Todd, Mrs. T. E. Curvin and Miss Jessie Hill, a piano duet by the Misses Marjorie and Margaret Sproat, readings by Miss Mildred Lloyd, banjo selections by Frank Clarke and organ numbers by Thomas Allen, violin solos by Alex Robertson and music by D. Sproule's "Lucky Five" Orchestra.

Miss May Pollock acted as accompanist for the program.

Wedding Bells

FRISE—HAMILTON.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. Paul's Church Manse, when the Rev. William Allan read the marriage service for Lena Pearl, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hamilton, and Gordon Kenneth Frise, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Frise, both of this city.

The bride wore a lovely gown of sand georgette, with lace bodice and girdle caught with a brilliant buckle, a hat of gold lace, brown suede shoes and silk hose to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of roses.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Murrell Robertson, the former wearing a dress of poudre blue georgette and hat to match, with bouquet of Ophelia roses.

The gift to the bridegroom to the bride was a suede purse, and to the attendants a pair of silver candlesticks.

AGNEW—CASTLE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Mark Street United Church on Monday evening by Rev. A. E. Thornley, when Beatrice, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Castle, Hunter Street E., became the bride of Harold Agnew, son of the late Frederick and Mrs. Agnew.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked winsome in a gown of rosedawn crepe, with rose hat, flesh hose and satin shoes, and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid, Miss Irene Delong, was prettily gowned in a peach satin and georgette gown and rose hat, and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

Mr. Cyril Agnew attended the bridegroom.

The bridal arch was beautifully decorated with white and small bells on each side, with a large white bell hanging from the crest of the arch.

During the signing of the register Mr. Vic. Boorman sang "Because," accompanied by Miss Nellie Boorman. Amid showers of confetti the young couple left for the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Agnew will reside at 54 Hunter Street East.

STOMACH TROUBLE

A prominent and well-to-do man was on his way to New York, his passage booked for Carlsbad, after unsuccessful efforts in this country to cure stomach trouble. On the Pullman he met a man near his own age with whom he became confidental, at least to the extent of confiding the nature of his trip and what he hoped to accomplish in the way of health.

This new friend, who had the appearance of a hard-headed business man, became interested because he had suffered a like condition. He advised the sick man to cancel his steamship bookings and return to his home and consult a Chiropractor. He knew from experience that the sick man's cure was not in Carlsbad. His personality was such as to compel the ailing man to take the advice. It turned out that the stomach trouble which had baffled the skill of specialists responded to CHIROPRACTIC TREATMENTS. The cure for which this man was seeking was in his own city. Had he but investigated he could have spared himself much discomfort.

THE MORAL IS: INVESTIGATE CHIROPRACTIC AND GET WELL AT HOME. OTHERS HAVE DONE IT—WHY CAN'T YOU?

Misfortune Dogs His Footsteps

'OVER THE HILL' MEANS AGONY TO ONCE PROUD LAND OWNER IN COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH

Sad Story Told At To-day's Meeting of County Council.

SEVENTY-TWO YEARS.

History of Case Called Forth By Presentation of Account For Trivial $28.50.

The road to the poorhouse is generally long and devious and uncharted, and few there are who recognize it as they plod along. Sometimes the highway is broad and comparatively brief and its distressing destination even more unexpected and unforeseen.

Two recent arrivals at the common end of those many roads were a farmer of 72 years and his wife, thirteen years his senior. They had lived in Haliburton County, and fifteen years ago they moved to Asphodel township where, the husband says, they bought a farm for $5,000 and had $2,000 surplus cash. At that time not a cloud could be seen in the blue sky of their lives.

Then their son came to live with them, and with him his wife and family of five. Some time afterward the grandfather decided to buy a larger farm. At the war time inflated valuations it is said to have cost $11,000, part of which remained as a mortgage. The new farm was deeded to the son, and even then there were no forerunners, no portents of trouble.

Meanwhile the grandchildren were growing up Cars were bought. The son developed an incurable disease. Expensive machinery, probably unnecessary, was bought. Farm land values declined, and the $11,000 investment shrank to about $7,000. On every side difficulties began to beset and harass the ageing farmer and his wife. Payments due on the farm began to lapse. One year was worse than the other, and only a few dollars were left.

Finally, the son died within the last twelve months, the farm and all the chattels were sold to meet the family's indebtedness, and the old farmer and his wife were "left without a dollar." And so they went over the hill together in the gathering twilight of their lives, and their son's family returned to the north country. Some of the children are "scattered around," it is said.

The farmer had been a member of a municipal council in his brighter days in Haliburton, and had been a government employee as timber inspector.

Only a few weeks ago his wife died at the House of Refuge, and was buried in the county cemetery nearby. Before he left the place in Asphodel he said, "I'd rather be taken out there in the yard and shot than have to go to the House of Refuge, after all I've been through."

Misfortune had broken his heart and ultimately his pride.

Such is an outline of Reeve Scott's history of the family, to the county council this morning when he asked the councilto pay half an account of $28.50 which Asphodel township had assumed.

The council agreed, on Reeve Montgomery's motion, seconded by Reeve Clark.

Indian Monument Being Erected To Jesuit Priest

OLDTOWN, Me., Dec. 6.—Commemorating the achievement of Father Sebastian Rale, Jesuit missionary among the Indian tribes of Maine 200 years ago, a simple yet impressive monument has been erected on the reservation of the Penobscot tribe of the Abanaki Indians here. The reservation is an island in the Penobscot River, opposite Oldtown.

Father Rale entered the missionary field among the Maine Indians in 1694, and from that time until his untimely and tragic death in 1714 spent practically all his time there.

RUM RUNNERS RUN AGROUND

Engine Exhaust Overcomes Two Men Whose Beer-Laden Craft Crashes.

BOAT SINKS LATER.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Dec. 6 (Special to The Examiner).—Two Central Ontario rum runners operating from the town of Picton to Rochester came to grief late yesterday on a shoal near Premier Cove, on the shore of Prince Edward County, as the result of a peculiar accident.

Jim Hutchinson and a companion by the name of Babcock, set out from Picton about four o'clock with two hundred cases of ale for Rochester, N.Y., in a 35-foot motor launch owned by Joe Donovan of Rochester. The boat, which was a closed one, developed motor trouble and in some manner the exhaust was thrown into the cabin instead of outside. Before this fact was noticed, both Hutchinson and Babcock had become overpowered by the fumes and the launch was left without a guiding hand.

For some three-quarters of an hour the boat was seen to travel about in circles and finally ended up on a rocky shoal in Premier Cove, some five miles from Picton. A farmer named Denike had been watching the craft and seeing its unfortunate end rowed out to it where he found the two unconscious men in the cabin. Hutchinson revived in about half-an-hour but Babcock who had been trying to fix the motor, was in a much more serious condition and was nearly two hours under a doctor's care before he regained consciousness.

Provincial Constable Morris of Picton took charge of the craft and had it guarded all night, but this morning when dawn broke, it was seen that it had slipped off the ledge and had sunk in fifteen feet of water.

Inspector Lougheed of Belleville and Excise Officer McLenaghan also visited the scene of the wreck and found that Hutchinson's papers were in order, as he had reported back as soon as possible after reviving. Whether or not the ship can be raised is not known, as it was badly damaged after striking the shoal.

The strikers took violent means to prevent other workers from taking their places.

Typesetting Machines Operated By Telegraph

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)— A telegraph wire operated two newspaper typesetting machines here today at the plant of the Rochester Times-Union.

Despatches by wire were transferred mechanically into the machines with human touch eliminated and were recorded in lines of metal type. The object of the invention is to shorten time and work required to transfer news from the place where it occurs to the printed page.

To-day's operation was a private demonstration.

His Majesty's Cairn Terrier Crouches In Corridor Seeking Entrance Into Royal Apartment; Refuses To Eat

LONDON, December 6 (Canadian Press). — One of the most pathetic figures in Buckingham Palace these days is King George's Cairn terrier, who has spent most of the time since his royal master became ill crouching in the corridor leading to the royal apartment.

Only Princess Mary has been able to coax the terrier to take a little food. The dog makes a dash for the King's room when anyone emerges, but is always captured before reaching an electric door screen which prevents drafts.

KING BETTER BUT NOT YET PAST DANGER

Meagre Reports Tell of Restful Night and Localized Infection.

QUEEN SMILES.

Good Augury Seen In Fact Of Consort's Resuming Drive.

LONDON, December 6. (Canadian Press.) — The statement that King George's General condition was slowly improving, in the morning bulletin, was the most welcome announcement that has come from the palace since His Majesty's illness became critical. It brought cheer to subjects who have been waiting with tense anxiety for some word that would indicate a turn for the better.

It would be unwise to interpret the bulletin too optimistically, for the King has now been ill for seventeen days, and is granted to be a very sick man. Chances for a turn for the worse are far from being eliminated.

Another favorable feature of the bulletin was the statement that after passing a favorable night, His Majesty's temperature was lower. The bulletin also stated that the infective process was being increasingly localized, though care was taken to point out that this was severe and that progress must be slow.

Satisfaction was felt in palace circles that no mention was made of the anxiety as to his heart, which in recent days has been regarded as the critical point in the battle against disease.

A heavy fog hovered over London during the night. It had lifted this morning, however, and the crowds outside the palace gates had no difficulty in reading the bulletin. Anti-fog appliances designed to keep the air in the palace clear, were put into operation during the night, to prevent the dampness from reaching the King.

Danger Realized.

While hope continued strong for King George to-day, there seemed to be a general realization by the public that he hung between life and death.

The King's heart, taxed by the strain of his long illness, was still the chief concern of his physicians. Great importance was generally attached, however, to their statement that his strength was being maintained, although there had been a rise in his temperature.

It was stated authoritively at the palace during the night that the King had had a good day with plenty of rest, and certainly was no worse than he had been on Tuesday night.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, said in a speech last night that he had just received a telephone message from the palace, which was not quite so good as the morning bulletin.

"We should not attempt to hide the fact that the position is one which causes great anxiety to all those in touch with the palace. The continuance of the pleurisy affection is not good."

Lord Dawson of Penn visited Buckingham Palace this afternoon and had a short consultation with his colleague, Sir Stanley Hewett on King George's condition.

About the time of the doctor's afternoon visit, the Queen and Princess Mary went for a drive. The Queen smiled and waved her hand at the crowd.

The official bulletin on the King's condition to-day said the King passed a fair night and his temperature this morning was lower. His general condition was slowly improving and the infective process, though still severe, was becoming more localized.

Buckingham Palace circles let it be known at four p.m. that the condition of the King had not changed since the earlier bulletin from the physicians.

DEPARTMENT IS FIGURING ON TRAFFIC 10 YEARS HENCE DECLARES DISTRICT ENGINEER

Cars in Near Future Will Create Traffic Problem On Rural Highways.

"FLAT" ROAD PROBLEM.

Warden Smithson Suggests That Council Accept Extension of Lock Street.

"Traffic on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway ten years hence will be so heavy on Sunday afternoons that you won't want to drive on it; that's why the Ontario Highway's Department is opposed to abandoning a river crossing like the Wallace Point bridge."

In this prophecy A. N. Fellowes, the Department's district engineer, replied to Warden Smithson' comment that the Wallace Point bride could be dismantled and traffic across across the river confined to the Bensfort bridge.

"The Department is figuring ten years ahead" said Mr. Fellowes, "and we see more and more cars coming into use every year. We have all seen it, and from this steady increase we can imagine what the future is likely to produce in the way of traffic problems. I believe the time will come when you will be glad to motor that way in order that you may avoid as much as possible of the present highway."

The "Flat" Road Problem

Warden Smithson had re-introduced Otonabee's vexatious road problem, the so-called "flat" road which the township council desires the county to assume as a county road. The "flat" road extends south from the Locks bridge to the county road running east from the Bensfort bridge to Keene. It is virtually parallel with the Keene road, except that it is about two miles to the west. When the route of the county road was being laid out in that section, the former Deputy Minister of Highways believed that the traffic from Bensefort bridge to Peterborough would go along the road to Keene as far as Orde's corner and then turn north toward the city. Hence, the Keene road to Bensfort bridge and also northerly to the city was made a county road and the "flat" road was left to Otonabee's care.

Otonabee's Proposal

However, traffic has taken the shorter course, the "flat" road between the city and Bensfort bridge imposing a maintenance and repair bill on the township that has become burdensome. Warden Smithson's proposal was that Otonabee would assume the upkeep of the road west of Orde's corners over the two miles to the junction with the "flat" road providing the county assumes the "flat" road itself.

"I certainly think it should be" said Mr. Fellowes. "Otonabee has been a progressive township in road building and has lived up to its agreements.

It is spending proportionally more than any other township in the county."

The committee adopted a resolution requesting the Council to pass a by-law, embodying the Otonabee proposal, for the approval of the Department.

The "flat" road is practically the extension of Lock Street, the Warden told the committee.

Eliminate Turns

The elimination of two sharp turns and a narrow stretch or road through a swamp on the Keene road a short distance west of Hastings was authorized by the committee. In order that this improvement may be begun at once and carried along as far as possible this season Reeve Rye and Duncan MacFarlane County Road Superintendent, motored there to-day to arrange for the purchase of a right of way through the properties of Thomas Coad and David Welsh. They received their warrant from the County Road committee on Warden Smithson's motion seconded by Reeve Curtis. Mr. Rye presided as chairman of the committee.

Mr. Fellowes emphasized the desirability of this work which which would substitute a reverse curve for two rather dangerous right-angle turns. Motorists who remember that approach to Hastings will recall the right and left turns with the intervening narrow road bordered by a swamp immediately west of Coad's gravel pit only a short distance from Hastings. The proposed new road will cut across the right angle. Filling material is close by, Mr. Fellowes said, and the cost of the work should not be excessive.

Jolson Blackens Eyes Of Man Who Insulted Him

PALM SPRINGS, Cal., Dec. 6 (INS).—Al Jolson can do more with him arms than make gestures pleading for his "mammy."

Recently the black face comedian admitted he had blackened the eyes of a man who insulted him and his bride, Ruby Keeler, in an exclusive hotel dining room in Los Angeles last Friday night. Jolson said:

"He made remarks that were derogatory to me and my race and he also said things about my wife. Sure, I hit him there on the dance floor."

Jolson could not give the name of his asserted victim.

MANAGER REFUSES DELIVERY OF 13,000 PESOS TO WORKERS OFFICIALS PROTEST ACTION

Continental Rubber Company's Employees Secure Court Judgment.

8,000 ON DEPOSIT.

Armed Policeman Accompanied Court Attendants To Invade Building For Money.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MEXICO CITY, December 6. — Armed forces backed by a court order, was used to collect the sum of thirteen thousand pesos from the vaults of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, after the manager of the bank, J. E. W. Stephenson, had declined to voluntarily deliver the money. He contended that proper legal notification of the attachment order had not been made by the court. A judgment rendered in favor of the workers employed by the Continental Rubber Company instructed an attachment of the funds of the company deposited with the bank to the amount of thirteen thousand pesos, to be paid as indemnity to the company's employees in a strike dispute. When an attempt to collect was made the bank management informed the court officials that the Continental Rubber Company had on deposit an amount of only eight thousand pesos. Over-ruling the bank objection, the court attendants instructed armed policemen who accompanied them, to invade the building to effect payment, which they did. The management seeing that resistance was useless, delivered the money over.

No Information.

TORONTO, December 6. — Advices from Mexico City to-day that the Canadian Bank of Commerce vaults had been illegally entered to secure payment in a court order, came as a complete surprise to the bank headquarters here.

"We will certainly enquire, though wire communication in Mexico is extremely difficult," an official stated.

FOUR CASES TO BE HEARD AT SESSIONS

Two Civil Actions To Be Heard By Jury and One Non-Jury.

ONE CRIMINAL.

December Sittings Open On Tuesday Before His Honor Judge Huycke.

The docket is rather small for the December sittings of the General Sessions of the Peace of the County Court to be heard before His Honor Judge Huycke beginning at 1 p.m. on Tuesday, December 11. There are only three civil actions, two jury and one non-jury, and one criminal case.

The jury cases are: McMillan v. Wallace and Kelly v. Head; and the non-jury case is Thompson v. McColl.

In the case, Thomas McMillan v. Harry Wallace, McMillan, the plaintiff, has entered a claim against the defendant, Wallace, for $500.00 damages. The case arises out of an accident on the Provincial Highway in the Township of Hope of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, when some calves owned by Wallace escaped on to the road and were hit by McMillan while driving his car, on September 7, 1928.

The plaintiff is a mechanic living in the city, and the defendant is a farmer living in the Township of Hope. The plaintiff claims that while legally driving his car upon the highway at a fair rate of speed, his car collided with some cattle belonging to Wallace, which were illegally upon the road." The fences enclosing the Wallace farm, he alleges, were defective and the cattle had made their way on to the road, causing serious damages to the plaintiff.

The statement of the defence alleges that McMillan was driving at night at a high rate of speed and in a reckless manner, and killed a calf belonging to the defendant which had escaped from his field. The defendant alleges further that if the plaintiff had been driving carefully he would not have hit the calf, and the accident with the resulting damages would have been avoided. The defendant alleges that all injuries suffered by the plaintiff were entirely by his own actions.

The case promises to be very interesting, as Wallace in a court at Port Hope has already been allowed damages against McMillan for the loss of his calf.

J. A. O'Brien is appearing for the plaintiff and the firm of Gordon and Elliot for the defendant.

The case will be tried before a jury.

In the other jury case Ida Kelly, of Peterborough, is claiming from Walter Head, also of Peterborough, damages to the extent of $250.00 for personal injuries suffered.

The case arises out of an accident, which happened on the corner of Aylmer and Brock Streets on March 20, 1928, in which the plaintiff, Ida Kelly, claims to have been struck by

Old-Established Firm Plans Move Next Year To Charlotte Street

New Premises Will Span Creek and Displace Fisher Battery Station West of Loblaw's—Surveyors At Work To-day On Project.

GEORGE STREET STORE MUST BE VACATED BY MARCH TO PERMIT INCOMING FIRM TO TAKE OVER PREMISES

Contract To Be Let Immediately Architect's Plans Are Completed—Modern Arcade Front Will Mark New Structure, Which Will Be Fully Up-to-date.

A splendid new two-storey building, to have a frontage of approximately 90 feet and a depth of well over one hundred feet will, ere many months have passed, occupy the large vacant lot immediately west of the Loblaw Groceteria, a half block west of George street on the north side of Charlotte street. Into that new building will move the firm of Richard Hall, Ltd., with its various drygoods and ladies' wear and men's wear departments.

Old Premises Sold

A change of ownership of the present quarters of the Hall store on George street has made necessary the removal; and hence the decision to build. The new quarters must be ready for occupancy by the month of March and for this reason, surveyors are already looking over the grounds, preparatory to drawing up of the architects' plans. Immediately this has been done, a building permit will be taken out and the contract let. An approximate price of the new building is not at present, available.

Recent Transaction.

Though details are not available, it is understood, from The Examiner's conversation with C. H. Saunders, manager of the Hall Company, that the purchase of the new site on Charlotte Street has taken place within the past few days, Richard Rogers of the Peterborough Canoe Company having been the seller. It includes the vacant space where now rests the blind man's news stand, and, farther westward, the Fisher Service Garage, which building will be razed. A specially constructed wall will provide protection from the creek which flows through one part of the property. A modern arcade front is also contemplated.

Purchased by the Walker Stores, Ltd., three years ago, the firm name of Richard Hall, Ltd., has been retained. The firm has had a long life in Peterborough, and one employee J. McIntyre, of the dress goods and silks department, recalls that when he started with the firm, twenty-six years ago, it occupied quarters near the corner of Simcoe and Water Streets, a part of which is now the Bank of Montreal. The Hall Company had been in business many years before, said Mr. McIntyre, and it has grown a great deal.

Another employee who has been with the firm long enough to note many changes, is Mrs. Loucks, who has charge of the ladies' ready-to-wear department. She has been in the Hall Store for the past twenty years.

LEGION GIVEN COUNTY GRANT

City Branch To Get $150 and Lakefield Allotted $100.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Peterborough and Lakefield branches of the Canadian Legion receive grants of $150 and $100 respectively from the County Council according to the recommendation of the Finance committee this morning. The motion was proposed by Reeve Tanner, of Lakefield, seconded by Reeve Clark, of Galway.

The appeal of the Trent Waterways Association for $200 was rejected by the committee on Reeve Clark's motion, seconded by Reeve Hawthorne of Dummer.

"What do they do with the money?" Reeve Middleton asked.

"What do any of them do?" Reeve Curtis remarked. "We have no tab on them."

The county assumes the annual gift of a bronze medal for the winner of the "high cut in sod" class of the Peterborough plowmen's competition. This medal is given with the J. H. Burnham Cup.

Mr. Burnham wrote the council that when he presented the trophy to the Plowmen's Association he did not intend also to give a medal every year.

Warden Smithson moved that the county donate a five dollar bronze medal to the winning plowman in the sod class at the annual competition.

BOUNDARY LINE UNITES NATIONS

CELEBRATE PACT.

LONDON, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press). —Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, believes that the unfortified frontier between United States and Canada represents not only a line, "which divides only to unite" Canada and the United States, but stands in similar relation between whole British Empire and the United States.

Speaking at a dinner of the pilgrims society to celebrate the signing of Kellog-Briand pact renouncing war, Sir Austen said that the very existence of that treaty depended upon the decision of the United States senate with regard to ratification. He added that no government would more quickly follow United States' action than the Government of Great Britain. Sir Austin followed Ambassador Houghton and evoked prolonged cheers when he seized upon the theme of the United States' Ambassador's speech to make his declaration concerning the unfortified frontier.

CHEESEMAKERS ESTABLISH FINE RECORD

VAST IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN RATING OF CHEESE MADE AT FACTORIES DURING 1928

George H. Barr Commends Cheese Makers For Excellent Record Established.

ASSOCIATION MEETS.

20,985,229 Pounds of Milk Were Delivered in Factories in District This Year.

Commending the Peterborough Dairy District on its splendid record for the past year, and urging a continuance of that good record, George H. Barr, Director of Dairying for Ontario and representative of the Department of Agriculture, addressed the annual meeting of the Peterborough County Dairy Association held in the Canadian Legion Hall on Wednesday afternoon. In addition, there was the report of the local Dairy Instructor, W. J. Moore, on the past season's progress and the nomination of G. A. Gillespie as director for another year.

The discussion of many matters important to the dairying industry took place at yesterday's meeting which opened shortly after two o'clock with G. A. Gillespie presiding in the absence of President Alex McGruer of Brinston. In his opening remarks, the chairman referred to the local district's improvement over that of last year. At present, it has a 98 per cent rating as compared with slightly more than 89 per cent in 1927. Mr. Gillespie felt that the improvement could be maintained and predicted even further improvement.

George H. Barr.

Many comparisons, the majority of which favored this district, were made in the main address of the meeting, delivered by Mr. Barr. Though he stated at the outset that he had prepared few figures, he made note of the fact that the percentage of first grade cheese made in and around Peterborough had greatly increased as had been the case all over the province. This general improvement he attributed to two principal reasons—closer selection of milk on the stands, and increased diligence on the part of the makers.

He instanced many mistakes common to the makers, such as lack of care in the cooking of the curd, poor cutting and operation of the agitator, and recommended setting of the vat at one degree lower temperature and earlier cutting as a measure against acid. "Every maker should study the reasons for doing the things he does in his daily work—in other words, he should know what he is doing", declared Mr. Barr.

Granting of Certificates.

That there is no excuse for making poor grades of cheese and that the granting of certificates is becoming a matter of greater significance was emphasized in another part of the address. The necessity for the factory, equipment and employees being clean and entirely sanitary was stressed as was the need for closer co-operation between the makers, owners and the department in discouraging the bringing of poor material to the factories. Mr. Barr pointed out that there is a penalty provided by law that may be invoked by the man who uses cans for any other than their intended purposes and in conclusion complimented Mr. Moore on his work throughout the year. He also answered various questions on technical points of interest to the cheesemakers.

Better Milk Supply.

Chairman G. A. Gillespie, in thanking the speaker, expressed a wish that someday Mr. Barr will use his influence in promoting a keener competition among the Boards of Health in securing a better milk supply for their respective towns and cities. This matter is under the department which Mr. Barr represents.

Dairy Instructor's Report.

An adequate outline of the season's activities was contained in the report of Dairy Instructor W. J. Moore who has been in close touch with the cheesemakers of the district continually. Mr. Moore wrote:

"This report covers eight months beginning April 1st and ending November 30. Owing to the cold and backward season and the bad condition of the roads, there were no factories in operation of April 1st.

"I have travelled 7,000 miles in performing this work and had 20 factories, 14 in Peterborough County, five in Victoria and one in Durham. Twelve of these factories are stock companies and eight privately owned. Supplying milk to these 20 factories, there are 930 patrons, 6,753 cows, an average of 46 patrons and 336 cows to the factory. There were 20,985,229 pounds of milk delivered and 1,880,639 pounds of cheese made this year, and at 21c per pound, would be $394,934.19.

"Seventeen of these factories divided the money by straight fat basis and three by fat plus two method. There were 31,592 lbs. of whey butter made at a value of $10,374.40, $2,953.48 worth of whey cream and $4,000 was spent on buildings and

PROVINCES HAVE LARGE SURPLUS FOR YEAR 1928

Provincial Treasurer Shows Balance of $237,000 For Twelve Months Ending October 31.

LARGE LIQUOR REVENUE.

Department of Highways Collects $11,758,000—Gasoline Tax Leads Increase.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—The Province of Ontario has a surplus of $237,000 for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1928.

It is the second surplus in a row for the Ferguson Administration, if $122,000 less than that of 1927, and, as announced yesterday by Hon. Dr. Joseph D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, in his customary pre-sessional statement it has been achieved after providing fully for discount of bonds and paying off $3,171,579 of the Provincial debt under the 40-year retirement plan, and in spite of the fact that succession duties—one of the Treasury's greatest sources of revenue—fell approximately $4,800,000 below the returns for last year.

Profit in Liquor Sales.

Liquor Control Board revenue, more than anything else, apparently, accounts for the Province's position on the right side of the ledger. From profit on actual sale of liquor, revenue was derived to the extent of $7,225,000, an increase of $225,000 over the Budget estimate of last session, and $4,425,000 more than accrued in 1927, when the new act operated for only five months. Liquor permits contributed $893,390 to the Treasury. With the fines imposed under the new law, the Treasury has earned, altogether, approximately $8,225,000 in keeping Ontario's "whistle" wet for 12 months.

Ordinary revenue for the year ended was $58,455,000 and ordinary expenditure $58,192,000. In both cases Treasurer Monteith reports "expectations exceeded." In 1927 ordinary revenue amounted to $56,296,000 and ordinary expenditure $55,947,001.

The outstanding increase in revenue has, of course, been registered in the Attorney General's Department, thanks to the administration of the liquor law, as already stated. Here the increase was $2,940,000 over the figures for last year.

Refund by Hydro.

In the Prime Minister's Department revenue amounted to $2,798,000 an increase of $2,251,000, made up chiefly of $650,000 in water rentals (an increase of $170,000) and a refund of $2,108,000 to the Government by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission for advances made by the Province at various times since 1909, for preliminary work and other operations incidental to the establishment of the system.

Total revenue in the Lands and Forests Department was $3,556,000, an increase of $110,000, due principally to an increase of some $81,000 in the Provincial land tax and to other revenue collected for fire protection.

The Mines Department turned in $893,000 as its share of the purse, an increase of $97,000, chiefly accountable to a $25,000 jump in revenue from the profit tax; a $35,000 increase in revenue from the acreage tax ;and a $32,000 improvement in mining license and recording fees. Receipts from the last-named source reflect, states Treasurer Monteith, the marked degree of activity during the year ended in prospecting and in the staking of claims—the most pronounced activity of its kind in the history of Ontario and one which he expects will be continued this year.

The Department of Public Works registered a $45,000 increase in revenue, accounted for chiefly by rentals of Spadina House and 110 University Avenue.

Gas Tax Totals.

The Department of Highways collected $11,758,000, or $1,288,000 more than it did in 1927. The chief items cimprising this collection follow:

	1928	Increase
Gasoline tax ...	$4,607,000	$574,000
Motor vehicle permits . . .	6,470,000	506,000
Miscellaneous. .	681,000	209,000

Motor tourist trade increased by 24½ per cent. over that of 1927, and consequently the gas tax collected was higher.

Revenue from the Labor Department totaleid $1,092,000, an increase of $48,000, due almost entirely to the increased allowances paid to mothers during the year and the consequent increased contributions thereto by the municipalities.

A $420,000 increase in revenue occurred in the Provincial Secretary's Department. This was due principally to an increase in perquisites refunded by employees and aggregating $177,000; $56,000 from reigstration of brokers under the Security Frauds Prevention Act; and $165,000 from revenue accruing from operation of the Companies Act. Total revenue for the Department was $2,306,000.

SPECIAL SPEAKER ADDRESSES RELIGIOUS EDUCATION COUNCIL

Cavan and South Monaghan Association Holds 39th Annual Convention.

TALKS ON CONVENTIONS.

Rev. J. N. H. Norton, Corresponding Secretary of Ontario Councils Conducts Conference.

MILLBROOK, December 6. — Rev. J. H. H. Norton, Corresponding Secretary of the Ontario Religious Education Council, was the principal speaker at the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Townships of Cavan and South Monaghan Religious Education Council, held in the United Church at Bailieboro, on Tuesday, December 3, beginning at 2 p.m.

Thomas H. Aiken, president of the Association, occupied the chair, and opened the meeting with prayer, Rev. F. L. Carpenter of Cavan, having charge of the devotional period.

The minutes of the last anhual convention, held at Millbrook in January, 1927, were read by the secretary, Hubert Gardiner, and the reports of departmental superintendents were received. Evidently Miss McCorkindale's book, "Temperance and Life," is being used by practically all the schools in the Townships, and the two new Young People's Societies, one at Carmel, and the other at Millbrook, were reported as having been organized in recent weeks.

Rev. W. W. Jones, B.A., B.D., of Millbrook, gave the first address, developing the subject of "Temperance," with special reference to the fact that this word suggests personal restraint and abstinence, while prohibition refers to the control of the liquor traffic by legislation.

The encouragement from results of the recent Presidential election in the United States, and what the significance of this may mean in regard to public sentiment on the matter of temperance, was pointed out, and the fact that there is real work to be done by the Sunday schools on the side of temperance, was also stressed. "The greatest reason for the prosperity and efficiency of the United States is probably because of its being a prohibition country, and Canada is lagging behind, though we will some time come out into the sunshine, having realized the danger, and put this evil away from our midst."

"Some of the fine young men of our townships are learning to drink; it may not affect your lad, but it may have touched your neighbor's boy. We must take this seriously because if you have not a son, you may have a daughter, and she is not free from this threatening evil."

"There are two reasons for the waste of good grain in the making of liquor; one is because there is money in it, and the liquor interests have no conscience; the other reason is there are people who like it, and who are learning to like it, and once an appetite is developed they will sacrifice their families' interests, and ruin their homes, in order to satisfy the acquired thirst. The evil is tremendous, and persistent, and has now the sanction of our government. We need an active temperance department in every school because the danger exists, and it is worthwhile to save the boys and girls. I think a superintendent is 'asleep at the switch' who has not this department organized in his school."

In conclusion the speaker urged a world-wide point of view as well as a local one, and emphasized the use of the pledge, and of personal influence to do away with the liquor evil in the community, and in the whole Dominion.

Dr. J. H. H. Norton conducted an inspiring and helpful round table conference as a closing feature of the afternoon session, mentioning particularly the very fine township and provincial conventions which have been held this fall, and referring sympathetically to the sad loss which has come into the life of the General Secretary of the O.R.E.C. Rev. Mr. Priest, in the death of his wife, which recently occurred.

The question of teacher training came up first for discussion, and two schools, Millbrook and Fairmount, reported having classes, the former having had twelve pupils take the examinations during the year. This was especially pleasing to Mr. Norton, who stated he had not, for two years, been in a township where as many pupils had written on the examinations. Somewhat later in the convention Bailleboro school reported having had seven pupils who had written on the examinations in the past year.

Several plans for taking the teacher training work were advanced, among these being the individual study plan, and the Township Standard Training School which lasts for one week, with classes every evening, and a worker from the office to assist with the instruction periods. Afternoon and evening classes are better if these can be arranged for. All the schools in the township participate.

Replying to a question regarding the charting of a school to come up to standard, Mr. Norton illustrated this by using the Millbrook school, filling out the chart he had displayed at the front of the church and finding that this school rated 100 per cent.

The different ways of giving instruction in the Sunday school were taken up briefly, the "Messenger" plan by which certain boys and girls are named as 'Messengers' for a number of foreign countries where missions are maintained, and required to come on a specified Sunday with some news items about their respective lands, being a new one that commended itself to the delegates.

Urging the pastors to announce that they would 'smoke a cigarette' on a certain Sunday, was a startling suggestion, the speaker explain-

Large Brown Egg Laid By Barred Rock Hen

In these dark days of few eggs there is a thrill in picking an egg out of the nest the size of the one that Mrs. Thomas Boyd of Ida brought into The Examiner office this morning. The egg measured eight inches around the length and six and a half inches around the middle and it was the work of a barred-rock biddy that roams the Boyd farm near Ida.

COMMISSION GIVES REPORT ON YEAR'S WORK

County Council Appreciates Work Done By Suburban Area Body.

$32,269.43 SPENT.

The County Council's appreciation of the work of the Suburban Area Commission, composed of Harry Gainey, chairman, William Brown, and Thos. Brown, was expressed in a formal resolution moved by Deputy-Reeve Fred McIntyre of Otonabee and seconded by Reeve Bert Middleton of Smith at Wednesday afternoon's session.

"Splendid work," was Mr. McIntyre's commendatory phrase, and not even Reeve Harold Rye of North Monaghan dissented, although he had objected that his township was not receiving a proportionate share of the commission's disbursement. The only work done on Park Street in the township had cost less than $500.

By Park Street, Mr. Rye meant the extension of that street south and west in Monaghan to the C.N.R. crossing, west of Crawford's Grove.

Cost of Year's Work.

It is designated by the Commission as Road No. 11, his year the Commission spent on it $344.75 for maintenance and $96.74, a total of $441.50 on approximately three miles of road. Other expenditures detailed by Mr Gainey were as follows: The Norwood Road in Otonabee, $2,632.16 for maintenance and $5,449.80 for construction, total $8,881.96; the Keene Road in Otonabee, $1,954.68, for maintenance and $600.80 for construction, total $2,555.46; the Lakefield Road in Smith, $3,113.80 for maintenance and $6,713.08 for construction, total $9,826.88; the Warsaw Road in Douro, $1,300.56 for maintenance and $4,616.18 for construction, total $5,916.74; Road No. 5 in Smith, $1,118.35.

Machinery, tools, interest, and other items added $4,328.54 for a total of $32,269.43, and the estimated total for the entire twelve months is $35,999.43, the increase being the estimated outlay during December.

Mr. Gainey paid a tribute to the work of Duncan McFarlane, county road superintendent, and in conclusion said he was glad to see Warden Smithson so far improved in health that he could carry on his duties in the Council.

Monaghan's Turn Next.

"We sincerely hope that our work and report meet with the approval of this Council," the chairman of the Commission added. "North Monaghan has not had as much expenditure as they perhaps should have got, but the Commission will try to do better next year."

Reeve Rye: "I think I've heard that promise before. I notice hat the representative of Smith is doing pretty well.

To this last remark William Brown answered that the Commission had the machinery on the Lakefield Road and decided to complete a link, thereby finishing the construction from Peterborough to Lakefield.

"Is that satisfactory?" Mr. Brown asked.

Mr. Rye: "Yes, if it is the last year you get into that situation up there."

Reeve Breckenridge: "Mr. Rye should have the machinery moved into Monaghan."

Worst Roads First.

In regard to Park Street, Mr. Brown said that the Commission was trying to improve the worst places first. There's very little traffic on that road. It is an easy road to keep up because the traffic is light.

Smith Wants More.

Reeve Middleton: "I'd like to ask the Suburban Area Commission to consider taking over more roads in Smith."

Reeve Rye: "Mr. Middleton wishes you to take over all the roads in Smith."

Mr. MacFarlane reported a week's traffic of 5,224 vehicles on Park

DOCTOR SHOWS QUICKEST WAY TO END HEAD COLDS

Many Here Who Try Hospital Method in Own Homes Get Almost Instant Relief

Quick, sure relief—then joy of waking up without the misery caused by neglecting a cold at this season.

This experience of Miss Gertrude Cary has been shared recently by numbers of people in Peterborough and vicinity. For doctors are now recommending home use of a hospital method that ends colds quickly —often in a few hours—yet is inexpensive and pleasant to take.

Miss Cary, for example, neglected her cold until her eyes became inflamed, her nose stopped up and congestion started spreading so fast she called her doctor. Relief began almost instantly when he advised Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a hospital certified compound of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients used in treating even extreme hospital cases.

With the first pleasant swallow she felt its comforting, healing warmth. In an hour or so the medication was absorbed by her system, loosening up congestion. When she awoke the next morning there was practically no sign of the cold—and in another day or so congestion had disappeared entirely.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists—50c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

TRANSFERABLE VOTE DISCARDED

Once Was Important Feature in Farmers' Movement in Ontario.

TORONTO Dec. 6.—Once a plank of their political party, the transferable vote lost its sole remaining status with the Ontario farmers on Tuesday when it was relegated to the discard by the United Farmers' Co-operative Company.

The shareholders' annual meeting in Hygeia Hall admitted that the transferable vote, more generally known as proportional representation, had proven a failure in the elections for the directorate. A different plan of voting was thereupon adopted.

"The transferable vote was a part of our political platform, but we have found that it doesn't work out in practice," R. H. Halbert commented.

The meeting voted down a proposition to have the nine candidates for the board receiving the highest number of votes declared elected. Instead, a plan was adopted, whereby, those who secure over half of the votes on the first and second ballots, will be declared elected. If vacancies should still exist, they will be filled by the results of a third ballot, irrespective of the quota of votes which the leaders upon it may obtain.

Other formal changes in the company's by-laws were ratified. One which repealed the capitalization as 50,000 shares of a par value of $25 was the object of some suspicion upon its presentation. It was explained, however, that it was merely a formality which had been forgotten two years ago when the capital structure had been changed to 70,000 shares without par value.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., December 6 (Canadian Press). — With the exception of a moderate demand from local interests for car lots of American corn and Canadian Western oats for all-rail shipment from Chicago and Fort William the trade in grain here yesterday was quiet. However, the tone of the market was steady for all lines except wheat, which was down one cent per bushel. Manitoba No. 6 wheat sold at 94, and feed wheat at 90c per bushel.

A moderate amount of business was done in spring and winter wheat flour and values were unchanged.

The millfeed trade was active and firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady

With the arrival of a number of cars from British Columbia the scarcity of fresh eggs here has practically been eliminated B.C. fresh extras sold at 52c, fresh firsts at 46c, and fresh pullet extras at 42c, f.o.b. Vancouver. Local prices for the same grades were unchanged. A good trade was also done in storage eggs. Receipts were 808 cases.

The local potato market was a little firmer. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 75c to 77c, and Green Mountains sold at 82c per 90 pounds, in bags.

Prices for beans were unchanged. Canadian beans sold at $5.25 per bushel, and in a jobbing way at 9½c per pound, yellow at 8½c, and yellow eyes at 9c per pound.

A stronger feeling developed in the local butter situation, and prices scored an advance of ½c per pound, which was attributed to the steady increasing demand and the fact that offerings were not liberal. Receipts were 88 packages.

The undertone to the market for western cheese was easier and values were reduced ¼c per pound. On the other hand eastern qualities were steady. Receipts were 415 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 6. Canadian Press. — Led by corn all grain underwent material downturns in prices yesterday. Prospects of a bigger movement of corn to market together with persistent reports that Europeans are cancelling purchases of nearby deliveries of corn, had a good deal to do with augmenting pressure to sell on the part of holders throughout the entire list of cereals.

Closing quotations on corn were weak, 1 5-8c to 2 1-4c net lower. Wheat finished 3-4c to 1 3-8c off; oats 5-8 to 7-8c down, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 17c.

Brisk onset of cold weather in corn belt territory gave promise yesterday of enlarged receipts of corn, and there was evidence from the start that houses with seaboard and foreign connections had taken to the selling side of the market, December delivery in particular. Notwithstanding word that Illinois corn at some downstate points was finding an outlet to ports on the Gulf of Mexico and at prices higher than offered from Chicago, the corn market here developed soon a decided downward trend carrying oats as well as wheat along, although May oats had opened a new high price record for the season.

Yesterday's receipts of corn in Chicago, 393 cars, were mainly applied on existing contracts, but it was shown that arrivals of corn so far this week at all primary centres have been in excess both of the corresponding time last year and a year ago. Moreover, November arrivals of corn for the country as a whole were reported yesterday as having been 8,000,000 bushels ahead of November last year and 4,000,000 bushels more than for November, 1926. There was also talk that barley prices are now well below the corn basis abroad, whereas a short time ago barley was at a premium of 10c a bushel. Another bearish factor was news that December corn prices this week in Buenos Aires show a decline of 4 1-2c a bushel. Wheat encountered much selling from the northwest, especially in the last hour. Reports continued yesterday that Argentine wheat is being offered to Europe at cheaper prices, and there was word also that Australian wheat yields are above expectations. World stocks of wheat showed a decrease of 2,189,000 bushels for the week, but still total 338,524,000 bushels against 286,922,000 bushels a year ago. Relative firmness of the oats market was ascribed to active shipping call and to scantiness of receipts.

Despite higher quotations on hogs, the provision market weakned as a result of scattered liquidating sales.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 6 (Canadian Press).—An easy tendency continues on Canadian egg markets. Trading is not yet active.

St. John.—Supplies of fresh eggs here are increasing and there has been a definite easing off in prices. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered: extras 66c, firsts 56c, seconds 40c, pullet extras 48c. British Columbia eggs are now offering on this market and are proving to be of excellent quality. There are heavier shipments of chickents and fowl coming here but very few turkeys are moving yet. Mixed weight turkeys are jobbing here at 46c per pound.

New York.—The dressed poultry market here is steady except on turkeys, which are weak. Prices are unchanged.

Minneapolis Flour Unchanged

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press).— Flour unchanged; shipments 33,371 barrels. Bran 32.00 to 32.50; wheat no. 1 northern 112⅛ to 1.13⅛; Dec. 1.11⅛; May 1.16¼; July 1.18⅛.

Corn, No. 3 yellow 76½ to 77½. Oats no. 3 white 43½ to 44½.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, December 6. Canadian Press. — Sterling exchange rates were quoted yesterday as follows:

Demand, $4.85 3-8 and 1-2.
Cables, $4.85 13-16 and 7-8.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—Jobbers reported a fair amount of business passing for butter yesterday. Buying on spot was mostly to fill immediate requirements and turnovers were settled for at prices which were steady to a shade easier than for the previous day.

The first shipment of New Zealand finest creamery this season is due to arrive in New York to-day. On board are 56,000 boxes for unloading at Halifax to be distributed to the Canadian interior. It is understood that local houses and chain stores will take deliverery of substantial amounts from the initial butter cargo. A second boat with butter on board left New Zealand water on Nov. 29 last, carrying 85,000 boxes of grass-made butter for distribution to Canadian markets later in the year. A total of 17,000 boxes of New Zealand creamery from the initial shipment is billed to New York on optional bill of lading.

The jobbing price of highest quality creamery prints, without cartons, at the close of last week average 43.88c as compared with 43.77c at the close of the previous week.

The cheese movement at mid-week was quiet, and while the feeling was reported as easier, there was no change in quotations on the spot market. Quotations for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded was steady at from 21¼c to 21¾c per lb., delivered Toronto.

Cheese offered for grading in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, exclusive of Quebec City, for the week ending Dec. 1, 1928, amounted to 14,040 boxes, compared with 9,065 boxes for the corresponding week last year.

The egg market continues to be featured by heavier shipments of eggs from British Columbia. Trading this week has slackened owing to mild weather and lower domestic demand. At outside farmiers' markets in Ontario, fresh egg prices appear to be taking a downward turn. Sales of very fair samples of fresh firsts are reported to 65c a dozen. With pullets now in quite general laying and good production in yearlings, it looks as if demand has been passed and lower prices are in sight. The quotable buying prices on spot remain steady. Large dealers are expected to make their weekly price revision today for commitments from the country next week.

YOUNG PEOPLE HEAR ADDRESS

"Life Situations That Perplex" Is Topic at Weekly Meeting of Society.

REV. HIE SPEAKS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Dec. 6.—"Life Situations that Perplex" was the topic given by Rev. A. C. Hie at the weekly meeting of the Young People's Societies, of Trinity United Church. Idan Bond, Sr., offered prayer after which Gordon Fairman read the scriptural lessons, Psalms 37. There was a brief business session and Scripture Text Calendars were distributed to a number of young people who agreed to sell them.

In speaking of the human tendency to worry, Rev. Mr. Hie said that we often hear it said, "don't worry", but that is a doctrine easy to preach, and harder to practice. As why the modern disciples of Jesus should not worry, he gave several reasons, among them the following. "God careth for us", "God is abundantly able to care", "Worrying is useless", "worrying is sin." In concluding he said that as pupils in the art of living, we have to do more than dream in order to win and impressed that thought, by telling of the epitaph on the tomb of Joseph II, King of Austria, "Here lies a monarch who with his best intentions, never carried out a single plan." Other items on the program were: Vocal duet, Mrs. William Preston and Mrs. William Preston; piano solo, Mrs. James Knight; reading, "The Cowpuncher", Howard Fairman; chorus, "Will Your Anchor Hold" by a male choir; reading, E. Lohnes. Mrs. A. Brooks, convenor of the Christian Fellowship Department, presided at the organ.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

MILLBROOK UNITED

MILLBROOK, Dec. 6 (Examiner Correspondence).—"Motives for Missionary Activity" was the subject taken up by Rev. W. W. Jones in the United Church at morning worship on Sunday, December 2, fittingly preparing the way for the annual canvass in connection with the mission and maintenance fund, which will be carried out in the early part of next week.

While Matthew gives the great commission, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," Mark tells where His disciples are to go: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature"; Luke gives the order of their going: "Tarry ye, until ye be endued with power from on high," and John relates the measure of their activity. "As the Father hath sent Me, so have I sent you into the world"; and the standard controlling their giving of time and means: "As the Father hath loved Me so have I loved you; continue ye in my love." Paul directs the manner of giving: "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him."

"Christianity is a missionary religion; the Bible is a missionary literature; and the best Christians have always been missionary Christians. Under the Divine commission we are to tell to others what we ourselves have found."

The situation regarding support of the "M. and M." fund was set forth in a most interesting and convincing manner, and it is expected that the large percentage of the 170 families connected with the congregation who, apparently through lack of knowledge and of interest, have so far failed to help reach the allocation of $1,500 laid upon this charge, will contribute in accordance with the Scriptural standard this year.

Comparing givings for religious purposes with the immense sums spent on pleasure, in its various forms, and on luxuries, in Canada, the speaker brought home the responsibility resting upon Christians to support more generously the Lord's special work, particularly in view of the increase in the number of home mission fields, and the added number of preaching places, and of families, since the United Church came into being.

Some of the objections raised to contributing to missions were dealt with in a convincing manner, and a cordial reception bespoken for the canvassers when they make their annual call in the immediate future.

"Obedience is the pathway of power, fellowship, joy, and victory; let us walk in it, in company with our best Friend, our Guide, and our wise Counsellor."

The male quartette, Messrs. H. W. Johnston, W. H. Coombe, V. C. Lambert, and M. McDowell, contributed a selection, "May the Christ-like Life Be Yours," which was most appropriate to the sermon, and to the spirit of the service.

TRENT RIVER UNITED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 6.—On Sunday, December 2, Rev. W. R. Archer chose his text from I Kings XXI. The principal topic was the two large pillars at the entrance to Solomon's temple.

"David planned in his heart a house for Jehovah, because He should have a fitting dwelling place upon earth. Did David succeed in his plans? God allowed him to go ahead with all the preparations for te building and dream about it. God has spent a great deal of omnipotent time on making the world beautiful to delight the eyes of his children. Solomon's temple is a type of a greater temple. In speaking of the great body of believers, the expression is often heard, 'He is a pillar of the church.' Real pillars in the church of God must have what kind of a life? They must have a foundation firm as the Rock of Ages; certain deeds of righteousness, devotion, and strength. A man must have strength. We must have stability. The ornamentation of the pillars were attractive with lillies of brass, which signified long suffering and forgiveness. We cannot have an attractive Christian life unless we have this lilywork ornamentation. Our lives are builded by a pattern. The beauty of life is not seen in perfection till later days. We will shine more and more to the Perfect Day and that day is at the close. The temple of Jehovah was worth such infinite pains. Are we strong, morally, to-day? Do we attract worshippers? Does our character attract"?

ROSENEATH UNITED.

Roseneath, Dec. 6 (Examiner Correspondence).—In spite of the icy roads, a goodly number attended service in the United Church on Sunday morning.

Rev. B. R. Brown delivered a most interesting sermon. Taking his text from Proverbs 4, verse 3, "For I was my Father's son, tender and only beloved in the sight of my mother."

"Which is the harder to bear, poverty or prosperity? Solomon said the destruction of the poor is their poverty. The narrowness of their lives, meagreness of their living, the inability to find good things of life, sometimes drive them into the coarser forms of indulgence, which starts them on the wrong trail. Jesus said, 'It is easier for a camel to go through an eye of a needle than for a richman to enter the Kiagdom of Heaven.' The millionaire, who strives to be a Christian in all his attitudes and actions in the secret desires that rule his own soul and in the relation he sustains to his neighbors by reason of his wealth, he has a hard task. We sometimes find the sons of millionaires falling down or flinging themselves away in thoughtless dissipation where the sons of toil are. Joseph, for example, was the son of a rich man and a favorite son, his mother, the favorite wife of Jacob, worshipped her son Joseph. Having such parents, how could Joseph help becoming vain or overbearing?

"The man who builds no castles in the air, builds nothing else. It takes imagination to be an inventor. One cannot make anything a success without it. Joseph had imagination, but he was soft enough to tell his brothers before he had done anything to indicate that those dreams might come true. Therefore, Joseph, the favorite son, tale bearer, and self-conceited, was hated by his brothers through jealousy."

Rev. Mr. Brown proceeded in the history of Joseph, comparing his life with young men of to-day, speaking strongly of the tattler who builds a character of unwholesome food. Nothing succeeds like success, but a truer truth says that nothing succeeds like failure. Everybody cheers the successful but every body loves the cheerful loser.

Religion begins at home, but it never ends there. God has created us for Himself; therefore, it is our duty to make the best of our opportunity and gain the victory in His Kingdom.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAULTAIN, December 6. — The annual meeting of the patrons and shareholders of the South Burleigh Dairy Company, was held on Friday evening, November 30, in the cheese factory at Haultain.

The directors present were B. Reid, W. T. Northey and J. Booth. William McCauley, president, acted as chairman.

The shareholders were paid a dividend of 6 per cent on the capital stock and there still remains a favorable balance on hand.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President: William McCauley.
Secretary: Mrs. M. E. Church.
Auditor: Miss Isabel Reid.
Directors: Bruce Reid, W. T. Northey, John Booth, Gordon Reid.

Mr. Rye: "That shows there is more taffic on Park Street than there is proportionate expenditure.

Service to Public.

Mr. MacFarlane: "Park Street is just as good as the average suburban road. What more do you want? It should not be a question of mileage; it is a question of service to the public."

Mr. Rye: "Your figures show Park Street to be serving the public just about as much as others."

Mr. MacFarlane: "The bulk of the Park Street traffic is local traffic—delivery rigs going down there and turning around. Park Street is one of the best roads in the system."

Deputy-Reeve aWterman: "It was the scenery you were looking at."

The good-natured discussion buzzed around Mr. Rye, whose contention was the residents of North Monaghan needed more than the Provincial Highway.

THE FEMALE VOICE CHOIR.

The passing of the Female Voice Choir, the farewell concert of which organization is to be held to-morrow evening in the Canadian Legion Hall, brings to a close the activities of this unique musical body which for eight years has had a most successful career in Peterborough.

The enthusiasm of the president, Mrs. Bugg, and the faithful interest shown in the work of the organization by the members generally have enabled the choir to set up an enviable record.

Many local causes owe a debt of gratitude to the Female Voice Choir, which has been always ready to lend its assistance and services to every worthy organization, and through the efforts of which the treasury of more than one social service unit has been replenished.

Its members have given freely of their time and talent to the choir's activities, and those who have carried on for the eight years of the choir's existence have the satisfaction of knowing that they have contributed splendidly not only to community enjoyment but to community service.

AN UNDESIRABLE RECORD.

Another record has been smashed, but this time the breaking of the record is not desirable. There have been more industrial accidents reported to date in 1928 than in the whole of 1927. In November, there were 7,021 accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board, including 51 fatalities. This is lower than the previous month of October when there were 8,278, including the same number of fatalities. The total number in eleven months of 1928 is 72,943 and the total for the year 1927 was 71,979. Benefits awarded by the board in November for industrial accidents amounted to $709,809.50, which included $105,602.75 for medical aid.

From time to time, statements are made to the effect that there are many more minor accidents reported than in former years. This seems to be borne out by the figures compiled by R. B. Morley, general manager, Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, covering the last year on which final figures are available and showing the average cost of accidents on which compensation or medical aid was awarded in Schedule 1 in the past several years. These figures are as follows:

Year.	Total Cost.	Average Cost Per Accident.
1921	$4,277,034.67	$134.09
1922	4,323,801.07	114.73
1923	4,977,331.82	107.11
1924	4,746,314.60	107.20
1925	4,438,802.13	95.77
1926	4,711,970.90	92.80

A SCHOLARSHIP IN HISTORY.

What was said by The Examiner a few days ago in regard to the proposal made at the convention of the Ontario Conservative Association, that scholarships in historical research should be established, applies with especial force to the Gundy-Doran scholarship in Canadian history, the conditions of which are now being made known to those eligible to compete.

Any movement that seeks to encourage an interest in Canadian history is entirely worthy of support, and this particular scholarship, which has come into existence as the expression of the desire of the two well-known publishers whose names the scholarship bears to promote a better knowledge of the history of this country and its great men among the rising generation, promises to be of much value toward that end.

The scholarship is to be an annual one of the value of $1,200, which may be applied to a course of study at any university in Ontario, or at any technical or agricultural college in the Province, or a commercial course in any recognized institution, or a course in fine or applied arts, or to a period of travel with a view to acquiring one or more European languages.

The competition is open to all Ontario students of either sex between the ages of 17 and 22, in attendance at the day classes of any of the secondary schools, or of the fifth form classes of the Provincial system, or of schools outside the Provincial system but doing academic work of the same grade.

The conditions are simple, and it is hoped that Peterborough students who are eligible will interest themselves in this scholarship, which is to be awarded on the result of an essay of not less than 6,000 words on "The Development of Land and Water Transportation in Canada from Champlain to the Present Time," and on a paper of six questions connected with the history of Canada, any two of which may be chosen by the candidate.

WHERE OUR MONEY GOES.

With municipal affairs coming more prominently to the fore as the annual civic elections hove in sight, some figures as to the cost of the civic government, as given by the Bureau of Municipal Affairs in its twelfth annual bulletin, should be of interest to citizens of Peterborough.

The statistics, which are for the year 1927, show that Peterborough's per capita general expenditure was $17.09, the ninth lowest in the list of 26 Ontario cities, while Toronto with $32.98 and Sault Ste. Marie with $11.32 were the highest and lowest, respectively.

For protection to person and property, which includes police and administration of justice, fire department, hydrants and street lighting, Peterborough spent in 1927 a total of $138,758.

Under the heading of health and sanitation, including drainage and garbage collection, for the same year, appears the sum of $32,534.

We spent $84,895 on highways, including under this head street watering or oiling, repairs and maintenance of bridges, roads, streets, sidewalks and suburban roads.

Under charities and hospitals, which item also includes mothers' allowances, etc., Peterborough's expenditure was $47,316, while the expenditure for the Library was $10,600.

For recreation, including parks, playgrounds, rinks, swimming, etc., the cost was $5,818, the smallest item of expenditure listed, while general administration and salaries, exclusive of those charged in other items, cost $30,784, and $17,064 was charged under miscellaneous expenditures.

It is worthy of note that in the matter of expenditure for recreation, Belleville and Chatham are the only cities in Ontario that spent less than Peterborough for this purpose.

Out of the 26 cities in the Province Peterborough is the third lowest in the amount of money devoted to recreation facilities, parks, etc., the expenditure ranging all the way from $1,602,533 in Toronto to $3,637 spent in Belleville for this object.

Peterborough's recreation expenditure in 1927 was $5,818, while Brantford devoted $29,435, Fort William $25,887, Guelph $22,771, Kitchener $22,645, Niagara Falls $22,516 and St. Catharines $18,732 for parks and athletic fields, etc.

INCOME TAX REMAINS.

(From the Toronto Globe)

Hon. James A. Robb has settled for the time being the question of elimination of the Federal income tax. He told a Vancouver audience it will be collected for a good many years to come, his statement undoubtedly being prompted by resolutions adopted in Eastern cities calling for its abolition. Moreover, he reminded the country that after 1933 there will be no tax-exempt bonds. When the 1933 maturity is redeemed it will be by an issue on which income taxes will have to be paid. At the same time the Minister of Finance stated that some further tax reductions were proposed, although he was not ready to disclose their nature.

Every one knows the Government cannot meet the war-debt interest and other unavoidable expenses without taxation, but the opinion seems to have grown in this section of the country that the income levy could be dispensed with very easily. In "the agricultural West" such a proposal is resented; the idea there is that if taxation is to be reduced it should be by lower tariff rates. In the meantime Mr. Robb needs the money, and it has to be raised in some way.

Opposition to the income tax would not be so strong if it were not a duplicated tax. The Federal Government has no sooner taken its percentage than the municipality holds out its hand, and each levies on the tax paid to the other. Besides this, the Federal Government taxes earnings of corporations twice. There is a feeling of unfairness about it all, which is shown in the reluctance of some municipalities to raise money in this way.

Mr. Robb's announcement is likely to direct attention to the question of getting the municipal income tax removed. As a matter of fact, the argument against the municipal levy is more valid than against the Federal tax. Municipal tax collectors insist it offers the only means of getting revenue from non-property-owners, but British Columbia, which has no municipal income tax, gets around this by levying a poll tax.

The Federal Government has reduced the income tax burden materially and, according to Mr. Robb's announcement, will continue to do so when possible. This is the best that is promised, and with it the country will have to be contented for the present.

VOGUE OF OLD TOYS.

Amid the unceasing change that marks the modern world to-day and that has almost swept away the sense of wonder, one large and ever renewed section of humanity remain largely uninfluenced. This is particularly observable at this season when the stores are crowded with toys and games that are so closely identified with Christmas in the childish mind. In this department of merchandise even a cursory glance is sufficient to show that the young are distinctly more old-fashioned than they become in later and more sophisticated years. A reflection of this mechanical age is provided by the toy motor cars, hoisting towers, cranes and other machinery of these days. But the toy-shop is also compelled to offer contrivances of an older date, and the fireman who ride to imaginary blazes are the counterpart of the crews that served the same purpose a generation ago.

Dolls, perhaps, are among the most rigid of types, though the provision made for their artificial existence carries the impress of modes of life to-day. Hat boxes and wardrobe trunks are offered, and certain houses look like the product of a copyist of current suburban designs. They have period furnishings and such extras as table lamps, radiators, medicine chests, vacuum cleaners, thermos bottles, smoking stands, cocktail sets and real electric ranges. There is even a swimming pool for dolls. But the core of all this complex scheme of possessions is the doll, and the toy-makers have never dared to stray far from conservative designs. They must know the strength of silent attachment to the plain rag doll.

In the department of military affairs lead soldiers are offered in British, French and American uniforms. They are no longer just foot soldiers or cavalrymen. Their artillery has been recruited up to strength, machine-gun battalions have been mustered in, the signal corps is in the field, the ambulance corps is removing the stricken. Most modern; but they are still making Indians, just as if isolated homesteaders in the wild and woolly West were in ever-present danger of getting their scalps lifted.

Music boxes (presumably supplied with the same old tunes), rocking horses, Noah's arks, A B C blocks, puzzle maps, checker boards, tomahawks, lassos, cowboy suits—what a wealth of the old in the pages of the top-shop catalogue! Children are slow to learn that the Indian is a ward of the Government, that nearly all firemen are smooth-shaven, that Darwin is a better guide to the animals than Noah, and that it is easier to tune in on the radio than it is to operate a music box. Peace to such 1928 conservatism!—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Leaving your Christmas shopping until the last moment is a losing game.

Evidently the people of St. Thomas regard a municipally-owned gas plant as a good business proposition.

The oil companies seem to be the chief boosters for a city-planning campaign that calls for a service station at every corner.

The resignation of Lieut.-Col. Ackerman from the City Council means that next year's Council will have to appoint his successor.

From the activity shown by the companies there does not seem much fear of an increased tax on gasoline affecting the sale of that product.

The Johnson Motor bylaw gives local ratepayers a chance to vote themselves a worth-while Christmas box in the form of a promising industry.

A Thought

SYLVIA'S FIRST SNOWFALL.

Last night the stars like thistledown
Went fluttering down great banks of black,
A feather moon got tangled in
The twigs behind the chimney stack:
The wind in one tremendous gust
Shattered the moon to fairy dust,
And now look through the frosted glass;
The stars lie scattered on the grass.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.—Phil. 4:6-7.

Our Father we bring home and hearts to Thee this day for the blessing which Thou hast planned for them. May there be in us nothing to hinder Thy coming, nothing to cloud the vision of Thyself, nothing to deaden the sound of Thy voice. We would open the ears and eyes within us to hear and see Thee; we would open the whole soul that Thou mayst come in. Come in, Father of us all, into our home into our hearts.

Many things we need this day. One thing, best of all, is all that we ask; we ask for Thyself, and having Thee, we have all. Bless the home with Thy presence, and the sun shall shine through the darkest clouds of the sky: bless our hearts with Thy love, and no burden shall be too heavy for us to bear for Thee.

And then, out of a home where Thou dost dwell, may we take Thee in our hearts, in our lives, to bless our brethren wherever we go. In Thy name. Amen.
Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

I FIND A FRIEND

I met a stranger down the street
And brought him home with me,
To share my fire, my ingle-seat,
My counselor to be.
And there he sits and tells me tales
Of distant lands, of fair white sails,
Of men of worth, of women fine,
And makes them seem like friends of mine.

And when the day is rather dark,
My way is rather dim,
To fields of roses, and the lark,
Then I go forth, with him.
When I grow weary of the strife,
Of all the hurried rush of life,
I turn from pain and punishment
And find both comfort and content.

Oh, it is fine to have a friend,
A friend you understand,
One who is faithful to the end,
And always close at hand,
A friend to whom the heart can turn,
And something love and something learn,
A comrade who has come to stay,
And so I bought a book today.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER L.

There was a tragic silence. Julie felt as if someone had clutched her heart with a rough hand. She wanted to cry out passionately: "How dare you! How dare you! It is no concern of yours, and I never want to see him again. I hate him for what he has done to me—I hate you both!" But with a great effort she controlled herself; she even managed to laugh.

"You have not wasted much time," she said breathlessly, and he answered gravely:

"There has been too much time wasted already. I have learned in the past few weeks, Julie, that happiness seldom comes to us more than once, and that if we send it away it is hardly ever forgiving enough to come back and give us a second chance."

She drew a deep breath; her heart was beating so fiercely that it seemed to choke her.

"You think—do you think he will come here?" she asked.

"I am sure he will come."

"Yes—yes, I suppose so." She touched his arm. "And you are the good Samaritan who will bring us together again?" she said, and he did not hear the mocking note in her voice.

"If I can be the means of making you happy it will make me happy, too," he said.

Julie turned away.

"We are talking like people on the stage!" she declared. "Go away, Lawrence—go away and leave me unless you want me to cry and cry and disgrace myself for ever."

But when he had gone she shed no tears. She went up to her room, leaving the roses he had brought lying on the table in the deserted salon. She dragged her few clothes from the drawers in the little painted chest, and hurriedly packed them; then she went downstairs and told the woman who kept the pension that she was leaving for England at once—that a friend had brought her news calling her back immediately.

The woman smiled placidly.

Ah, yes, she understood! She had seen the gentleman and the so lovely bouquet of roses.

"You can have the roses!" Julie interrupted ruthlessly. "They will only die if I take them with me."

She went back to her room and put on her hat and coat. Her only thought was to avoid seeing Giles Chittenham. She tried to believe that her love for him was dead—she forced herself to remember that twice he had forsaken her and almost broken her heart. Even now he was free at last, perhaps it was only pity that had driven him to search for her—pity because he knew how much she cared—had once cared for him.

"It's all over, that part of my life—it's finished for ever," she told herself over and over again. "I don't want him now, I don't ever want to see him! I could never forgive him or believe in him again."

She had told the landlady that she was going back to England, but at the station she took a ticket to Lausanne.

"He will never think of looking for me there," she told herself exultantly. "He will think it is the last place I should ever revisit."

Julie was right when she decided that Lausanne was the last place in which Chittenham would search for her, although at first she went about in dread lest some day she would come face to face with him, or hear his voice.

She changed her name to Langdon and took a room in a little old-fashioned chateau overlooking the lake, and when she found the time beginning to hang impossibly on her hands she advertised for pupils to whom to teach English.

For one thing she needed the money, and for another she felt that she would go mad if she could not find occupation.

The people who owned the chateau were kindliness itself and helped her in every possible way, with the result that she obtained three pupils to whose houses she went several times a week, besides a weekly class at a school.

Often she laughed to think of the change in her life.

For years she had lived quietly and happily with Bim—then for a few hectic weeks she had plunged into what she had supposed to be "life"—and that, too, had rolled away from her, and here she was, living as an obscure nobody in one room on about thirty shillings a week.

But except at intervals she was not unhappy.

"You look much better since you got something to do," so a fellow lodger told her one day, and Julie laughed and answered that she was beginning to think work was the only thing in life that did not let one down.

She tried hard to believe that she was contented and glad to be free of the past, but there were moments when it rose up before her accusingly, daring her to forget; moments when she felt that if she could not see Chittenham again she would die of her sheer longing for him, moments when she was tempted to write to him or even to go back.

"You've got no pride—you've got no pride," she told herself savagely when one evening a light on the range of mountains across the lake had awakened vivid memories in her heart. "How do you know that he wants you? How do you know that he ever really wanted you?" But true love can never be mistaken; there are excellent substitutes which for a time make one hesitate, and wonder wistfully: "Is this the real thing at last" But if there can be a single doubt it is never the real thing.

So the late summer and the autumn passed, and the cold winds came and the gray days, and the mountains were hidden in veils of mist.

Julie began to lose interest in her work. She stood for hours at the window, staring out over the cold, deserted lake, wondering what people were doing in the world from which she had so determinedly withdrawn herself.

What was Giles doing? One night she dreamed of him so vividly that she was sure he must be somewhere near her, and for two days she was afraid to go out for fear that she might meet him. Lately her thoughts of him had grown more resentful. If he loved her so much and was so anxious to find her, why had he not thought of Lausanne and sought her there?

Perhaps he was going to be married agai —perhaps to Doris Gardener.

That thought was intolerable.

"He belongs to me—he belongs to me," Julie told herself fiercely, and wondered now why she had ever run away.

"I will go back—I will go back," she thought over and over again, but she made no move to do so.

Then the snow came—white and wonderful, wrapping the town and the mountains in mantles of spotless ermine, and the hotel people began to look cheerful and to talk of Christmas, and of the many visitors who would presently run away from London fogs and dreariness, to the fun and exhilaration of the winter sports.

Julie looked on without interest when the people who kept the little chateau began to book up their rooms and clean and polish everything in anticipation.

"You will enjoy Christmas," they told her confidently. "It is a wonderful Christmas in Switzerland."

But Julie thought of the London shops with heir many lights and attractive windows, and of the people who would be hurrying to and from the big stores, and her heart failed her.

Why was she here in exile?

Why had she run away from everything she had once held dear, just because of Giles Chittenham?

There was no need to see him unless she wished—and no doubt after all this time he had forgotten about her.

She tried to deceive herself with the belief that he had, but deep down in her heart she knew the futility.

She had but to close her eyes and remember his kisses, and the grip of his arms around her, to give the lie to her own thoughts. He loved her—he would always love her.

"I will go home," she told herself, and tried to believe that it was sheer longing for England that drew her, and that the presence of Chittenham made no difference.

"He may even have gone back to America," she argued, and persuaded herself that she hoped he had.

"I will go home for Christmas," she decided, and from that moment her spirits rose, and the people in the house smiled when they saw the change in her.

"She has had good news," they told one another, and were quite sure that it was an unhappy love affair that had hitherto caused the sadness in Julie's eyes.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1928

Four adverse aspects are strong today, according to astrology, which reads in the horoscope warning for dwellers on the planet Earth.

The sway is not fortunate for those who owe money and may be most unlucky for them.

Those who would borrow money may find bankers and even friends exceedingly unresponsiv o requests for loans.

Women are subject to influences making for irritibility and discontent while this rule prevails. They should cultivate serenity and patience.

It is not an especially lucky sway for lovers who may be inclined to find fault with one another. Girls may be peculiarly exacting.

According to ancient lore this is not a fortunate day to choose new clothing or to wear it for the first time.

In the theatre actors and actresses probably will be sensitive to the direction of the stars which inclines them to exaggerate their own importance.

This is not an auspicious date for new plays or indeed for any sort of venture.

Physicians and surgeons today may face difficulties in providing for patients who must go to hospitals, for there is the prophecy that here will be inadequate space for the sick this winter.

Loss through big musical enterprises may be sustained under this planetary government. While artists are to win extraordinary success this season there may be unusual conditions affecting audiences.

Again warning is given of earthquakes in places not usually subject to eismic shocks.

The position of Uranus and Mars is read as presaging sudden riots and even revolutions in foreign countries.

Divorces, for some time quite fashionable, will become again taboo among persons who belong to the leading classes in society, astrologers predict.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of benefits and advantages through elderly persons. The year should be really prosperous.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly light-hearted and optimistic. Both boys and girls are likely to accept life joyously and to be a great comfort to all who belong to them.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BAD DOG

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

When Uncle Wiggily hopped out of his hollow stump bungalow about three weeks before Christmas the rabbit gentleman did not know what kind of an adventure he would have that day.

"The Bob Cat may chase me, or the Fuzzy Fox may try to nibble me," said Uncle Wiggily as he hopped along. "But what do I care? I've fooled those Bad Chaps before and I can play a trick on them again. Ho! Ho! I can laugh now!"

So Uncle Wiggily laughed as he hopped along, and pretty soon he came to the top of a hill and looking down he saw Baby Bunty skipping along on her way to school. The little orphan rabbit was a bit late, so she was hurrying as fast as she could.

She ran so fast as never was.

"I'll toddle along and catch up to Baby Bunty," said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "Bunty isn't exactly an adventure, but sometimes she says funny things and makes me laugh. After I see her safely in school I can scoot along by myself and have an adventure."

But just as Uncle Wiggily was catching up to Bunty all of a sudden the rabbit gentleman heard a rustling noise in the bushes in front of him and close to the little orphan rabbit girl. Then the bushes moved and out of them popped a snowball which almost hit Bunty. At the same time there was a growling, grilling and grooling sound.

"Oh! Oh!" cried Baby Bunty and she ran so fast as never was and dropped her spelling-book, and maybe some of the hard words fell out and bounced on the snow for all I know. Mind, I'm not saying for sure, but maybe.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily as he saw the snowball thrown at Bunty and heard the grilling, growling, grooling voice. "A Bad Chap!"

Uncle Wiggily looked around and found a large chunk of ice which he picked up to throw at the Bad Chap if he should come out and chase Bunty. At the same time the rabbit made ready to run away himself in case it should be both the Bob Cat and the Fox in the bushes.

But as Bunty ran safely on to school the bushes moved again and out of them came Jackie Bow Wow. The little puppy dog was wagging his tail, and, without seeing Uncle Wiggily, Jackie began o laugh.

"Ho! Ho!" he barked. "Didn't I play a good joke on Bunty! She thought I was a Bad Chap! Ho! Ho! Didn't she run!" And Jackie turned a somersault a d chased his tail he was so happy.

Uncle Wiggily said nothing, but he softly followed Jackie who was hurrying onto school, and pretty soon the rabbit gentleman caught up to the puppy dog. Without saying anything about what he had seen when Jackie threw a scary snowball at Bunty, Mr. Longears called:

"Hello, Jackie!"

"Oh, hello, Uncle Wiggily!" barked Jackie. "Are you coming to school with me? I wish you would. Then you could tell a story in class and we wouldn't have to study so much. Are you?"

"Oh, I don't know, Jackie," said Uncle Wiggily, thoughtful like. "I came out this morning to find an adventure and—dear me! That may be one now, just behind those trees," and Mr. Longears looked toward a clump of pines and pretended to see something.

I say Uncle Wiggily pretended, for that's just what he did. He wanted to teach that bad little puppy dog a lesson out of school.

"Yes, there he is!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Hello, old dear!" he called, waving his paw. "You're around early this year, aren't you?"

"Why—why!" gasped Jackie. "I don't see anyb dy under those trees, Uncle Wiggily."

"D n't you?" asked Mr. Longears, still pretending. "Don't you see anybody who always comes around Christmas time with bags of presents and candy and nuts and carrots and——"

"You don't mean to tell me you saw Santa Claus over there; do you?" cried Jackie. "Oh, Uncle Wiggily! I'm so sorry!"

"Sorry because maybe I saw Santa Claus? Is that it?" asked the bunny.

"No," whined Jackie, "but I'm sorry because I threw a snowball at Bunty and scared her and maybe Santa Claus saw me and—and—oh, dear!"

"Are you only sorry because maybe Santa Claus saw you?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

Jackie thought for a moment and then said: "No, I'm sorry because I shouldn't have teased Bunty. I'll tell her I'm sorry I was bad."

"Good boy!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Run along to school now and if I see Santa Claus I'll tell him you didn't mean to throw a snowball at Bunty. And here's a piece of bone candy for you to eat at recess!"

Jackie gave a joyful bark, ran along to school and at recess he helped Bunty make a snow-house and told her he would never scare her again. So everything was all right. And if the bread and milk will let the goldfish jump in the bowl with it to have a swim, I'll tell you soon about Uncle Wiggily and the tricky wind.

Why We Do What We Do.

THIS IS A BELIEVING WORLD

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

"Jump, jump, Daddy will catch you," said the sophisticated business man to his little boy. The little fellow jumped, expecting his fond daddy to catch him. Instead the father deliberately stepped aside and allowed the little fellow to fall. The trusting boy sobbed out in the midst of his pain and disappointment, "Daddy, why didn't you catch me?" "My son," said the father, "this is your first lesson in business—never trust anyone, not even your daddy."

This is a "believing world." We are born believing and trustful. The love and care and faithfulness bestowed upon us in infancy build up respect and confidence in our parents, who represent all adults. It is the most natural thing to trust others as we trust our parents. This will continue until we are deliberately taught to distrust our fellows or have come through a series of disillusionments to change our minds regarding the honesty of the people we meet.

But even then the majority of people retain a sort of confidence in humanity, —a discriminating sort. Experience teaches us that while some are not to be trusted there are a great many that are honest; and for the sake of those we know to be honest we maintain our faith in humanity at large. We look upon the untrustworthy as the exception rather than the rule.

We trust our fellows also because it is easier and more pleasant. The measure of our confidence in others is determined to some extent by our own integrity and self respect.

Despite numerous disappointments we keep on trusting our fellows because it is essential to our economic well-being as well as to our peace of mind. Not a few deliberately determine to take chances because in their estimation it is better to trust human nature and to be deceived and sustain losses on occasion than to go through life distrustful and suspicious of everyone. One owes it to himself to maintain his attitude of trust in others. It pays in the long run.

We trust because we are optimistic of human nature, because we see its strength and weakness exemplified in our own lives, and because we find it essential to our prosperity and mental health.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, envelope for reply. (Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Liverpool Quotations Strengthen Wheat Values

CHICAGO, Dec. 6 (Canadian Press).—Influenced by the relative firmness of Liverpool quotations, wheat values here averaged a little higher early to-day with corn and oats likewise tending upward. Unofficial estimates issued to-day on condition and acreage of domestic winter wheat proved to be about as expected. Opening at ¼ off to ⅝ up, Chicago wheat sagged somewhat and then hardened again. Corn started unchanged to ¼ higher and subsequently showed some gain all around.

McINTYRE

It is believed that net profits of McIntyre this year will be close to $2,000,000. Since the current dividend rate requires less than $800,000, it will be seen that the present rate of $1 could be doubled and still leave a good surplus for treasury account.

GEM LAKE

According to an official progress report issued by the president, most work during the past year has been confined to surface exploration and the sinking of a shaft to a depth of 275 feet. Two veins were explored on the surface and intensively sampled, showing commercial ore over more than average width. Crosscutting is in progress on the 125 and 250 to intersect these zones.

ABANA

It is rumored here that an independent engineer who recently made an examination of this property for large interests has issued a report showing only a small ore reserve in comparison with the $30,000,000 estimate of the management some time ago. The sharp decline in price during the past two days may have been caused by this.

MALARTIC

We are informed from Amos that the Quebec Minister of Mines advised a representative of Amos shareholders that a valuation of Malartic was difficult. We believe the Deputy Minister is now making an examination of the property. We also understand that mining development work has been discontinued for a drilling campaign.

Shaft sinking was started last Sunday at the Pellitier Lake property of the Stadacona Rouyn Mines. The objective is set at 500 feet. It is expected that it will take some four months to complete this work as lateral work will be carried out at intermediate levels, as they are established, in addition to sinking. The treasury is understood to be amply financed. It was on these blocks that some sensational assays were received in diamond drilling during the past summer.

Drifting on the 1,600-foot level of the Lake Shore is being continued to the west with excellent results, according to a report from the north. From present indications, it is reported they will have a length of 400 feet and a width of 50 feet at this horizon. On the same vein at the 1,000-foot level the width is being maintained at around 30 feet. The good results being obtained by the Teck Hughes in their south ore body opens up possibilities for the Lake Shore in the ground to the south, which has hardly been explored as yet.

It is understood that a further extensive drilling campaign will shortly be started on the Caribou Copper Mines in Bourlamaque Township, Quebec. Previous drilling yielded favorable indications as well as putting the company in possession of useful geological information. Surface work has also uncovered several veins.

A new company known as the Smith-Cobalt Mines, Limited, has been formed for the purpose of developing the Smith property at Cross Lake. The property is located to the east of and adjoining the O'Brien Mines and was formerly under option to the Mining Corporation of Canada. This company carried work to a depth of 410 feet, on the western section of the property, but due to difficulties encountered in the form of water, and the failure to discover ore, the option was dropped. Good showings are said to be in evidence on the eastern section, however, and it is in this direction the Smith-Cobalt intend carrying operations. A second group on which two veins have been uncovered is located in Block 15, Gillies Limited. The company is capitalized at 4,000,000 shares; 1 800,000 of which were issued for the property. Some 2,200,000 shares are still in the treasury. It is expected that work will commence soon.

Reports new CUT for Fin. P.

John S. Rogers, above, has come back from an exploration trip along the north-western shores of Hudson's Bay and reports the finding of free gold there.

A wire from the Columario Gold Mines, operating in British Columbia, states that the No. 4 tunnel, which is now in some 350 feet from the portal, entered a vein showing 18 inches of practically solid sulphides. This is said to run very high in value. While operating in British Columbia, this company is controlled in Toronto and the bulk of shareholders are in the east. It is expected that a concentrator will be erected at the property in the spring.

The Gainley-McLeod Syndicate, composed chiefly of Sudbury men, financed by Toronto capital, has completed an exploratory drilling campaign on their property at Ess Creek, in Davis Township, about 25 miles east of Sudbury. The claims are old ones, having been staked several years ago, and some showings were found. To date the results of the diamond drilling have not been divulged.

Mention was made a few weeks ago regarding a proposed issue of the Canadian Asbestos Company. The present management expect to make this issue early in January.

Canadan Asbestos Company was incorporated in 1897; original capital was $30,000, of which $7,500 was paid in. Subsequently $22,500 was taken from profits to make the capital $60,000, and in 1913 a further $60,000 was taken from profits, bring the paid up capital to $120,000.

In addtion to the $102,500 heretofore mentioned, taken from profits and added to capital, there has been paid in cash dividends since incorporation $99,260, showing a dividend record of 10 per cent. per year for every year the company has been in existence, and an additional 10 per cent. per year in the shape of increased capitalization, making a return of over 20 per cent. per annum for nearly thirty years on the original authorized capital, and approximately 100 per cent. per annum since incorporation on the original amount paid in.

It is declared that the company's volume of purchase are sufficiently large so that the cash discount which can be earned will alone suffice to pay the entire preferred dividend requirements of the new issue. Sales for the last three months, it is understood, were far ahead of the total sales for the year 1926.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

FURTHER CHANGES MAY COME IN WRIGHT-HARGREAVES BOARD.

It is understood that interesting developments in connection with the affairs of Wright-Hargreaves Mines are impending. An important step was taken nearly a year ago when Canadian directors replaced two former directors on the board, and it is possible that further changes in the board will be brought about.

The management which up to a year ago directed the affairs of the company were subject to a good deal of adverse criticism. The shares have been split and dividends thereby doubled before deep development was undertaken. The workings ran into a lean broken section between 1200 and 1750 feet depths, profits were reduced materially and dividends had to be cut in half. At the same time mill tonnage had to be maintained with the result that net ore reserves were reduced matrially. Had directors proved the mine depth first, there would have been no serious disappointments and loss for shareholders.

The fresh interests elected to the board about a year ago were beneficial to the shareholders' interests, but a further move in tne same direction would be regarded as constructive. Canadian interests are said to be in control, as far as the stock is concerned, but complete control of administration is regarded in some quarters as advisable.

Very heavy liquidation in Wright-Hargreaves shares has been under way all year. How much of this selling has been from those men who may not continue on the board for long is not known.

Any change that may be made will come at a time when the mine is recovering from an adverse phase of development. Wright-Hargreaves has two main ore zones, known as the Northern and Southern vein systems. The North vein passed through the lean, broken zone, and has been in normal conditions again, with value normal conditions again, with values The improvement occurred at the 1750 foot level. The South workings are still in the broken formation but indications are that normal conditions will be found again at about 2200 feet. The South shaft has reached a depth of over 2100 feet.

As a result of the improvement in the North vein below 1750 feet, millheads were reportd some time ago to have been stepped up to between $9 and $10, and if expectations are fulfilled with regard to the South vein at below 2200 feet, a further improvement to between $11 and $12 per ton is looked for, and Wright-Hargreaves would then resume its normal course of prosperity.

Notes from the Sudbury Basin Meeting

Shareholders of Sudbury Basin Mines were informed at the special general meeting yesterday that it was the purpose of the management to do considerable diamond drilling from the ice this winter. This would obviate a lot of dead work in attempting to probe for ore from the shores of the lake.

It was forecasted that when the drilling campaign was completed, a subsidiary company would be formed to take over and operate the Vermillion Lake property and that a refining plant would be rushed to completion as quickly as possible.

The Sudbury Nickel and Copper Co., a subsidiary of Sudbury Basin Mines was capitalized at 5,000,000 shares, of which 1,275,000 shares were held by Sudbury Basin Mines and 1,740,000 shares paid out to vendors. Two drills were operating at properties of this company at the present time, and favorable results have been encountered.

Sudbury Nickel and Copper Co. has secured selected properties along the nickel contact zone, comprising 3,600 acres, all paid for. There is a length of seven miles along the contact, all favorably located.

The management of Sudbury Basin Mines have in mind later on the development of the company into an investment mining company. When some of the present development plans bear fruit, the company promises to become one of the most important holding companies in the country, according to forecasts made.

Sudbury Basin Mines holds an interest in many companies besides the Vermillion Lake and Sudbury Nickel and Copper. These include the Oxford Lake, Manitoba Copper, a share interest in the Manitoba Basin Mines and a new property of promise, although still a prospect, in Western Canada.

The company's interest in the Oxford Lake property is 40 per cent, while that in the Manitoba Copper Co. is 40 per cent.

Sudbury Basin Mines is capitalized at 2,000,000 shares of which 1,365,505 shares are issued and 30,000 allotted. Thus a total of 604,495 shares are available for financing purposes. The company has cash in bank amounting to $57,214 and treasury notes amounting to $1,400,000.

Among Sudbury Basin's investments are: 219,712 shares in Sherritt-Gordon, 10,000 shares of Bathurst Mines, 1,170 shares in T. A. Bathurst Mines, 148,400 shares in Malartic Mines, and 66,667 shares in Manitoba Basin Mines. All these combined cost the company $315,406 whereas they have a present market valuation of $1,790,053, representing a book profit of no less than $1,353,647.

Shareholders were informed that there were no restrictions on the 300,000 shares of Sudbury Basin stock being given to Venturers Limited in part payment for shares of Falconbridge Mines being purchased by Sudbury Basin.

Sudbury Basin Mines, in making purchase of 1,250,000 shares of Falconbridge Mines was securing a 43 per cent interest. Presumably, this percentage will be maintained, as Sudbury Basin would naturally share pro-rata in any further issue of stock.

YOUNG MEN FORM COMPANY

Small Business Is Formed To Publish and Market Music Compositions.

FORTY READY FOR PRESS.

An interesting new organization which is distinctly local in character is the Tri-Union Music Publishing Company, located at 190 Charlotte street, conducted by a trio of local young men who have formed a small business to publish and market their own compositions in the musical line.

Stanley Wheeler, president of the company, is the trombone player at the Regent Theatre; Delbert Lucas, the treasurer, is a member of All Saints' Choir in the baritone section, and Homer Lundy, the secretary-manager, is the lyric writer of the group, who have in hand at the present time, awaiting publication, over forty of their own compositions.

The aim of the trio is to furnish the public with the music of a "sweet tempo" for which there is a demand just now. Popular favor, it appears, is swinging away from the fast jazzy music which has been the mode for so long and the "slow blue" type is also falling into the discard. The compositions of this trio are a cross between the sentimental and the comedy fox trot.

Their fox trot song, "Unforgettble," able,'" will be presented by Delbert Lucas at the Regent Theatre next week, and at the Capitol Theatre during the week following.

Today and tomorrow, Delbert Lucas and Homer Lundy will be in Campbellford, where they are introducing this number at the Regent Theatre, with Mr. Lucas as soloist and Mr. Lundy as the comedian of the act.

Six songs composed by this trio have been accepted for publication by the Carlton Music Company of London, England, and a concerto written for trombone and orchestra is being published by the Waterloo Music Company of Waterloo, Ontario.

LADIES HAVE GOOD YEAR

Ninety-six Attend the December Meeting of George Street Society.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The December meeting of the Ladies' Aid of George Street United Church was held in the board room of the Sunday School Hall Tuesday afternoon, with a record attendance of ninty-six.

The president, Mrs. C. E. Smith, occupied the chair, and the meeting opened with the singing of the National Anthem. After a few moments of silent prayer, Mrs. E. E. Harvey led in prayer for the safe recovery of the King.

Mrs. Harvey had charge of the devotional period. Mrs. F. Mather read the Bible lesson and Mrs. J. E. Todd led in prayer.

The secretary, Mrs. G. Staples, and the treasurer, Mrs. S. Oke, gave splendid reports which were received and adopted.

The corresponding secretary, Miss Mary Elliott read a number of letters of thanks for flowers received and sympathy extended. Miss Morrow reported for the flower committee.

Mrs. J. Stubbs gave a wonderful report of the sick and visiting committee, they having made seventy-five calls on the sick, shut-ins and strangers during the past month.

Miss Higgins, convenor of the look-out committee, reported sixteen new members, and Mrs. B. Shortly reported for the cupboard committee.

Very gratifying reports were given by the convenors of each booth for the recent festival of the month.

Mrs. H. Foot was general convenor for the festival, and she thanked all who had so ably assisted her. Miss Mary Elliott, who acted as secretary, gave a very clear and comprehensive report of the festival committee's activities since last January, and Mrs. H. M. Yelland, the treasurer, reported that they had cleared over $1,300.00, above all expenses. This report was received with great applause, after which Mrs. J. Stubbs led in a prayer of thanksgiving for the success of the work.

$1,000 to Building Fund.

A resolution was passed that a cheque for $1,000 be sent to the Board of stewards of the church, to be applied on the building fund. It was also resolved that the Ladies' Aid serve supper at the father and son banquet of the Sunday School to be held some time in January, 1929.

The baskets of Christmas cheer and flowers to the aged and shutins of the church will be sent out this year according to the usual custom.

Officers Elected.

Rev. J. E. Todd then took the chair for the annual election of officers, after which Mrs. Stubbs gave the report of the nominating committee:

President—Mrs. C. E. Smith (acclamation); Past President—Mrs. B. Shortly (acclamation); 1st Vice-President—Mrs. P. Hetherington (acclamation); 2nd Vice-President—Mrs. H. Foot; Recording Secretary—Mrs. G. Staples (acclamation); Corresponding Secretary—Miss Mary Elliott (acclamation); Treasurer—Mrs. S. Oke (acclamation).

The members of the standing committees will be appointed at the first meeting in the New Year.

The elected officers then took their respective places, and the president Mrs. Smith, thanked the members for their appreciation of her work during the past year, hoping with their assistance to have an even better year next year.

A short program followed, consisting of a splendid talk by Miss Mayme Montgomery, entitled "Impressions of Paris." Miss Mae Jory sang a solo, accompanied by Miss Gwen Donley, which was much appreciated.

The meeting was concluded by repeating the Mispah Benediction in unison.

LIQUOR FLOWS ACROSS BORDER

Runners Scoff at Reports Rum Flood Has Been Stemmed.

DETROIT, December 6. — With Christmas less than twenty days away the rum-running fraternity sprang into renewed activity yesterday, with the result that half a dozen or more boatloads of Canadian "holiday cheer" were brought across the river in broad daylight and landed successfully at various points along the Detroit river front, most of them however in the vicinity of Ecorse. "Luggers," large craft, built especially for the liquor trade, were used, enabling the transportation of large cargoes on each trip.

Little of the liquor is being introduced into the regular trade, it being for the most part stored in warehouses to await the high prices that the holiday season is expected to bring.

Await Darkness.

Yesterday for a time, when it became known that additional Customs Patrol Inspectors had been arrested, the runners 'lay low' for a few hours, sending across only occasional well-guarded boats. Along towards dusk, however, residents along the river front noticed several boats leave the Canadian side and hover in mid-stream apparently waiting darkness. Only persons well known to the runners were allowed to approach the river bank while operations were going on, as a reporter and photographer learned when they attempted to investigate the situation.

Looking through glasses at the Queen's Dock in Sandwich, a loaded boat was seen ready to make the run across, although a patrol boat of the Customs Patrol was near by. A second later a man ran on the dock and signalled the boat, which returned. It was loaded up with cases of whiskey, so that they were piled above the gunwales in both ends.

Decoy Used.

A little farther up the river another speed boat was noticed filling bags, such as whisky is ordinarily carried in, with coal. A bystander volunteered the information that it was to act as a decoy and draw off the patrol boat.

"The newspapers are sure making it easy for the racket boys," one man remarked. "The prices will be high, now everybody is sold on the idea that no stuff is coming across. Just as much as ever is on the go and you can take it from me. It's being planted, that's all. They'll flood the market with it at the last minute when everybody believes it is scarc and hard to get at any price."

AFRAID SHE WOULD NEVER BE WELL

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Completely Relieved Dyspepsia.

Mrs. Omer Monette had tried so many remedies in her efforts to get rid of serious Stomach Troubles that she was almost afraid to try "Fruit-a-tives," fearing that this famous medicine would not help her. But, as she writes from Montreal, "I finally decided to do so. The first few tablets helped me and after taking three boxes I noticed a great change for the better. Now, I enjoy and digest everything I eat, and am happy to recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all my friends."

"Fruit-atives" is a combination of concentrated and transformed fruit juices and the most scientific medicinal ingredients. It acts directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys and skin; and brings these vital organs back to normal, healthy action.

If your stomach bothers you, try "Fruit-a-tives." 25c. and 50c. a box. —at dealers everywhere.

NINETY PER CENT OF IMMIGRANTS HAVE MADE GOOD IN DISTRICT

Every Boy Has Been Under Careful Supervision, Declares C. A. Gillespie.

SATISFACTORY REPORTS.

Plenty of Room in Canada, Says H. Robertson, But Must Stay On Farm.

What light can Peterborough farming authorities throw on the Dominion immigration problem which has been attracting so much attention in the public press and political circles during recent months? In other words, have the immigrants placed on farms around Peterborough, during the past year, been making good, or have they been drifting into Peterborough to compete with the city men for city work? The three best authorities on this subject are G. A. Gillespie, who, in conjunction with the C. P. R., was instrumental in having them placed on the different farms around Peterborough; Hugh Robertson, manager of the local branch of the Employment Service of Canada, who is in constant touch with the farm labor problem, and the farmers themselves who employ the men. In an interview with The Examiner, Mr. Gillespie stated that last spring about 200 men were brought out and placed on farms mainly in the Peterborough district, but extending from Bobcaygeon to Frankford. Mr. Gillespie estimated that around 90% of these men have made good. The other 10% are naturally wanderers or are not cut out for the work. A close tab is kept on the men. Every boy is under careful supervision, while the conduct of the men is reported at intervals, and when they leave their place of employment. Some of the men, when they leave the farms, come in for another job, but a few go away leaving no idea as to their destination. Mr. Gillespie said that the farmers reported them to be quite satisfactory and that many of them were progressing rapidly in learning the farm conditions.

Mr. Hugh Robertson, of the Employment Service of Canada, could not state definitely any facts, but he judged that well over 50% were making good. Lately, however, many of the men have been discharged from the farms because of lack of work at this time of year. Others, who did not like the work, have left the farms for the city. The farmers appear to be satisfied with the men, although some had no use for them. Mr. Robertson stated that there is plenty of room in Canada for these people, but they have to be of a class who will stay on the land and who are willing to work. There is, however, quite a diversity of opinion about this question.

Making Good.

Many of the prominent local farmers, when approached, said that the majority of the immigrants were making good.

Arthur Fitzgerald, of Smith Township, said that he knew of one who was a very fine fellow and who was certainly making good.

Stewart Brown, of Douro Township, stated that he only knew of a few cases and they have proved quite satisfactory. He knew of one case in particular where the man was very anxious to learn and intended to start up a farm of his own in time.

When asked by The Examiner, Gordon Mann, of Pine Crest Farm, Smith Township, said that the cases he knew of were proving to be all right. Over half of them were making good. They seemed to like the work and the farmers appeared satisfied with them.

Mr. Howard Quinn, of Smith Township, informed The Examiner that once the men get started at the work they get along all right. The farmers appear fairly satisfied with them, but it is a complete change of work for the immigrants, as the Canadian system of farming is much different from the English system. He judged that over 50% were making good.

HELEN STAPLES HEADS SOCIETY

Springville-Fairmount Literary Circle Organized For Winter Season.

SPRINGVILLE, December . The Springville-Fairmount Literary met on Friday evening with a good attendance.

The election of officers took place, resulting as follows:

CAR SLIPS INTO DITCH ON HILL

Driver Had Gotten Out To Secure Rail to Block Wheel.

PROPERTY PURCHASED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Dec. 6.—What might have resulted in a serious accident, occurred on Saturday evening, when Everett Fairman attempted to ascend English's Hill from the west. When well up on the hill, Mr. Fairman's auto began to skid, and then to slide back and in order to be safe, he set the brakes and left the car for a moment, to secure a rail with which to block the wheels until a fresh start could be made. The engine was left running and apparently the vibration caused the auto to continue to slide, and to gain speed on the steep incline. Before it was noticed, the auto was beyond reach of the owner. On reaching the bottom of the hill it is said that the auto gained a speed of about thirty miles an hour, but there it came to rest on its side in a very deep ditch, from whence it required twelve men with block and tackle to put it on the road again. The only damage done to the auto was a bent bumper.

Three Years' Birth Control Ordered By Judge When Parents Of Three Apply For Divorce

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 6.—A decision unique in annals of American courts was given here yesterday by Judge Harrison W. Ewing, who imposed a stipulation of three years of birth control on Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kourim when the couple applied for a divorce.

"I shall not allow you to impose more children upon yourself or upon society," Judge Ewing told the couple. "I therefore, refuse divorce and impose upon you three years of birth control."

The couple have three children.

"Three children in three years should not be allowed," the judge added.

The husband's salary is $24 weekly.

The Kourims eloped and were married November 6, 1925. Kourim then was 22, his wife 17.

"The most difficult problem that can be presented to a court," the judge said, "is that in which there are children involved. They are the most important principals in the case.

"When this couple ran away at their age, it was a gay adventure. Both were ignorant of matrimonial problems and child care.

"When the first child was one year old some court should have given them a lesson in birth control at that time. It was a shame they were not given lessons.

'It was evident that the woman could not raise more than one child successfully. The couple needed two lessons—a high school and a medical course on how to get along with a small family while the husband still was earning a small salary."

INDIAN STUDENTS IN LONDON SCHOOLS

Future of India May Depend Largely on Young Indians in London.

LONDON, England, Dec. 6 (By the Canadian Press).—Over London, and particularly in Bloomsbury, there are thousands of young men with whom lies, to a great degree, the future India and the East. They are students from India, Japan, and China and Africa. An idea of their numbers may be gained from the fact that there are more than 2,000 students who are studying law at the Inns of Court, and that, roughly, half of these are from India and the East. There are more Indians than there ever have been before.

"I found several cheap boarding houses in Bloomsbury," writes a correspondent of the Daily News and Westminster Gazette, "where there were no other lodgers than Indian students. There are also the many Indian students' hostels. Many take the advice of their Government and try to find accommodation with English families. 'They have their own clubs, churches and branches of their home political organizations. I was told that some time ago several of their secret meetings were raided by special officers from Scotland Yard. But these organizations have either broken up or are no longer worth bothering about.

Six African Negroes.

"Perhaps the most remarkable, and those most significant of change, of all these foreign students are those from the Gold Coast. Among the London law students there are at least six African negroes. Several of them are brilliant students. Several others are scarcely average. But it is said of these black men that they are the best loved of all the colored students. Not one of them has been reported to have gone away and left a debt unpaid. Nothing is a bother to them.

"One of the most interesting features of this Indian student London is that there are at least six Indian girls at present studying law. This, as a change in the outlook of Indian women, is revolutionary. Other girls are studying medicine and science and agriculture."

COUNCIL GIVEN BILL OF $311.46

E. A. Peck, County Solicitor, Presents First Account Since 1917.

BRIDGE DISPUTE.

E. A. Peck, county solicitor, presented to the County Council yesterday his first bill of costs since January 10, 1917. The amount was for $311.46, the largest item of which had been incurred in a protracted dispute with Victoria county in regard to Peterborough's share of the liability for the maintenance of the Kinmount bridge.

Victoria carried their claim to the Private Bills committee of the Legislature and from there it went to the Municipal Railway Commission. Finally, however, the bridge was made a county bridge and Peterborough pays half the cost of its upkeep. The other items of the account were for registry fees and other law work.

MR. BLIN GIVES IN

(By Jeanette.)

Mr. Blin stirred the porridge. It was with a large, smooth, reflective sweep that he circled the dish. Little air bubbles of moisture rose in the heat of its middle and followed the passage of the big pewter spoon.

Making porridge for the seven little Blins was a morning task that called forth most of the resources of patience that Mr. Blin possessed. The materal had a habit of sticking to the pot if it became heavy and if Mr. Blin added water, the children complained that the resulting mixture was too much like gruel.

But Mr. Blin never quailed. He had said to Mrs. Blin, on the memorable day when that lady, spouse of his bosom and mother of the seven little Blins, had departed from his roof to spend some time, length unspecified, with her parents on that mornng, when, in effect, the ties of fifteen years of matrimonial bliss had been stretched to the breaking point, and when, as Mr. Blin had taken occasion to point out to his perambulating wife, she had seen fit to "trample beneath her feet the highest sentiments of human nature," for Mr. Blin had a habit of becoming very rhetorical and dramatic when aroused, yes, it was on that occasion, as we have remarked, that Mr. Blin said to Mrs. Blin:

"You may desert me. You may forsake the very beings you have brought into the world and go forth like the Prodigal Son to seek pleasure in dissipation, but I will triumph at last. I will be brave and patient."

Mrs. Blin had cried. She had formed the practice of crying at most little difference of poinion that arose between her and Mr. Blin. Her eyes had a red, moist look that irritated her husband immensely. He had spoken to her about it.

"Dickens made his beadle, Mr. Bumble, say that crying improved a woman's eyes, but I can't see where it does you much good," he remarked, kindly, Mr. Blin was always kind. As he had explained on many occasions, he felt in duty bound to point out any defects in human nature that came his way, and if other people didn't like it, could he be blamed?

So Mrs. Blin had gone to the home that had been hers before Mr. Blin appeared on the horizon and whisked her off, metaphorically speaking, on his chariot. That was the way he had described the process to her. Angelina Brown, for that was Mrs. Blin's maiden name, had dimpled over the prospect, and the navigation of the fifty miles that lay between her home and Mr. Blin's abode was made, the most of it, in an antiquated automobile, for a portion had been spent in resting at wayside stations while Mr. Blin crawled around under the car that had been popular before "Henry made a lady out of Lizzie." Yes, Angelina, as we remarked, had dimpled, because she possessed dimples in those days. She was not quite so conversant then, as later, with Roderick Blin's passion for verisimilitude.

"The truth is mighty and must prevail," was his favorite quotation, and when the first little Blin had arrived, a squirmy, red morsel who kicked furiously and squealed tremendously, at the prospect of spending the next three-score years and ten in company with other sinners in this vale of tears, he had been named Truth. The nurse, who came by the day and wasn't above putting her hand in dishwater, if necessary, or even coddling an egg for Mr. Blin, until the morning when he asked her gently if she thought he had a fondnes for India rubber and she had departed forthwith with a flounce of her skirts and a stifled speech that sounded something like "a coddled egg for a mollycoddle of a man," anyway, the nurse, as we remarked, had raised her eyebrows over the name.

"The last one I brought into the world was christened Washington Augustus, and I thought it was bad enough," she had confided to her friend, a nurse who had a sciatica patient over on the next farm," but imagine a child with a handle like Truth Blin."

The first four little Blins had been named according to the fancy of Mr. Blin, and he christened them variously, one after an Old Testament favorite of his, Methusaleh. He was fond of quoting little random verses to his children and a small one he had seen in a magazine pleased him immensely: "Methusaleh ate what he found on his plate, and never as people do now. He cared not to reckon the caloric count, but ate it because it was chow."

So the first child was Truth, the second Methusaleh, the third Arrow, because at that time Mr. Blin was enraptured by the pictures of Arrow men that he saw in illustrations, and he fancied that the naming of his child in this way might influence the little snub-nosed infant to become a manly replica of the wide-browed Adonis. The fourth, a little girl, was called Asphodel. Mr. Blin had been reading something in a book about "God's great garden of Asphodel," and he said to his wife that it seemed like an answer to prayer when he turned to this sentence just about the time when he was wondering what to christen the latest little Blin.

But Mrs. Blin, nee Angelina Brown, had put her foot down. "I put my foot down with a firm hand,"she said in Irish fashion to her mother, relating the circumstance later. "I said to Roderick: "the time has come to call a halt. Hereafter I will christen my children.'" And she did. Whether Mr. Blin's imagination failed him or whether he realized the force of a woman aroused in defence of the happiness and peace of mind o fher offspring, destined to go to their graves hampered by the cognomens bestowed upon them by an erratic parent, just why as we have said before, will never be known, but the little girls who formed latest additions to the Blin memage were named Mary and Catherine and Jane. Mr. Blin was wont, at moments, to gaze sorrowfully at these later children and reflect on the high-sounding names that might have been theirs, but he contented himself with sundry small allusions made to Mrs. Blin regarding the foolishness of giving common names to little girls.

Some of these thoughts, and others like them, were passing through Mr. Blin's mind as he stirred the porridge on that memorable Christmas morning. For it was the 25th of December.

The little Blins expected Santa Claus the night before. They had been talking about it quite audibly. On other Christmas Eves, Mrs. Blin had contrived an excellent disguise out of sundry pieces of red flannel and some cotton batting, liberally dusted with powdered borax. She had made long white whiskers out of bits of wool and she and the children had rollicked frantically in the one big room of the farmhouse, while Mr. Blin, in his bedroom, essayed irritably to read some of the volumes with which, at the moment, he was bettering his mental condition. Mr. Blin's father had been a great bookworm and he had transmitted some of his love for learning to his son, Roderick. The latter liked to shine in company. He loved to drift down to the store at the crossings, in the summer evenings, and argue religion with the men who sat on the pickle barrels and chewed tobacco, the while they spoke of the merits of modernism as opposed to more orthodox beliefs. Mr. Blin had become infatuated with a comparison of the religious teachings of Mahomet Gandhi, Buddha, and Confucius, and he wished to study them profoundly and be able to speak weightily on the matter to his cronies.

It must be said for Mr. Blin that, while he farmed only enough to keep himself and his family in meager supplies, he did not waste his time in gadding about the country and in pleasure seeking. His defect lay in his desire to "show off," and for this, he would endure much. But he required an audience. Angelina had supplied him with an audience. Now she was gone. Life had become an aching void.

Methusaleh stuck his head in the door. "Isn't breakfast ready yet, Daddy?" he asked.

"Call the rest of them," answered his father, shortly. Lifting a corner of the dirty apron that encircled his waist, he grasped the handle of the big pot containing the porridge. The handle was hot. Just as he took the vessel from the stove, the heat penetrated to Mr. Blin's cuticle. He dropped the pot and a lot of the heated porridge flowed down over his leg. Shoving the dish hastily back on the stove, Mr. Blin danced around on one foot. Ever mindful of the impression transferred to youthful minds, he quelled the lava-like torrent of profanity that rose to his lips and substituted a song instead. The only words that came to mind were the stanzas of the old Christmas carol, "Good King Wenceslas."

"Good King Wenceslas—gosh a'mighty," breathed the injured Mr. Blin. "Good King Wenceslas looked out. On the feast of Stephen—my land, can't some of you children get me a bit of soda? Of all the gosh awful idiots! Hallelujah? I'm a bum"—the words of the latest jazz medley fitted his mood better and he murmured them over and over as he wound a bandage around his leg.

"Daddy, I know a verse about the Prodigal Son," Mary informed him, as, the bandage adjusted and Mr. Blin transferred squirmingly to the large chair at the head of the table, the family ate its breakfast.

Mr. Blin looked at his second eldest daughter in some uncertainty. Despite her careful name, Mary was a handful.

"Well, let's hear it," he said grudgingly.

"The first part is called 'His Badness,'" she carolled gleefully. "And it goes like this: 'He went on a bash. He spent the cash. He cut a dash.' And the second part is 'His Sadness': 'He went to the dogs. He fed with the hogs. He homeward jogs.' The third part is 'His Gladness': 'He ate the veal. He danced the reel. He got the seal.'"

"Where did you learn that?" asked her father, sternly.

"Another little girl in school had it written down in her scrapbook, and she had another one about Job. Do you know why he couldn't sleep well at night?" she queried, cocking an impudent eye at her father,

Mr. Blin faltered. His curiosity overcame him. He shook his head.

"Because he had such poor comforters," she crowed triumphantly.

"Silence," shouted her father, rising wrathfully from his chair and then sinking back with a groan as a twinge of pain shot through the burned leg. "Shall a child of mine profane Holy Writ in my own house and I remain silent?" he demanded of the shrinking little group.

Rising painfully, he strode in as dignified fashion as was possible under the circumstances, out to the barn, where he milked the red cow, Florence. It was more difficult than usual to keep his mind free from distracting thoughts and presently he rose to gaze out of the barn window at the bright sun sparkling on the snow. The beauty of the scene distracted his thoughts from the worries of his home and gradually his glance softened.

"How beautiful are thy pastures, O Israel," he murmured, under his breath, and turned, relieved in mind, to resume his milking. But Florence, untouched by poetic ardor, had departed from her place, and in so doing, had knocked over the milk pail. Words of wrath rose to Mr. Blin's lips as he limped over to the second animal, Olive, and adjusted the milking stool viciously in place.

The day progressed. As the facetious movie title puts it: "One hour folowed another, just as they have been doing all along." Mr. Blin suffered. He had never realized how much truth there was in that saying: "Woman's place is in the home," until the particular woman who had made a home for him had departed from it, length of absence unannounced.

For dinner they had potatoes and carrots. The former were boiled in their jackets and the latter were unadorned specimens of hunk-like, rough-faced, reddish roots. A milk sauce that Mr. Blin essayed to make turned out to be a trickly substance that flowed nastily about the gobs of half-cold vegetables. They had beef that resembled Stephen Leacock's famous dinner of French-sounding "hunko de beef bollay." The children ate it unenthusiastically. Their opinion of their paternal parent had dropped many degrees, as he could plainly see, since the time when he had started cooking for them.

"Cissy Lane said her mother had a 'normous big turkey for their Christmas dinner," said Asphodel. "And she said it was goin' to have all the trimmins, her mother said."

"What's trimmins for a turkey?" asked Arrow, chewing wearily on a bit of the hunky beef.

"It's sage dressing and cranberry sauce with great big red cranberries in it, an' punkin pie and mince pie an' lemon pie an' cheese tarts an' jelly in little dishes with whipped cream on it an' plum puddin" with caramel sauce. Cissy says her mother makes the puddin' in a bag and you can smell the spices all over the house, an' when she takes it out, the currants an' raisins just stick out of it all over. An' she says her mother had the chimney all fixed for Santa Claus and he came last night an'——"

"I want my mother. I want my mother," yelled Jane, interrupting the speaker, at whom fascinated glances had been directed. Jane was the baby. She was only four years old. Casting herself down from her high chair, she beat with her big spoon against her father's knee.

"Where's my mamma gone?" she demanded, furiously. The spoon slipped and hit her father's burnt leg. He winced.

Then he reached down and put the little girl on his knee. Tears flowed down her dirty little face. With a conscience-stricken heart, Roderick Blin realized that for several days, he had neglectd to wash the face of his youngest offspring. The wet traces of her woe washed a clean channel down two grubby little cheeks. He had delegated this task to Asphodel. He turned an accusing eye on his eldest daughter and opened his lips to remonstrate with her over her negligence. Then he shut them, firmly.

"When you have got over your habit of nagging and fault-finding, I wil come home," his wife had said, turning to have the last word as she left on her visit to the paternal roof.

"Angelina, I do not find fault," he had replied, patiently. "I see how things should be and when they are not done as I wish, then I must, according to my standards of truth, point them out to you."

"Well, I'm tired of it," she had said stubbornly. "When you want me to come back, you know what you have to do."

"I shall not send for you," he had retorted, grandly. "You know your duty. If you forsake it for a mere excuse like that, you mut abide by it. As you have buttered your bread, so you must lie on it. I mean to say," he amended hastily, realizing that his consciousness of aroused virtue had mixed up his metaphors: "As you have made your bed, so you must eat it."

But without noticing his confusion, his wife had left him, "deserted me like a dog," as he had assured himself pasisonately, in a moment of grandiose mental reproach for her perfidy.

Now, Roderick Blin, superb even in defeat, rose to his feet. His dirty white apron fell in folds about his waist. He surveyed his home. The curtains hung stringily against soiled window panes, pictures were askew on the walls, dust lay thick on books and chairs and mantel top. The remains of an unappetizing meal were on the table. His children looked to him for assistance. Grime soiled their cheeks. It was Christmas Day.

His gaze resting finally on Asphodel, he opened his lips once more to reproach her for her neglect. There was a gleam like to Angelina's in her eye. He remembered. With the step of one whose ideas may be defeated, but who finds a certain pleasure in submission, Roderick Blin strode to the wall telephone, lifted the earpiece from its hook, turned the handle of the bell at the side, and called the number of his wife's parents.

ALONE

(By Water Lily)

It was in the spring of 1921 or 1922. Overhead the sun was shining brightly but underfoot it was slush, slush, on this particular morning a Peterborough housewife was busy preparing dinner (as she belonged to the aristocracy who dine at mid-day) when the front door bell rang. On going to the door she was confronted by a young lad about fifteen years of age, neatly dressed, but poorly shod about feet. He asked to be allowed to show her some books which he was agent for. The lady said, "I'm sorry, but I don't think I can possibly spare the time," but the lad was urgent, and she consented and asked him to step into the parlor.

He displayed his goods, and then turning his head, asked to be excused while he attended to his nose. The lady of the house noticed then that he had a bad cold, and really looked ill. At the same moment she surmised that he had no mother, or she would not have allowed him out with such a cold and so poorly clad. In order to find out, she remarked this to the lad. He replied, "I have no mother." She wanted to ask more, but there seemed a manly reticence which she did not like to break through.

Well, a book was finally selected and ordered, and with grateful thanks the young lad departed with the promise to bring the book in a few days. But how slow those days seem to drag to the one who had ordered the book, for the love of a mother was following that lonely boy, and reproach of herself that she had not tried to find out more about him. But at the end of the days he came back, and this time she cast her backwardness to the winds and asked him about himself.

He informed her in a few words that he had neither father no mothey they had both died, and he came from the States here to seek work, working for a little while in one of the factories here. At this time this particular factory was very slack, hence he was thrown out of work. Also he had been ill in bed for two weeks, and had got behind with his board, and so here he was trying to earn money some way to pay his way.

Manly, noble lad! There was principle about him, both rare and beautiful.

He finally departed with the money for his book, and a few kindly words of encouragement, and a little toward buying himself a new pair of rubbers, which he most reluctantly accepted, but which was firmly pressed upon him, and with tears in her eyes she watched him go, and has never seen him since.

"Alone, adrift on the ocean of life;
No father, no mother, no home;
Oh, Saviour Divine, do Thou follow the lad,
Wherever he may roam.
"May he always feel that Thou dost care,
Tho' the crowd know not his pain;
And at this Christmas may he feel
That all his loss is gain."

Gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway for August increased more than $2,000,000 over the corresponding month of last year.

"He takes off his hat to Kruschen"

Read what a Druggist says about a friend of his and Kruschen.

"I feel I must send you this little testimonial with regard to Kruschen Salts. A friend of mine showed me a letter from his father (aged 63), in which the following sentence occurred:—

"My dear old friend Kruschen is still doing the trick for me, and whenever I see a bottle of Kruschen in a Druggist's window, I take off my hat and bow to it."

"I must tell you that this gentleman suffered for years with stomach and liver troubles: he was even operated on for appendicitis, but did not seem to obtain appreciable relief."

(Signed) J. O., Druggist.

RICHARD HALL LIMITED

SHIPPING FIRM TO BUILD FLEET

Canadian Terminals Limited Considering Construction of Ships for Great Lakes Trade.

WILL BE LET BY TENDER.

TORONTO, Ont., December 6 (Special to The Examiner). — Canadian Terminals Limited have under consideration the construction of a fleet of fifteen to twenty ships for the Great Lakes trade, officials of the company announced to-day. "The matter is entirely in the air at the present time, but such a move as this is contemplated."

Nothing definite will be decided until the return of E. C. Drury, former Premier of the Province, from the West. Mr. Drury is a director of the Canadian Terminals Company, and will be in charge of the construction of these ships.

It is not certain where these ships will be built, but no move in this direction is to be undertaken until the spring. The contract will probably be let by tender, and will provide for the construction of one of the most up-to-date fleets of Great Lake boats yet built. The ships are to be owned by the Terminal Warehouse Company when constructed.

SPECIAL SPEAKERS

ing that the actual 'smoking' is done by a chemical contrivance that sends the smoke out round the church quite realistically; however, when the lid is removed 'your church will be emptied in two minutes, and you must leave the moral until the next Sunday.'

The explanation is then given that the residue which gives out 'that awful stench' is what remains in the lungs, and is taken up by the blood stream, and poisons the whole system; the object lesson being very effective.

The nominating committee, consisting of the pastor and superintendent from each school, with an additional representative as follows: Mrs J. Whittington, Mrs. J. H. George, Mrs. R. Matchett, Miss Burnham, J. Jewison, T. W. McIndoo and R. Matchett, met immediately at the close of the afternoon session and drafted a slate of officers to be submitted to the convention at the evening gathering. Rev. Mr. Horton explained the 'Group Visitation Plan,' and this was adopted by the executive.

Tea was served in the Foresters' Hall by the W.M.S. of the church and the delegates enjoyed the opportunity for social intercourse between the sessions.

A song service opened the evening meeting, Rev. E. F. Swayne, of Frazerville, having charge of the devotional period. The report of the nominating committee was read as follows: President, T. H. Aiken, Millbrook; vice-president, A. E. Sanderson, Fairmount; secretary-treasurer, Hubert Gardiner, Mount Pleasant; Children's work, Mrs. James Douglas, Cavanville; Girl's work, Miss Pearl Burnham, Millbrook; Boys' work, Fred Barnard, Bailleboro; Young peoples' work, Archie Deyell, Bailleboro; Adult department, James Seymour, Fairmount; Teacher training, Miss Estelle Hetherington, Millbrook; Missionary department, Miss Emma McIndoo; Temperance department, Richard Matchett, Cavan.

Rev. Mr. Norton delivered the charge to the Sunday school workers, and installed the officers after solemnly requiring their pledge for faithful fulfilment of the duties of their respective departments.

Rev. F. L. Carpenter delivered an impressive address on "The Child in the Midst," stressing the fact that the child is God's masterpiece, and that proper religious nurture is essential to produce Christian character. The responsibility devolving upon parents, teachers, and the home and Sunday school was emphatically presented and the fact that each little one is born in the Kingdom and may be kept within the fold was made clear. "Not 'Come to Jesus,' but 'Stay with Jesus," is the proper order, and the family altar is a necessity in caring for the lambs of the flock."

"The salvation of youth is the burning question of the hour; saving the child to-day, and not to-morrow, that is the problem, and parents are teachers who have no holidays. The greatest hope of the church is in the early sowing and every teacher should come before her class with the one object of making the child see Jesus in every lesson. What a task, and what a victory."

The choir provided a musical selection, Mrs. Walter Henry presiding at the piano, and Rev. Mr. Norton gave the concluding address of the convention, basing his remarks upon Mark 8. 22-26, Jesus' healing of the blind man of Bethsaida. "Having eyes to see the people" was the theme.

When the Saviour opens sin-blinded eyes, He expects us to have a changed character and a changed outlook. A father's responsibility, for instance, is not to see "for," but "with," his boys. Sometimes we say we see with a spiritual vision, but our acts belie our words: "Having eyes, we see not."

"Personal service is a sure outcome of having our eyes opened by the touch of Jesus," and the speaker narrated some incidents of "touched" eyes that drove home, in a most impressive manner, the lesson it was desired to teach. "God wins hearts for His own; could you do any better than to yield yourself to the Holy Spirit, and He will indicate to you the means to use to bring other souls to the Master, Who will open their sin-blinded eyes?"

Reference to the King's illness led to the singing of the National Anthem as an earnest prayer, thus fittingly closing a successful convention.

The Sunday schools represented in the two townships included: Bensfort, Bailleboro; Centreville, Frazerville, Fairmount, Springville, Cavan Centre, Cavan, Ebenezer, Mount Pleasant, Millbrook United Church, and Grace Presbyterian, Mount Pleasant Independent, Carmel. Next year the convention will meet at Mount Pleasant.

VAST IMPROVEMENT

improvements. There were 177 call visits made and 68 full day visits also 2,746 butter fat tests and 122 sediment and fermentation tests.

"The average butter-fat test of the factories where I did the testing of 2,746 samples, was 3.3, which I believe would be a fair average for this section.

Increase in Number of Boxes.

"There has been an increase of about 5,000 boxes of cheese in this section over 1927, with three factories less in operation. With the increase of production there has also been an increase in the percentage of first grade of cheese.

"From the beginning of the season the cheesemakers have put forth every effort for a higher standing for themselves and their section and have accomplished good results. One large factor for the success of our season's work was the cheesemakers' organization formed on May 18, with the able assistance of J. L. Irwin, dairy produce grader, and J. Murray, dairy instructor, Campbellford section.

"We had several meetings throughout the season at the cheese factories in different parts of the section which have brought about a more friendly feeling between the cheesemakers and the farmers and has given them the opportunity of discussing their problems.

"At all of these meetings we had some farmers or producers present and they often took part in the meeting. The main object of our cheesemakers' organization is to improve the dairy industry in Eastern Ontario, more especially Central Ontario, and in order to get results we should have co-operation of all concerned.

"With our high standing of first-grade cheese for this season we have still to look forward for better results.

"Better raw material and some factories in better condition, and I want to say to the farmers of this section that this great dairy business belongs to the producers, and they are responsible for the condition of the raw material. The finished product can be no better than the material it is made from.

"Although there has been improvement there are still some not giving it the care they should. The milk should be properly strained in a clean can and the night's cooled to 65 degress or under and kept in a clean place over night. Then a first-class cheesemaker would be able to make the type of cheese the trade requires.

"I know of no branch in the dairy business that gets the raw material in such unsound condition as the cheese factory, and no branch requires it better as the milk is manufactured at the cheese factory into a food product. In other branches it is pasteurized before being manufactured.

"I would like to see some of the makers draw the line a little closer in the selection of milk on the weighing stand and not accept milk that they cannot manufacture into a Number one grade cheese.

"Unsound raw material is responsible for a large percentage of the under-grade cheese.

"We are still looking forward for better results and a higher standing for 1929," said Mr. Moore.

Several other speakers were heard during the afternoon, among them being R. G. Allen, president of the Peterborough-Lindsay district Cheese makers' Association, and Mr. Hawthorne now retired, but at one time president of the old Peterborough Cheese Board. Both men were heard with interest and contributed materially to the success of the meeting.

BOYS LAUGHED AT WARNING BUT PAID LIVES AS PENALTY

Four in Canoe Challenged Storm —Two Lost Lives in Contest.

WARNING GIVEN.

Jury Finds Drowning Was Purely Accidental in Toronto Bay.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—Youth laughed at the warnings of experience and paid again the dreadful price when George Wallace Hodge, aged 17, and Reynold Goodrich, aged 18, two sea cadets, were drowned in Toronto Bay on November 17, after their canoe had swamped in a storm off Mugg's Island.

Such was the conclusion drawn from evidence adduced Tuesday night at the inquest at the City Morgue, when John W. Medland, aged 19, and Elliott W. Langley, Jr., aged 18, the two survivors, told a coroner's jury the story of the stark struggle in which Hodge and Goodrich perished.

Two grey-haired watermen of many years' experience—Capt. Patrick McSherry, skipper of the tug Clarke Bros., and F. A. Dunne, night engineer at the mainland ferry docks—both swore that they had solemnly warned Hodge and Goodrich against attempting to make the island by canoe in the prevailing storm.

"They laughed at me," said the veteran ferry captain, who had met the boys as they waited about the docks for Medland and Langley, who were paddling from the island to pick them up. "I said, 'There's no use talking to you fellows'."

Mr. Dunne said that he had told them that no canoe could live in the storm then blowing. "I told them that if they had no place to stay overnight except at the island," he said, "they could stay with me in the Clark Bros."

The jury found that the drowning was purely accidental.

OFFICIALS TO PROBE SMUGGLING CHARGES

Believe Others Besides Canadian Distillers May Be Involved.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (Canadian Press).—Following indictment at Buffalo of more than a score of Canadian distillers and brewers, the Treasury department announced that powerful combinations were engaged in the smuggling traffic.

Seymour Lowman, assistant Secretary of Treasury in charge of the Bureau co-operating in the investigation declared that "fight against Canadian liquor smugglers would be carried on until the practise was ended." Investigations which led to the Buffalo indictments were said to be likely to involve into not only other Canadian distillers, but employees of railway and telegraph companies and several banks.

CHRISTMAS BAZAAR IS HELD IN HALL

Knox Church Ladies' Guild Holds Enjoyable Afternoon Tea and Sale.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 5.—The Christmas Bazaar and Afternoon Tea of Knox Church Ladies' Guild was held in St. John's Parish Hall on Friday afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock and was a successful and very sociable function in spite of the very inclement weather.

A corner was reserved for the Sunbeam Mission Band under the direction of Mrs. Wesley and it took the form of a fish pond and rivalled the candy table as a mecca for the junior visitors. It was the busiest spot in the room, as the members of the Band assisted in turn to provide a catch for the young fishermen.

The Tea Room was well patronized and was well-managed by a competent committee of ladies, Miss J. Blakeley, Miss Blewett, Mrs. F. J. Burgess, Mrs. D. H. Charlton and Mrs. James Hendren.

Among others who assisted in various ways during the afternoon were Mrs. J. H. Moore and Mrs. J. E. Grant, who assisted Miss Sanderson.

Bazaar to be Held.

This week's activities include two more bazaars which will probably be the last of the pre-Christmas church functions on Thursday afternoon St. John's Chancel Guild hold their sale in the Parish Hall and on Friday afternoon the Ladies' Aid of the Regent Street United Church are having a Bazaar in the school room of the church. COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION,

I don't think anything could be nicer than the opportunity your page gives us to read and write about things that interest us. I am just enjoying the 'Daily Reading,' and I surely hope enough readers write saying the same, so that you will keep it up. I think, too, it's a real nice idea to print the extracts on days made personal to the author, as you are doing.

Do you believe in telepathy, Marion? I have been reading quite a bit about spiritism recently, and telepathy enters into it. I noticed one of your correspondents (M.B., I think) mentioned Swedenborg the other day, and I wonder if your readers ever heard about his experiences in telepathy. When Swedenborg was 72 years old he was staying at Gottenburg, 125 miles from his home in Stockholm. He went for a walk, and returned pale and worried, saying that at that very moment a fire had broken out in the street where his house was in Stockholm, and that his house was threatened. He went out again and again returned, lamenting the fact that the house of one of his friends had been reduced to ashes, and that his own was in great danger. About eight o'clock he exclaimed, joyfully, "God be praised, the fire was extinguished three doors above mine."

News of the fire did not reach Gottenburg until two days later, and then it confirmed in every detail the account which Swedenborg had by telepathy.

I have been told of other cases near to us; some of my own friends have had experiences in telepathy and spiritism, but one doesn't know just how far to go, does one? There are so many 'dreams' that have no basis in fact, how is one to know what is symbolical truth and what is not?

I hope I haven't bored you, Marion. Perhaps some of the neighbors will write and tell if they know any cases of telepathy; I would be very interested to know.

Sincerely yours,

D. T."

She would be a very hardy person indeed, "D. T.", who would say, "I don't believe in spiritual manifestations," and certainly I would not be so foolish. There are many well-authenticated instances of telepathy. Alexander Dumas is reported to have learned of the death of his father in this way; the occurrences are related by Goug not de Mousseaux, Petrarch, Cicero, dall'Argine, and scores of others in bygone years, and the number of attestations in this century is legion. It will be interesting to know whether the neighbors know of any cases.

"Dear Marion,

I thank you for the last household helps. I made quite a nice baby jacket. The Whatnot was splendid last Wednesday. I think if husbands were to seek a little keener they would save their wives a lot of unnecessary steps.

I am sending you a recipe. Wishing you the best of luck with your page.

City. MIM."

I am indeed glad to know, "MIM, that the helps worked out so well for you, and I certainly appreciate the recipe.

"Dear Marion,

I have not written before, but have read and enjoyed your page, and think it a helpful and interesting addition to The Examiner, of which I have been a subscriber for over twenty-five years.

When I have more time I will send you my way of making pie crust, which is always good. I am enclosing a coupon, and if you still have slip with skirt attached would like it also, please.

Yours sincerely,

Fides."

I'll be looking forward to receiving your recipe for pie crust, "Fides." A neighbor asked for it, you know, and it's one I want for myself. I'm sorry all the "slip" helps are gone.

* * *

"Dear Marion,

The Examiner is worth running out to the mail box to get now since there is our page headed by so splendid a boss.

Enclosed you will find four cents in stamps for helps.

Here are some helpful hints for Christmas, if they are not too late. The elephant is for a teapot holder. Cut it double of heavy grey goods, and leave the front open to slip over the handle of the teapot. The cat is for baby to play with. It is made of flannel in any suitable color, cut double and stuffed, with a round piece for the bottom to make pussy stand up. I am making examines to show the idea.

I hope these are of some use as your helps help me a good deal.

Yours truly,

Sally No. 2."

"Dear Marion:

It's no use, I can't sleep. I have been up with a restless baby all night, and I will have to take care of my small family in the morning again (but I love it). There are some nice soft cushions in our house, but I doubt if I will get time to sit on one (unless it is to rock the baby).

Bully for you, Marion, the way you gave it back to "Thinker." I think the name of Soloman would have suited such a wise man as he. We don't have to go back to the beginning of civilization to see what women have done. Take the pioneer days of Canada, less than a hundred years ago; who sat on soft cushions then? I wonder if they had any to sit on. I wonder if man wove the garb of Abraham, or who spun the yarn and wove the cloth to make his clothes? I think like you, Marion, that there would not be many in the next generation, if we women left our homes and dear babies, and went off on a fishing trip or hunting trip (because we couldn't endure those hardships) we're so soft, but if we went off and left things, what would become of our homes?

Thinker has a second think coming and I hope you get your box of chocolates, Marion.

Eve."

Thanks, "Eve," for your good wishes. Your letter is a practical refutation of "Thinker's" statements. I wonder how many nights his wife sat up with the children while he slept? If I get the chocolates I'll have to find some way of divvying them up with you women who are helping me win them. You might send your address, just in case!

* * *

"Dear Marion:

The fight is on.

You certainly know how to raise the fighting instinct in me, and that too, when I thought it was all quieted down or dead. Well, you know what's happened. I've just been reading your "Whatnot" and you've changed all the stuff on it and the War Veterans are scrambling all over it. My Hubby was down cellar and heard me laughing and he calls up, "Got something good?" I said, "Yes, Marion is walloping 'Thinker'; he's getting what's coming to him." We're sure not going to knuckle down in this 20th century to the likes of him. Someone has said 'man is as lazy as he dares to be,' of course meaning all of us. But this statement particularly applies to lots of men (I won't say all; that would not be right) and to any who know this cap doesn't fit them, I want them to leave it alone, and let the other fellow try it on—

Yes, I repeat it. I have seen lots of lazy men, particularly those who have married wives who had a trade at their finger ends, but in my fifty odd years I have not met very many lazy women. It seems a woman must be busy; if it's not housework, it's needlework or writing. Not so the men, they can just enjoy themselves doing nothing, but they don't like to see a woman idle.

I remember my own father—my brothers would don another coat and go out down street in the evenings (we lived in a little village across the ocean) but what I was going to say, if after our homework from school was done we were so lazy as to start reading a book, father would be sure to say, "Have you girls got nothing else to do; can't you help your mother with some sewing?" Yes, I could tell you a whole lot, Marion that women did and was expected to do in those days, but to some extent as the fellow said, "Them days is past," but I see the same old spirit in lots of the men. I can see it with my eyes shut, so I can. But as you say, Marion, we 1928 women are not so easily cowed.

I won't write any more now as some of the other women want a chance.

Yours very truly,

M. B.

P.S.—Women are sure coming into their own in the "Burg" (Hubby has just read your Whatnot and enjoyed it as much as I did.) I am sure, too, there are other sensible men who have a sense of what is right and just and will do the same. What real man wants to see a woman cower before him? A woman whose will has been broken does not love, she hates."

Yours is a splendid letter, M. B., and the part that delights me most is that which tells about your husband's appreciation. I'd like to pat you on the back for having chosen so sensibly!

Has it occurred to you that some men are so busy DOING that they have no time to be THINKERS of absurdities like our previous correspondent?

Marion

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

In this broad land of ours cheese is simply cheese—and from East to West, if you go to a grocery store or dairy and ask for a pound of cheese the chances are that you will receive virtually the same product.

In Europe every county or province has its own particular sort of cheese, and the European generally is a far better judge of the flavor and quality of cheese than is the Canadian. There is, however, what might be called a growing cheese consciousness in this country, and there are certain facts about cheese that every housewife ought to know.

Parmesan cheese, which is made in Parma, Italy, is one of the very few good cheeses made entirely from skimmed milk. The delicious flavor is ascribed to the rich herbage of the Po valley where the cows graze, whose milk is used in making this sort of cheese. Parmesan cheese is never sold until it has been aged six months, and the best is five or six years old.

Camembert cheese originally made only in Brittany, is a very rich cream cheese with a flavor as much liked by some persons as it is disliked by others.

Real Roquefort cheese is made in the south of France from goats' or sheeps' milk. It is aged some time before being sent to market.

There are a number of different kinds of Swiss cheese, the most notable being Gruyere cheese. The flavor of this cheese is derived from a powdered herb that grows in Switzerland.

Cheshire, Gloucestershire, Stilton and Cheddar cheese are the best known cheeses of England, and our own Canadian cheese is said to be a Cheddar type cheese.

The world's heaviest meat eaters are the people of Argentine. They average 346 pounds per year per person.

A finger lamp is among the new inventions on the market. Fastens on finger and leaves both hands free.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

I am indebted to Mrs. W. Roseneath, for the suggestion to print to-day's extract from "Cheating the Gallows", by Israel Zangwill, English author and playwright of Jewish race, who wrote: "The Premier and the Painter," "The Bachelor's Club" "Children of the Ghetto," "Without Prejudice," and "A Nineteenth Century Miracle." He was born in London in 1864.

DECEMBER 6, 1928

Polly Receives a Proposal.

If Clara Newell could have seen Tom Peters carrying on with Polly in the passage, she might have felt justified in her prejudice against him. It must be confessed, though, that Everard also carried on with Polly. Alas! it is to be feared that men are much of a muchness where women are concerned; shabby men and smart men, bank managers and journalists, bachelors and semi-detached bachelors. Perhaps it was a mistake after all to say the chums had nothing patently in common. Everard, I am afraid, kissed Polly rather more often than Clara, and although it was because he respected her less, the reason would perhaps not have been sufficiently consoling to his affianced wife. For Polly was pretty, especially on alternate Sunday afternoons, and when at ten p.m. she returned from her outings, she was generally met in the passage by one or other of the men. Polly liked to receive the homage of real gentlemen, and set her white cap at all indifferently. Thus, just before Clara knocked on that memorable Sunday afternoon, Polly, being confined to the house by the unwritten code regulating the lives of servants, was amusing herself by flirting with Peters.

"You ARE fond of me a little bit," the graceless Tom whispered, "aren't you?"

"You know I am, sir," Polly replied.

"You don't care for anyone else in the house?"

"Oh no, sir, and never let anyone kiss me but you. I wonder how it is, sir?" Polly replied ingenuously.

"Give me another," Tom answered.

She gave him another, and tripped to the door to answer Clara's knock.

And that very evening, when Clara was gone and Tom still out, Polly turned without the faintest atom of scrupulosity, or even jealousy, to the more fascinating Roxdal, and accepted his amorous advances. If it would seem at first sight that Everard had less excuse for such frivolity than his friend, perhaps the seriousness he showed in this interview may throw a different light upon the complex character of the man.

"You're quite sure you don't care for anyone but me?" he asked earnestly.

"Of course not, sir!" Polly replied indignantly. "How could I?"

"But you care for that soldier I saw you out with last Sunday?"

"Oh no, sir, he's only my young man," she said apologetically.

"Would you give him up?" he hissed suddenly.

Polly's pretty face took a look of terror. "I couldn't, sir! He'd kill me. He's such a jealous brute, you've no idea."

"Yes, but suppose I took you away from here?" he whispered eagerly. "Somewhere where he couldn't find you—South America, Africa, somewhere thousands of miles across the seas."

"Oh, sir, you frighten me!" whispered Polly, cowering before his ardent eyes, which shone in the dimly lit passage.

"Would you come with me?" he hissed. She did not answer; she shook herself free and ran into the kitchen, trembling with a vague fear.

SUCCESSFUL SALE IS HELD BY WOMEN

Tea Tables and Counters Were Well Patronized During Afternoon.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 6.—The Women's League of Grace Presbyterian church held a successful sale of fancy work, baking, etc., on Saturday afternoon, the former Byam store being used for the event.

The afternoon tea table were well patronized, the unpleasant weather out-of-doors making all the more attractive the cosy arrangement in the large room indoors, with the added pleasure of friendly social intercourse while gathered about the small tables, daintily-laid and daintily-served, and each centre with a tiny vase of late fall flowers.

The counters of aprons in many patterns, and a variety of materials of prettily-dressed dolls, dainty babies' wear, fancy lamp shades, embroidered towels, pillow slips, centre-pieces, and many other articles, besides the tempting-looking cakes, pies, biscuits, tarts, etc., drew a fairly steady stream of customers throughout the afternoon, and early evening, and practically all the wares were disposed of when the closing hour arrived.

Among those assisting with the sale, and at the tea tables, were: Mrs. R. Brown, Mrs. R. McMahon, Mrs. W. E. Russell, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. S. McCullough, Mrs. (Dr.) Ellis, Mrs J. R. Eakins, Mrs. T. Ingram, Mrs. S. E. Eakins, Mrs. S. Carveth, Miss M. Eagleson, Mrs. J. Armstrong, Mrs. J. R. McKnight, Misses Vaneta Ingram, Jessie Armstrong, Aleatha Challice, Gladys Bothwell, Jean Bothwell, Audrey Kean, and others.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

My finger nails become discolored and stained easily, and are always brittle, so that the least thing breaks them. Is there anything I can do to remedy this?

Mrs. G. S."

The discoloration can be removed by soaking the nails in a pint of warm water containing a dessertspoonful of lemon juice. For the brittleness, dip them for a few minutes every day in lukewarm sweet oil. This has the effect of making them less liable to crack or break off.

Here is another formula for brittle nails, repeated for the 'steenth time: Melt 30 grains of powdered resin and 80 grains of white wax, and, as you gently stir the mixture, add 30 grains of table salt, 1½ ounces of almond oil, an 30 grains of powdered alum. Pour into a jar resistant of heat and let cool. Apply this to the nails with a piece of cotton, as often as possible.

France is the fourth largest sole leather producing country in the world, with approximately 60,000,000 pounds annually as the output of more than 350 tanneries.

Kings in the earliest days were merely the "fathers of families" and the word is derived from the same source as "kin."

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

AFTER A GUM BOIL, WHAT?

You have had a tooth that has given you trouble and some morning you notice a lump on the gum surrounding it. This is what you call a gum boil, and feel thankful that the pus or poison has come to the surface and gets drained out of the mouth. Perhaps you think no more about it for a gum boil is only a gum boil.

What has happened when a gum boil forms?

The nerve of the tooth dies, due to decay, the nerve becomes infected and breaks down. Pus forms which causes pain and swelling. This lump breaks down, the pain and swelling disappear, and you feel that as far as that tooth is concerned your troubles are over.

However Dr. W. M. Gardner, of Cleveland, tells us that the process has only become chronic, and drainage of the infection, the pus, instead of being into the mouth is now into the system.

You will remember that Dr. Weston Price showed that a little pus from one of these infected teeth, when injected into rabbits, was sufficient to produce disease and even death.

Therefore this tooth, now so quiet and free from pain, and with no gum boil about it, is really more dangerous to the system than when the pus from the gum boil was draining into the mouth, because the stomach and digestive juices often render a poison harmless, or at least less harmful.

This infection, absorbed into the blood vessels, can be carried by the blood to all parts of the body including the lining of the heart itself. What is the thought?

That where there is a gum boil, that you do not delay seeing your dentist. He may open it up so as to let it drain into mouth. Then later he will make an examination, including perhaps an X-ray of root, and give the necessary treatment, or extract the tooth.

Now the tooth itself may appear to be quite all right, and you do not like the idea of losing it, nevertheless in the light of what our dentists are now telling us, don't take a chance by leaving it in if your dentist wishes to extract it.

9½ lbs. gained in 5 weeks

These photos were supplied by the Medical Superintendent of one of the principal London Infirmaries. The first photo was taken on February 3rd. The child then weighed 20 lbs. 9 ozs. The second photo was taken March 9th, five weeks later, when the child weighed 30 lbs. 2 ozs. Not being able to take ordinary food, he was fed on Virol with milk, and upon this diet he made a complete recovery.

After investigating this case, "Truth," stated "it was neither more nor less than the exact record of indisputable fact."

A very successful and largely-attended bridge party was held last evening in the Selkirk and Elliott showrooms on Hunter street, under the auspices of the November-December group of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. Mrs. J. J. Craig and Miss Hazel Buller were convenors of arrangements, assisted by members of the group; Mrs. J. Wearing, Mrs. H. H. Dinsdale, Mrs. J. B. Doran, Mrs. C. McLean, Mrs. H. Carey, the Misses Linden Hall, Caroline Littlefield, Edna Conner, Marjorie Read, Florence Thompson, Ellen Eagleson, Violet McKeown, Leta Brownscombe, Viola Martin and Ethel Cooper. Decorations were carried out very attractively in orchid and yellow shades. The windows were curtained with long draperies of crinkly paper in the two colors, with fringes of artificial flowers. The electroliers were shaded with elongated icicles made of pale orchid, yellow, pink and green, and the sweetmeat holders on the tables were of the same pretty tints. Tally cards of orchid and yellow were cut in shapes corresponding to diamonds, hearts, clubs and spades. The prizes were very pretty, the first prize, a dainty clock, being donated by the Westclox Company, and the lovely pink roses which served as prizes for lucky tables being the gift of Mr. C. H. Williamson of the Peterborough Floral Company. Mr. F. H. Dawson made announcements for the card rules, and bridge prizes which were won by Mrs. V. J. Tully (ladies' first), Mr. H. C. THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

It might be difficult to prove that the devices used by modern civilized women for enhancing their charms through dress are any more subtle or sophisticated than those employed by barbarians of supposedly primitive culture. Fashion has the same old bag of tricks which she has been playing over and over again for the past thousand years or more with only slight variation.

If she favors subdued, restrained colors one season, recommending them to us on the ground that they are sophisticated—it is only to go back to stronger, more virile colors in a season or so, recommending these on the ground that they are more primitive.

We speak of the new trimmings of the season and yet there is nothing really new in the best of them. Feathers, flowers, fur, jewels and metals have all been used for the adornment of women's raiment since the dawn of history; and we are using them yet.

It is the primitive love of light and brilliance that makes metallic materials and ornaments still so universally well liked. And barbarian women like to deck themselves with bits of gleaming metals no more than do we. Never was there such a steady, strong demand for metal fabrics as there is today and the present vogue for sequin trimmings shows that we are as fond of gleaming in reflected radiance as ever.

Sequin-trimmed cocktail jackets and bolcros have met with enormous approval in this country and perhaps the best liked type of evening scarf at present is the square triangle or oblong made dazzling with sequins.

The sketch today shows two of these glittering evening scarfs. The handkerchief scarf has a companion piece in the way of a little cap similarly adorned with sequins—just the thing for theater or not too formal evening wear.

CHRISTMAS is a time when we recall our friends, some of whom we may not have had in mind for many moons. A great many have friends who once lived in Peterborough and have moved away. Perhaps you are sending a card to these friends—why not add a line and tell them you are looking forward to seeing them during Old Home Week in the coming summer?

I believe a lot of people might attend who would not do so if they were not told of the affair some time ahead. You know how we all like to think ahead to our holiday. We like to plan what we shall do, tell our friends where we are going, prepare our clothes, and generally anticipate our good time.

• • •

Remember the saying, "Anticipation is better than realization."

• • •

Naturally we hope that will not be the case in our celebration,—in July is it not?—but we hope that both anticipation and realization will be best.

• • •

Most people have a little of the feeling exp essed by Scott when he wrote:

Breathes there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
"This is my own, my native land,"
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wand'ring on a foreign strand.

• • •

Perhaps in our invitation to exiled citizens of Peterborough we will not be so harsh as Scott was as he went on with his poem, telling how the poor wretch, although rich in worldly goods and with a proud name would never leave behind him a lasting impression.

• • •

That, though, was to happen to only those who felt no desire to return to their native land or who had no feeling of loyalty to it.

• • •

I am sure that in giving folks the idea, perhaps before it is advertised officially, we are on the right track. We all know how Christmas has a way of creeping up on us and finding us scrambling for funds. Perhaps I should not say 'all' but there are a good few who will know what I for one experience some years to say the least.

• • •

Why, then, should it not be just the same with planning for a return to Peterborough for a visit? Unless all the folks who have moved away from our city have found Aladdin's lamp they may need to save up in their 'penny banks'—just a bit.

• • •

Some children that I know are having birthday parties and their mother is using the helps prepared by "Laura" for the entertainments. You may be able to use them in a similar manner, so send in your coupon while there are some of the helps left.

• • •

Another help that we have for you is a diag am and directions for a negligee to be used as a bed jacket. It is quite conomical and very easy to make. Just now when so many sle veless nightgowns are being worn even in winter it would be a much appreciated gift.

• • •

What did you think of the Christmas stories in yesterday's paper? I have not been able to judge them as there were so many. I am sure you will agree with me that it will be no easy task to judge them for degrees of literary merit. I will announce the prize winners just as soon as possible.

• • •

With so much talent in short story writing I shall always have something interesting to fall back on when I take my holiday or a rest cure!

• • •

Will you think I am belittling your housekeeping abilities, home neighbors, if I suggest that it is high time to get those Christmas cakes made? Of course the earlier they are made the better, as fruit cake improves with age.

• • •

Cranberry jelly is delicious with the addition of a few raisins. One woman has done up a quantity of this and uses it for the children's bread. She also has some put away for Christmas.

• • •

There are so many little things that can be done to make it easier when Christmas day itself arrives. Get your crackers now for the table. Plan the decorations you wish to use on the table and if you are handy make some place cards for your guests. Wee Christmas trees of drawing paper done in water color might be used. Make them with the tub attached and that will give you a larger piece of paper to turn back for a base. The tub may be used to write the name on.

• • •

Another easily made place card, one that the older children could make, is formed from a folded piece of paper with two small cuts in the crease at right angles to the fold. The loop made thus can be used to hold a tiny candle or a sprig of holly.

• • •

Let the children make bonbon boxes from stiff paper in triangular form, an equilateral triangle will be necessary. The required amount of paper should be turned up on each side and the points made by turning the sides up may be trimmed off or left on as one wishes. Tie the sides in position with some appropriate color and lay a tiny sprig of holly to one side of the candy. A twig of evergreen might be used in place of the holly.

• • •

One of the endeavors of the Ukumtu Club of the Young Women's Christian Association is the carrying on of a Gift Bazaar at the 'Y,' opening on Thursday evening and continuing for the next two weeks.

This Club has a membership of about eighteen girls who come here from the Old Country and are formed together in a social way. They make aprons and towels and little bright woolen flowers, as well as many other pretty and useful gifts for Christmas, and the money derived from the sale of these things will be used as their donation towards the foreign work carried on by the Y.W.C.A.

The Young Women's Christian Association is forming another of the many small clubs which round out the various physical, mental and spiritual activities of the members. This will be a Junior Club and all girls from twelve to fourteen years of age who would like to join a 'Y' club for worthwhile good times are invited to come to the 'Y' on Saturday afternoon from two to four o'clock.

She is a very energetic and a very amiable young lady. When she is hurried, she sometimes forgets to make explanations of her remarks and other people get mixed up about them. One morning, her mother wanted to dye some clothes and found the vinegar bottle was empty. Her cheerful daughter volunteered to go to the store and get some. She was in a hurry to get back and start her own work. When she returned home, she found an elderly peddler at the door, anxious to display his wares. She was rushed but she was kindly, as usual. Wishing to explain her inability to attend to him at once, she said:

"Couldn't you come back again? I am awfully sorry but I can't look at anything this morning. My mother is very busy dyeing."

The old man looked at her in great consternation and surprise.

"Oh, I am so sorry," he said, and went away at once, hurying off down the street, still with the same surprised expression on his face.

She has never seen him since and she wonders to this day what he thought of the lady who made such a business of her dying, as he took it to be, and of her very cheerful daughter.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion is co-operating with the men of the Legion, as usual, in packing Christmas baskets of good cheer for returned men and their dependents.

Annually, the men and women of the Legion unite in making up these baskets which add such a cheerful note to many a home on their arrival on Christmas Eve.

They contain a goodly quantity of staples, such as plain groceries, tea, sugar, potatoes, oatmeal, also a roast of meat and fruit, with an orange apiece for the children or a bag of candy.

Last year, over ighty such baskets were despatched by the men and women of the Legion t homes where dwell ex-soldiers or their children.

One of the jewellery stores of the city has issued a most att active little booklet of gifts for Christmas, which illustrates many pretty things. It is bound in paper of a color which seems to be very popular this year, a sort of rose pink with deeper magenta edges and it contains several pages to be used for Gift Lists, Christmas Card Lists and Shopping Lists. A record like this is extremely useful as the years go by and would prevent duplicating gifts in succeeding Christmases.

The Wom n's Canadian Club is responsible for bringing to the city many interesting lecturers who are enabled to give the members glimpses of events and places and people that they might not otherwise think of. This week, the Rev. Dr. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College, Toronto, spoke on one of the most interesting characters in English history, Samuel Pepys.

Mr. Pepys' claim to distinction lies n the fact that he wrote a unique diary. From the month of January in the ye r 1660 to the end of May, 1669, Mr. Pepys wrote nightly in this diary and he wished it to be so unintelligible to the eye that he wrote everything in cypher which he mixed up by using several foreign languages. He wished above all things to keep it from the eyes of his wife and this he accomplished, but a century latre, after six years of constant work by a college undergraduate of the very common name of Smith, Mr. Pepys' diary was decyphered and the innermost thoughts and feelings of his bosom were laid bare to the light of day.

And it appears that Mr. Pepys thought some queer things and that, in writing his diary, he neglected nothing that might give an insight into the workings of his soul. The diary is regarded as a remarkable find by psychologists and clergymen. Provost Cosgrave said that its revealment of its author in such an entirely new light to that held of him by the wor'd reminded him of the parody on the words of Longfellow:

"Lives of great men all remind us
As the pages o'er we turn,
That we are apt to leave behind us
Letters which we ought to burn."

The ladies who listened to Provost Cosgrave appeared to relish the recital of the learned diarist's troubles with his wife, who was of a very untidy type and also very jealous of her husband.

"But she may have ha cause to be jealous," remarked the speaker, whimsically. "It is a matter of regret to most of us that Mrs. Pepys did not keep a diary."

STORY CONTEST.

There were so many short Christmas stories submitted in the competition that it was found impossible to print them all in the Christmas number. Those left out yesterday will be published within a few days and the prize announcement will then be made.

"I had a breaking out of pimples on my face, neck, shoulders and arms. They itched and burned so badly that I had to scratch, causing severe irritation. "I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After about the fifth application there was a marked improvement so I purchased more, and in four weeks I was healed." (Signed) Miss Millie Dickout, Brown's Brae, Ont., Sept. 16, 1927.

Neuritis

That Elusive Nerve-wracking Pain—Succumbs to Thermogene

In combating, relieving and defeating Neuritis, Thermogene is soothing, comforting and persuasive. But it is also definitely commanding.

The medical profession and sufferers all over the world have, by experience, learned to look to Thermogene for relief from pain.

The Neuritis pain may shift from limb to limb, but Thermogene will follow it. It may vary its attack, but Thermogene will circumvent it. It may take refuge in a muscle or a joint, but Thermogene will hunt it out. There's only one end to this conflict. Neuritis must capitulate, Thermogene MUST win.

Think of Thermogene at the first twinge of pain. And when its glowing warmth has done its work, Thermogene may be removed easily, safely and without the slightest discomfort. See that your medicine cabinet or travelling bag contains a package—always.

FIRST ANNUAL CONVENTION OF CHEESE MAKERS BEING HELD

Splendid Progress Is Reported During Year By Central Ontario Makers.

PERCENTAGE RAISED.

News of Accomplishments Has Spread Over Entire Province, Says President.

BELLEVILLE, Dec 6.—(Special.)—The cause of rancidity in cheese has yet to be discovered. This question was thoroughly thrashed out yesterday at the first annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, held in the city hall, Belleville. A large number of cheesemakers, and representatives of the different cheese factories in the Central Ontario District were present to discuss the different problems concerning the cheese that is produced in Central Ontario.

The convention opened at 10 a.m. yesterday morning with a meeting of local group directors and Association committee members only. While this was going on the different delegates were registering.

The afternoon session opened with a few words of welcome to Belleville from Mayor Duff. The citizens of Belleville were honored to have the convention held in their city as the city was naturally interested in the cheese-making industry because of the extent that that industry was carried on around Belleville. Because of the fact that the association had been doing such good business in the district the city represented by Mayor Duff extended to them a hearty vote of welcome.

W. V. Drury, vice-president of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, responded to Mayor Duff's welcome. In a few sentences he said that the cheese makers were proud to have the convention in the city of Belleville. "This gathering of cheesemakers was second to none in the trade. Great advances had been made in the industry during the past season and we hope for greater advances in the year to come. The Association should go a little steady for a while until they were sure of their footing." Mr. Drury said that he would be glad to be of any assistance to anyone interested in the trade.

The president, W. E. Brennan, in his annual address, said he hoped that the members would not be too severe in their criticism of the board of management and the accomplishments of the Association. Even in preparing the program for this convention errors and omissions are evident. "You will no doubt realize that arranging this convention was a task of no small proportion and it is very doubtful if a presentable program could have been assembled had we not had the able assistance of part of Dr. Ruddick's staff."

Wanted Assistance

"The beginning of the association was an enthusiasm that sprang up among the cheesemakers for an organization that would assist and protect them to some extent at least. This feeling was soon fanned into activity. April 1st of this year saw each instructional group organized as a unit in itself and each group appointed its own officers from among the makers.

"On April 12, the officers of each group met in Belleville and formed the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association. The officers were elected, by-laws adopted and a charter applied for which was received August 29.

"News of its accomplishments has spread the length and breadth of this province and much further in dairying circles. The raising of the percentage of first grade and special grade cheese from 93.7 in 1927 to approximately 98% in 1928 is the news that is being voiced everywhere. In order to make this vast improvement the makers started to co-operate and in a short time the patrons also realized the objects of the association and began to assist the makers wherever possible. I cannot pass further without drawing attention to the hard work and hearty co-operation given the makers by the dairy instructors who encourage this work from the start."

Great Benefits Derived

"We cannot overlook benefits derived from this association from the start. Makers everywhere realize that it has given them an opportunity to express their thoughts and with some practise have been able to take their place with men of other professions and other walks of life. The road to perfection in this industry is still blocked by the odd careless factory patron and maker who cannot be eliminated in a hurry. We still have with us that rancid flavoured milk, which so far has defied experts to locate. It seems that continued research work along this line is the only solution.

"Our organization is still financially handicapped. Prizes have been offered for competition. Other associations are especially anxious for all associations to get working together and as both Western and Eastern Associations are represented here and the delegates will address you I believe the time is opportune to go into convention with them and co-operate along lines destined to benefit all concerned.

"I want also to refer to our official organ, The Ontario Milk Producer and Cheesemakers Journal. This journal should appeal to us as its management has for a long time tried to reach the cheese factory patrons but failed. The reports of all meetings of cheesemakers associations are being published in this journal.

"Before closing I want to appeal to every member to take a livelier interest in this association and assist in any way possible. I want to thank the officers and members of this association for the co-operation they have given me in trying to lead this organization along the straight and narrow path."

Evening Session

The first speaker of the evening was W. E. Tummon, M.P. Mr. Tummon welcomed his colleagues to the convention. He said, he was glad of the opportunity to speak to the men who had done such good work for the country as "Dairying is the most prominent industry in the district and has developed rapidly in the last half century. Great respect should be paid to the men who blazed the trail in cheese-making. It is a great thing, this association, as the cheesemarkers will co-operate and thus produce a better standard of cheese. The convention is certainly an excellent medium for discussing problems. Various policies will not do, you must co-operate for a mutual advantage to all." In closing, he said, "We must as a people meet the problems of each other to develop Canada as a whole and not in patches."

E. Maybee, M.P.

The second speaker on the program was E. Maybee, M.P., who in a few words stressed the importance of cheese-making, which is interlocked with dairying, was one of the most important industries in Canada. "Agriculture depends on its side issue, dairying, to a greet extent. The success of any country depends on the business, social and moral activities, and Canada has some of the greatest natural resources of the world between its borders."

Conveys Greetings

Col. R. Vanderwater, in a short but interesting address, spoke in behalf of Hastings County Council, and wished to convey the council's good wishes to the association. He stressed the fact that some consideration should be paid to those who had made the industry possible and who had put it where it is to-day.

Barney's Christmas Gift

(By Silver Birch)

"Barney—Barn-ey—Bar-n-ey — uh-h, uh-h— 'Tum here, Barney!"

Apparently Barney has come, thought Marjorie Frankish, as she stood motionless on the roadside, eavesdropping. Hidden from the view of the youngster, who judged from the long-drawn sighs emitted between the calls for his pet was in great distress, she shifted her position enough that she might discover the owner of the name.

Unaware of the fact that she really expected to see a dog of uncertain type, she was taken by surprise by the picture she saw not five feet from where she stood.

It was a pretty picture framed in boughs of cedar. A small boy, from appearance, about six years of age, knelt on his hand-sleigh, his arms tightly locked about the woolly head and neck of a good sized lamb.

Tears that had ceased to flow glistened on the sad little face. The heavy, subsiding sighs told of a big struggle within his breast.

"Barney, what would I do without you? Grandpa says you're a nuisance now that the cold weather is here—he says he can't afford to feed you all winter—and Uncle Bob says, perhaps Santa Claus will find his way here this year if I let him take you away and sell you to-morrow morning. Santa hasn't come to us since Mother and Daddy went to live with the angels, you know. Grandpa and grandma say that Santa can't keep track of us, we move so often; but we haven't moved since Uncle Bob came, so perhaps he'll find us this year—don't you hope so, Barney?"

Tears stole again down the pale little cheeks, falling unheeded and unfelt in Barney's coat of wool. They were hopeless tears—tears that caused Marjorie's heart to ache and throb until she forgot that her feet and hands were numb with cold.

"I guess I'd rather have you, Barney, a lot more than Santa Claus," she heard between the sobs. Then Barney, feeling that he had done his duty faithfully, trotted off back to the stable.

"Wonder who he is?" thought Marjorie. Then she recalled her mother having mentioned in a letter of some months ago, of new tenants on the fifty acres to the south of them—a couple of poor old people, and an orphan grandson.

Fumbling in her pockets she found a pencil and scrap of paper. The mail box (a crude wooden contrivance) served as a writing desk and a note was soon composed asking Uncle Bob (whoever he was) to spare Barney's sacrifice and watch for Santa this Christmas Eve.

The next morning found Marjorie Frankish, teacher of Crow's Hill, who had come home to enjoy a quiet holiday with her parents, in a whirlwind of plans and excitement on a shopping expedition. Warm mitts and stockings, a cozy scarf, cap and sweater, bags of oranges, nuts and candies and numerous tops (purchased in the ten and fifteen cent store) were packed into the car. A comfy hug-me-tight was added for grandma and heavy woollen sweater for grandpa.

Tissue paper, pretty ribbons and bright Christmas seals completed the list before she started for home to wrap up her gifts ready for the evening.

Uncle Bob was the only "fly in her ointment," for she felt sure it was he whom she had passed, on her way to the city, taking in on a light wagon one lonely lamb boxed in a crate. It's low bah! still haunted her memory.

In another part of the city, Bob Jimison exchanged his precious load for a crisp new ten-dollar bill, wondering to himself just how much of that sum could be spared for Christmas. Groceries enough to last for two weeks made the ten dollars look small and a bag of feed for the stock almost finished it. Only a few cents remained, and Bob Jemison knew only too well that the little roll of reserve money must not be touched.

"Give me fifteen cents worth of pop-corn," he added to the grocer on an afterthought. "Freddie will be pleased with them, I know," he said to no one in particular.

Freddie went to bed early as his Uncle had hoped. Christmas Eve had come to mean no more to him than any other evening. Still a Christmas morning had never yet slipped by without finding him awake long hours before the other occupants of the house. Bare little feet had each year carried him cautiously to the kitchen (the only warm room in the house, so of course Santa's place of visitation) to see if by chance Santa had found out where he lived since he came to grandma and grandpa's.

It was eight-thirty Christmas eve. Bob Jemison remained the only member of the family to keep vigil for the unknown Santa. Standing by the old kitchen stove he stirred a boiling mass of maple syrup. On the table (pulled up near the stove for convenience sake) rested a large pan of snowy white pop-corn waiting to be made into mapley balls of deliciousness. Uncle Bob was good to look upon—cheeks rosy from the heat of the fire, eyes bright and happy as a school boy's planning a picnic, his golden brown hair persisting in curling down upon his temples and—for once he had found time to "dress up."

He did not hear the uncertain tap upon the door nor see the fresh, cool figure that slipped inside and found itself rooted to the floor unable to speak or move. A breath of cold air and the feeling of another presence in the room caused him to cease stirring and look straight into the eyes of Marjorie Frankish.

It was more of a miracle than anything else that the pop-corn was ever made into balls, but Marjorie came to her senses first and insisted that the syrup would burn if he didn't "run away like a good boy," and let her superintend the job. He was only too willing, for what lovelier picture could he wish than a pretty girl, with a big apron and buttery fingers, rolling pop-corn into balls of numerous shapes and sizes and laughing with happiness all the while.

Bob explained, as they worked, but only very little of the explanation did she hear. All that really mattered was that Bob, her Bob (the civil engineer whom she had known for a few short months during her teaching career at Crow's Hill) had been inspired by her to pay a visit to his parents, whom he had sadly neglected during his struggle for ways and means for a college education.

With college degrees and a high record of good work he had met the little school teacher who had won his heart and set him thinking of home. With a light, "good-bye," he bade farewell to Marjorie, expecting to return to her in the course of a week, but passing years had wrought many changes. He travelled here and there and finally found his parents in a state of poverty trying to eek out a living off the small farm on which our story finds them. Bob was too deeply ashamed of his neglect to write the girl he loved until he had started them on the upward climb again. Then, and only then, would he resume his work as civil engineer. In due time he learned that his next door neighbor was the father of Marjorie Frankish and, fearing yet hoping, he awaited these holidays that would give him at least an opportunity to see her.

Amidst the talking, laughing and explaining the happy couple managed to cut a small Christmas tree from behind the house, decorate it with pop-corn balls and rosy apples, and arrange the gifts.

Marjorie left just as the clock struck the midnight hour with blushes on her cheeks and a knowledge that Santa had been good to her this year.

The early morning brought her back to the Jemison home as she had promised and warm was the reception she received e're she had reached the gate when Freddie and Barney came running at full speed to express their thanks and joy.

The sight of Barney wiped away the only spot of doubt in her heart; for of course she was silly not to think of it before—Bob had sold only one of his many lambs.

A strong rumor is current in England now that the Prince of Wales is engaged to wed a commoner, Lady Anne Maud Wellesley, whose most recent photograph is shown ABOVE. Lady Anne Wellesley is 18 years of age, and made her debut at the first royal court this year. She has been in ill-health of late and the prince is reported to have made frequent inquiries about her progress toward recovery while he has been in East Africa.

MISSION CIRCLE HOLDS BIRTHDAY

(Examner Correspondence)

CAVAN, Dec. 5.—A very successful Missionary anniversary tea was held in the parsonage on Monday evening.

The program for the evening opened with community singing led by the Rev. F. Carpenter.

The president, Mrs. R. S. Staples then took charge of the following program:—Piano instrumental, Doris Tinney; vocal duet, Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Irene Carpenter; recitation, Ralph Staples; instrumental duet, Audrey Nill and Dorothy Cobbly; recitation, Mr. Carpenter; subjects were distributed for impromptu speeches and these were well responded to. Almost every person spoke and the subjects were well taken.

Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Carpenter had charge of a guessing contest. Objects were grouped around the room, each group or object representing the name of a Missionary station or province. Thus the core of an apple and a large 'a' represented Corea.

In the beginning of the evening each person was asked to name the month in which his or her birthday fell and a slip of paper with the name of the month on it was pinned on and worn during the evening. Those entering the contest grouped themselves according to the seasons; forming four groups. The group of those whose birthdays fell in December, January and February, won the box of candy, for naming the most groups of objects, correctly. The convenor of this group was W. Pritchard and an unusual feature was that it was composed principally of men, only a couple of ladies being on the group.

Lunch was served, consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee. At the conclusion of lunch Mrs. Carpenter took charge of a beautiful birthday cake which she had made for the occasion. It held the place of the occasion. It held the place of with two candles in silver candlesticks placed one on each side of it, signifying the number of years since the organization of the Cavan branch of the W.M.S..

Mrs. Staples, the president of the W.M.S. since its organization cut the cake and it was passed around and proved as good in taste as it was in appearance. Two visitors were present, who in their own homes take an active part in church work. Mr. Empey of Lennox county, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Staples, and Miss Weeks, of Melville, Prince Edward County, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. Snider.

A silver collection in aid of the allocation of the W.M.S. was taken.

Prince Albert de Ligne of Belgium will attend the exposition to-day to award the grand prize to the champion Belgian stallion of the horse show.

Directors of the exposition re-elected all officers at the annual meeting yesterday, adding Robert H. Hazlett, Eldorado, Kansas, Hereford breeder, to the board.

The Hereford herd of Walter J. Hill, of Montana, owner of one of the largest cattle ranches in the country, produced the champion cow of the show yesterday.

Hall's Bridge

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HALL'S BRIDGE, December 6. — Rev. Elias W. Gardner, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McIlmoyle for a few days, motored to Bobcaygeon on Monday, and made train connections there for Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Wilson, of Young's Point, were the guests of the former's parents at Hall's Bridge for the week-end.

Miss Thelma Duggan, of Smith Township, was in the village on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pearson, who have been visiting relatives in Smithfield for a few days, have returned home.

Mr. Leonard Wilson, of Young's Point, was in the village on Friday evening.

The country roads in the vicinity of Hall's Bridge are in excellent condition at the present time. The light fall of snow has filled in all the small holes, with the consequence that motoring is good. One or two very optimistic sleigh drives have already ventured out with sleighs and cutters, but the roads as yet are not in such condition that good sleighing is possible.

St. Matthew's Anglican Church has lately been treated with a new shingled roof. The work was speedily and effectively carried out.

Friends of Mrs. Fehner, the mail carrier between Hall's Bridge and Catchacoma, will be glad to know that she is making splendid recovery from the accident in which she fractured her wrist.

You will find many things in the Classified Ads. of The Examiner.

The Surprise

(By Mrs. Robin Livingstone, Peterborough.)

"What shall I give you, woman dear,
Kiss for your eyes, pearl for your ear;
Praise to requite you,
Toils to delight you,
Or trophies that shall leave your name
Canopied by outlasting fame?
Alas! much less!
Give me, oh give me faithfulness.
. . . . . Ask less—
He will not give you faithfulness."
—Herbert Trench.

This verse which she had read in a recent book, from the Library, kept repeating itself in Judy Lathom's mind, as she went on with her preparations for Christmas Eve supper. Judy was a brunette of 22, medium height, and although you could not say she was beautiful, there was a charm she had which was undeniable. Her dark, curly hair shone in the glow from the log fire, and her eyes sparkled in anticipation of the pleasant evening ahead of her. For weren't her dearest friend and her lover coming (Judy's) for supper, and maybe they would go to a show if Hugh could spare the time. Hugh was Judy's sweetheart, a rising young lawyer in a downtown office. They were both without near relatives, Judy being from Scotland and Hugh from Derby, in England.

Each had been pretty lonely until they met at the home of a mutual friend, and were immediately attracted to each other. All their friends teased them about "love at first sight," and that was really what it was.

Hugh was 25, six feet tall, fair hair, and was rather unsure of himself, when with girls, as he had had no sisters, being the only son of his mother, who was a widow, and of a quiet, retiring nature.

Judy worked in the diet kitchen of a nearby hospital, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and had hurried home to complete the arrangements for the supper she was giving, which was really an "occasion" for her.

She loked around the tiny living-room, dining - room combined, straightened a cushion and changed the flowers from one part of the table to another. The verse she had read kept repeating itself, and she gave herself a little shake. Why should any old verse make her doubt Hugh? Hadn't he always shown he loved her? But the thought persisted. She went ahead setting the table, putting on a snowy linen cloth, and wishing once more she had the silver teapot to match her sugar and cream set.

She glanced in the oven, and saw that everything would be ready just in time, then decided to run over and see young Mrs. Graham, who lived in the apartment across the hall. Mrs. Graham, who had been married two years was in a pessimistic mood.

"I don't know what to think of Bill," said she, "he has been out each vening for the last three weeks, and he keeps putting me off when I ask him where he is."

"Doesn't he tell you?" asked Judy.

"Well, he tells me in a way; says he is working at the office, but when I ring he isn't there." When I told him I rung the office, he got mad, and now we don't speak of it, but it worries me."

"Surely you don't suspect him?" asked Judy.

"Well," young Mrs. Graham replied, "I don't trust men very far. There's a good-looking stenographer in the insurance office where he works, and Bill isn't bad looking, and who knows wether she's trying to flirt with him or not?"

"Oh, I wouldn't feel like that, Mrs. Graham," said Judy. "I'd trust Hugh anywhere."

"Well," retorted Mrs. Graham, "you can't be too sure; just look at Mrs. So-and-So"—and she went on to recount a tale she had heard of a couple whom they both knew.

Judy broke away at last, saying she smelt something burning, and returned to her own small apartment.

As she went in the door she saw a note had been stuck sideways by the knob, and on opening it found it was from Hugh, asking her to put supper off until about 9 or 9.30, as he was unavoidably detained at the office, with some importan' business. Her heart sank when she read it, and thought about the dainty meal she had been at such pains to prepare.

"Oh, well," she thought, "Laura and I will have it together, and we will go to a show and be home in time for Hugh." But she felt sadly disappointed. So she hurriedly altered the table, and sat glancing over a magazine until Laura should arrive. But six o'clock came, half-past, then seven o'clock, and no Laura. Judy felt too let-down to eat a solitary supper, so, not wanting to make explanations to Mrs. Graham, whom she was sure, knew that her friends hadn't come, she donned her hat and coat and decided to walk down-town and watch the last-minute scramble for Christmas presents. She wandered aimlessly down Yonge Street, bumped into every so often by parcel-laden pedestrians, and wondered idly why so many people would persist in waiting until the last possible moment, to do their shopping.

Her own presents were all ready to be given, and had been chosen so carefully, with a thought for each person's pleasure. Stopping before a large store she decided to look around for a book, which had been recommended to her, and started off for the book section. Her thoughts kept recurring to why Laura hadn't 'phoned or sent word, and she hoped she wasn't ill. Also she felt she had rather a grievance against Hugh, for letting any business stop him from coming when he knew how disappointed she would be.

So she struggled on through the crowd, dodging a stout woman with a large bundle and two whimpering children, and narrowly missing having her hat knocked off by a bewildered, elderly man, with a long paper-wrapped parcel carried over his shoulder. All at once, her heart nearly stopped beating. Over in another aisle, she saw Hugh and Laura laughing and talking together, while the clerk handed Hugh a parcel. Almost suffocating, she made her way out of the store. Hugh and Laura out shopping together! What could it mean? She could have staked her life on the honor of either of them. Laura knew how she loved Hugh, and she had constantly sung Laura's praises to Hugh. And now after putting her off with a flimsy excuse, here they were out together on Christmas Eve, the night she had so looked forward to. "Her last Christmas as Miss Lathom," Hugh had said, for in June they hoped to be married, if all went well. And now— How was she to bear it? Her sweetheart and her best friend. With her heart like lead she hurried home, and looked with desolate eyes on the room she had striven so to make attractive. She threw herself on the divan, and buried her head in the cushions, but the tears would not come.

What was it she had read?

". . . . . Ask less—
He will not give you faithfulness."

Surely this had not happened to her. He had always been so gentle and considerate of her. Last night they had planned where they would like to live, how they would furnish their home. Each agreed they would not want it cluttered up with a lot of useless things, but bit by bit, they would buy the things they wanted, as they would have to go slow at first.

". . . . . Ask less—
He will not give you faithfulness."

Oh, she thought, pushing her hair back from her throbbing head, she wished she had never read that awful verse.

She lay, and thought no one had ever been as miserable as she. Thoughst kept crowding her brain, until she felt she would shriek.

The telephone rang, but she would not answer it. It rang again, more insistently then ever, and at last she lifted the receiver and sent a faint "hello" over the wire.

Hugh's voice answered her . "Hello, Judy, I got through sooner than I expected, and I'm on my way. I've got Laura with me, and we will sure need that supper of yours, as I only had time for a sandwich at 6."

Judy made some kind of reply and hung up. Coming up, were they? All right! See if she would have supper ready for them. She would find out what excuse they gave her, and then tell them she had seen them. But, oh dear, what would she do, without Hugh and Laura? Losing her lover and her friend at one blow. And then the tears came in a flood, and her sobs nearly strangling her, she failed to hear the door softly opened, and footsteps tiptoeing into the room, until she felt Hugh's hand on her shoulder and his concerned voice asking, "What's wrong, Judy? Not bad news from the Old Country, is it? Not your dad?"

But by this time her overwrought nerves gave way, and she could only continue to sob into the pillow.

"Laura," said Hugh, "for Heaven's sake try and find out what is wrong. I never saw her cry before."

Then Judy got up, and said: "Don't touch me, Laura. When you didn't come for supper, I went out for awhile, and I saw you and Hugh shopping together in that store. I want an explanation."

Laura and Hugh looked at each other. "I told you, Hugh. You should have let her know."

" "But that would have spoiled it," said Hugh.

"What should I have known? Tell me now," said Laura.

"Give her the parcel, Laura," answered Hugh.

"I guess we made a fizzle of it."

"What are you both talking about?" cried Laura.

"Open the parcel, dear," said Hugh dejectedly.

Then Judy unwrapped the parcel, and found inside the silver teapot to match her sugar and cream set, and for which she had been longing so much. She looked from one to another.

"Was this what you both were buying for me," she said. "And I was such a silly creature as to suspect you both. Oh, I'll never be able to forgive myself."

"Wait, Judy," said Laura. "I'll tell you all about it. Hugh wanted to give you something you'd really like for Christmas, and he asked me if I knew of something you particularly wanted, and at last I told him of your longing for this particular kind of teapot. So nothing would do him but that he and I would go scouting until we found one. You remember I was to come here two nights ago? Well, we hunted that night, but had no luck. Then I tried to get off work this afternoon, but was kept until the last moment typing letters, and Hugh 'phoned and said we must go to-night. I 'phoned you about 4.30, but no one answered."

"I was in at Mrs. Graham's," said Judy, in a dazed voice.

"Well," continued Laura, "we went to five stores before we got the one we wanted. Surely, Judy, you didn't suspect Hugh and I?"

"It's all because of that dashed verse I read in a book from the library," said Judy, and she repeated the verse to them.

"Look here, young lady," said Hugh, "if you go tangling me up with verses you read in books, I'll have to spank you."

So to celebrate the happy end of the misunderstanding, Judy made tea in the silver teapot, which had caused all the trouble.

After Laura had gone and left the lovers together for their good-nights, Judy confided to Hugh that she wasn't very fond of surprises.

Next day Mrs. Graham, who had been so pessimistic about men, showed Judy the fur coat her husband had bought her, with the money he had earned in the evenings. But Judy kept quiet about her own suspicions, and hoped she would never be such a fool again.

Christmas In Hospital

(By Quid Est, Warsaw)

Christmas, 1917, in a stomach-ward in Moore Barracks.

Things in general were not looking a bit too well about Christmastime, 1917. People were anxious. Coal was scarce, even in the hospital. Trans-Atlantic mail had not come for some weeks.

In this particular stomach ward in Moore Barracks one sister had a brother missing, the other had been expecting her husband back from France for leave for several weeks.

However, every one got into the spirit of Christmas. The patients who were up decorated the wards, and there was a great deal of good-natured rivalry in the different wards. The men certainly had good taste. In one ward they secured an automobile headlight and it did make the effect beautiful, but Colonel Scott feared fire, so the lamp was discarded.

There was a Communion service at eight o'clock Christmas morning, which as many as could were expected attend. The sisters were supposed to ask the men to go. A good many went over themselves. When a sister from this stomach ward asked if any were coming to service, several men got up. She noticed one particularly who jumped up quickly and walked beside her, sat beside her, went to the altar with her, and came out with her; and then told her that was his first Communion. He had decided that if either sister said "come" to the men, he would, and just as soon as he could he would become an actual member of the church in which he was brought up.

There were all sorts of Christmas greetings, and the men all had gifts. Some of the nurses gave each man a gift, others gave extras for the Christmas feast. Everyone helped in some way, and every ward had its tree.

Christmas dinners and patients with stomach trouble do not usually meet, but these men were so anxious about Christmas, the Captain said to let all but two or three of the very sickest of them have the dinner; a few others were forbidden raisins, grapes or nuts; and the sisters were told to have their castor oil bottles filled.

Some of the wards had just one turkey, and a lot of roast beef, but this stomach ward fared better at the quartermaster's hands, for two large turkeys and five chickens came along. There was lots of dressing, gravy, mashed potatoes, green peas, cranberry sauce, pudding, grapes, nuts, oranges and ice-cream. Each man had both turkey and chicken and how they did enjoy it all. Some few were careful, but one could not blame those who were not, for making the best of their liberty to eat a whole meal, not just some diet. Before the afternoon was over, half of them were stretched out on their beds, and many wanted little or no supper of any kind, but not one but said the Christmas dinner was worth while.

The sisters fully enjoyed giving the men the good day, and had their Christmas dinner in the evening. What looked like Christmas cakes were on the tables, but were imitations which added to the prettiness of the tables.

Later on mail arrived, and delayed letters and parcels came from home. One man received a parcel which had been mailed to him for Christmas in Egypt for 1915. It had followed him for two years, and caught up to him in 1917. The Christmas cake was good; some litle cakes were powder, but the parcel was intact, and socks and other articles in good condition.

TWO CITY TEAMS IN JUNIOR O. H. A. SERIES

JUNIOR GROUP SCHEDULE IS DIVIDED INTO TWO SECTIONS

Two Teams, Lakefield and Each Division With Double Schedule.

WINNERS TO PLAY OFF.

Two Teams, Lakefield and Marmora, Make Up Intermediate Group.

The schedule for Group 2 of the Junior O.H.A. in which both the local teams, St. John's and the Peterborough Hockey Club, are playing was drawn up at a meeting of representatives of all the teams in the Empress Hotel Tuesday night. Convenor J. Percy Bond was in the chair. Representatives were present of the six teams in the junior group, consisting of Oshawa Shamrocks, Bowmanville, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and the two Peterborough teams. The schedule was also drawn up for Group 2 in the Intermediate series Lakefield and Marmora alone were represented. Tweed having decided to drop out.

It was decided early in the meeting that it would be best to split the junior group into two sections as a group consisting of six teams so widely separated would be unwieldy and travelling expenses too high. The St. John's representative, Bernard Park, made it plain that his team desired to play in the northern section with Bobcaygeon and Lindsay. A decision was reached placing Peterborough St. John's team, Bobcaygeon and Lindsay in Section A and a double schedule of games was drawn up. Section B was then formed of the three other teams, Peterborough Hockey Club, Bowmanville and Oshawa Shamrocks. All the teams in this urged a double schedule and this was arranged. The winner of each section will meet in home and home games on February 4th and 8th to decide the group championship.

Both sections open their schedules on December 28th Oshawa Shamrocks coming to Brock Street Rink to meet the Peterborough Hockey Club and St. John's team journey to Bobcaygeon to play the Northerners.

LAKEFIELD HOCKEY ASSOCIATION MEETS

Propose To Start Juvenile League For Players Under 15 Years of Age.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, December 6. — The opening meeting of the Lakefield Hockey Association was held on Monday evening, December 3, with the president, Dr. M. P. Kennedy, in the chair. The attendance was good and the enthusiasm was keen, promising a good season in Lakefield's favorite sport. Following up the suggestion made at the annual meeting held in April, a juvenile league for players 15 years of age and under on January 1 will be formed, and a schedule of games arranged. This is regarded as a reasonably certain way of keeping up the teams, as there is some promising material in the hitherto unorganized junior class.

District League.

The District League will be composed of players 20 years of age and under on January 1, who do not belong to any other league. The entries for both district and juvenile leagues will close on January 1.

The association is entering a team in the Intermediate O.H.A., and Dr. M. P. Kennedy and Percy Spence (president and secretary of the local association) attended the meeting in Peterborough on Tuesday night.

It was decided that new sweaters be purchased, the colors to be orange and black. The meeting also decided to elect Braden Blewett and John Sabatino as coach and captain respectively of the intermediate team.

Curling Club Meeting.

The opening meeting of the Lakefield Curling Club for the coming season will be held within the next fortnight, and in the meantime twenty-three have already signed up with the secretary, P. Spence. The list closes on Monday evening, December 10, and it is hoped that a large number will join the club, which has become an institution in the village, and is a source of great pleasure to many of the men. What the wives say is another and entirely different matter.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

One of the epic games of the earlier days of Peterborough hockey was the memorable battle in Waterloo on the night of January 30, 1899, when Captain A. A. Hollingshead led the Peterborough Seniors in a sensational victory that sent the team into the O.H.A. semi-finals.

This was about the first invasion of Western Ontario by a Peterborough hockey aggregation and the game attracted widespread attention. The Waterloo team which included the famous "Grindy" Forrester and Liffiton and other crack players of that period had played in Peterborough the week before and had been beaten 6 goals to 3, but the Westerners expected an easy victory on their home ice and predicted that the Peterborough lead on the round would quickly disappear.

To the dismay of the Waterloo fans and to the delight of the Peterborough rooters who made the trip and of Berlin citizens who cheered the downfall of their neighbors with a vengeance, the visitors ran in three goals during the first half while Waterloo failed to score. Ernie Wasson, Peterborough goaler, rose to great heights on this occasion, stopping shot after shot in the first period and when Waterloo staged a determined offensive in the second half and outscored Peterborough 4 to 2. Wasson's great blocking robbed Eddie Seagram's team of a chance to get some consolation by winning the game, even if the round was beyond saving, the Petes winning 5 to 4. This game was memorable too because of the playing of Bill Crowley, figuring in his first year in senior hockey. Crowley, afterward one of the stars of several Peterborough championship teams as defence man played on the forward line in this notable Waterloo for Waterloo.

The interest taken in the clash between ePterborough and the Westerners is best illustrated by the following from the Toronto News: "The Peterborough players returned from Waterloo late yesterday and while in town en route home the victorious hockeyists were beseiged by hundreds of anxious local enthusiasts, who eagerly inquired for news of the battle. The great game was rehearsed in all its details, the consensus of opinion being that Waterloo had seen the fastest game of the year."

The Berlin (Kitchener) News-Record said in its notes of the game:

"The visitors' defence was a veritable Gibraltar. Lionel King played a star game and upheld his reputation as one of Ontario's best forwards. Two of a kind were Westwick and Liffiton. They were hot stuff but Peterborough was hotter."

The line up:

Waterloo—Goal, Koehler; point, Forrester; cover point, Clemes; forwards, Hendry, Liffiton, Westwick, Robson.

Peterborough—Goal, Wasson; point Reynolds; cover point, Hollingshead; forwards, Belleghem, Crowley, Davidson and King.

Referee—Gauthier, Osgoode Hall.

To-morrow—The great Peterborough-Varsity struggle of 1899.

PETERBORO WON GILDERSLEEVE CUP IN KINGSTON AND HARRY LEBRUN SANG LA MARSEILLAISE

Held the Trophy Three Years —Won Permanent Possession.

LACROSSE MEMOIR.

Some of the 1881 Players Are Active Citizens To-day.

(By HUGH FAIRFAX)

Harry LeBrun is dead these many years, but his singing of "La Marseillaise" that night in Kingston, Thursday, August 18, 1881, the day the old Peterborough lacrosse team won the Gildersleeve Cup, reechoes still with all its resonance in the memories of the surviving few who heard him.

That was forty-seven years ago. In these years the Gildersleeve Cup was the symbol of lacrosse supremacy in all eastern Ontario, and the leaves in Vallombrosa were not thicker than the fast and sturdy lacrosse teams in most of the towns and villages all the way from Toronto to the Ottawa River. Players were usually so numerous and expert that there was never much difficulty in fielding a team, but the selection of the best twelve men from such abundant excellence was often a local problem. "Hold outs" were few in those days, and factious, undesirable players could be easily dispensed with because there was plenty of capable substitutes.

Like the Carew Cup.

Mayor Gildersleve of Kingston had put up his trophy for competition in 1878. Kingston had held it the first year. Belleville and Cornwall seem to have had a share of its possession, but by 1881 it was back on its native heath. The conditions of competition for it were similar to those governing the John Carew cup in Ontario curling of recent years. The team that succeeded in winning it from another was obliged to accept any challenge to play for it within two weeks. If the club failed to arrange for a game within that time, it was required to deliver the cup to the challenger. But there were no weak surrenders, and least of all the Peterborough team, which retained it against all comers for three years, and secured permanent ownership of it.

Some anxious supporters of the Peterborough team expressed the criticism that a few of the players were not taking a sufficiently serious attitude toward the big game ahead of them, and some absences from practice set timid heads awagging with visions of defeat. But after all, Peterborough won easily by three goals to none. At that time lacrosse victory went to the team first scoring three goals. An indication of a close contest would be a three to two score, as when each team would get two goals, forcing the play to the scoring limit. For, five goals were the maximum and three the minimum. That day in Kingston, Peterborough ran in three in a row, and another that was disallowed.

The Peterborough team was as follows: Jack Donoghue, goal, Billy Rudkins, Joe Joyal, Jack Simpson, Mick Halpin, Mike McDonald, Jimmy Sheehy, centre, Kit Rutherford, Jim Coughlin, R. H. (Dod) Fortye and Harry Phelan. Mike Tierney went along as spare man.

Welcomed in Kingston.

The team left Peterborough on Wednesday, and the next morning the players were welcomed by municipal and lacrosse officials and were shown the sights of Kingston including the penitentiary, the old fort, barracks, college and other places of interest which are included to-day in similar itineraries. The Limestone city's team looked clever and fast in practice, but when the game started about four o'clock Jimmy Sheehy scored the first goal in fourteen minutes. Harry Phelan got another, but for some reason it was not counted. The final goal went to Phelan on a pass near the Kingston nets from Halpin.

That night at the splendid banquet given by the Kingston Lacrosse Club, Harry LeBrun was called upon for a speech. It had been a great day for him. He had followed and directed the Peterborough play, and he was possibly the happiest and most excited of the Peterborough clan.

Sang The Marseillaise.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman", he said, "but I can't make a speech in English very well, but I'll sing a song". And encouraged by a burst of applause Harry abruptly began the "Chant de Guerre" of Old France.

"Allons enfants de la patrie
Le jour de gloire est arrive.."

and so on down to the exclamatory

"Aux armes citoyens, formez vos battaillons, etc."

Mr. LeBrun had a tremendous voice, and the occasion inspired the song that was probably close to his heart. People a couple of blocks away may have heard him, and the dinner gathering was on its feet cheering. Of such days and nights with friends and friendly enemies are memories of some men enriched.

Team Welcomed Home.

The return of the eterborough team was a continuous ovation. Lacrosse men were at all the stations to congratulate Peterborough, at Napanee, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope and Millbrook, and a great crowd at the Peterborough station where Mayor Harry Smith and members of the town council were waiting to extend an official welcome to home. Mayor Smith, a lawyer, afterwards went to Winnipeg, and died there two years ago. The town paid tribute to the team which had so well earned one of the greatest sporting honors of its day. A few weeks later Kingston challenged for the Cup. The game was arranged to be played at the P.A.A.A. grounds, now Cricket Place, but the Kingston team failed to appear. The Peterborough Club hadn't time to notify the public that there would be no game, so they picked two teams for an exhibition match. The manager of the Kingston team sent a profound apology, saying that at the last minute some of his men could not get away from work.

For three years Peterborough turned back challengers, and as the season of 1893 was drawing to a close the Maple Leafs of Kingston made a final bid. The game was played here on Monday, September 17, 1883, and Kingston were soundly beaten. The local team was: T. Giroux, P. Rudkins, J. Joyal, J. Reynolds, M. Tierney, M. McDonald, J. Sheehy (still holding down the centre field position), A. Yelland, M. Halpin, Kit Rutherford, W. Rudkins, George Giroux and Billy Sanderson, field captain.

George Giroux scored the first goal, Yelland the second on a pass from Billy Rudkins, and Rudkins got the third in a combination with Rutherford.

Beginning of the End.

With that victory Peterborough secured permanent possession of the trophy. The next day after the game the Club gave a dinner in honor of Pat Rudkins, who was leaving for Montreal to continue his studies for the priesthood. Jimmy Sheehy read the felicitous, parting address, W. A. Sanderson presented young Rudkins with a gold watch with its engraved record of the occasion. His brother, William Rudkins, has used the watch since his brother's death. The address was signed on behalf of the Club by the following members: Harry LeBrun, president, W. J. Devlin, Archie Moffat, R. H. Fortye, John Hackett, Thomas LaPlante, M. Giroux, A. Yelland, W. A. Sanderson and J. J. Sheehy.

The last episode of that bright chapter of the Lacrosse Club was recorded on November 16th, 1883 when the Club, at a dinner in the St. James Hotel, gave the trophy to Mr. LeBrun. To-day it is probably to be found in the home of his widow in Toronto. Once upon a time it was a rich prize for which the fleetest and smartest young lacrosse men of Eastern Ontario used to struggle in contests that were uninviting to weaklings.

Were All Amateurs.

As captain of the team Harry LeBrun was a strict disciplinarian. If he ordered the men to be in their hotel by nine o'clock, they had to be there, and there wasn't much inclination to disobey the club orders because the men were in the game for the love of it. They were hundred per cent. amateurs, paying their membership fees into the Club, usually paying travelling expenses, receiving only whatever rebate the partition of the club's share of the gate permitted.

The young men in their games to-day will ultimately realize that their contests and associations together are all too soon forgotten, but few of them will know the deep joy of that lacrosse team of 1881 and the ecstatic spirit that rang in the diapason voice of Harry LeBrun as he sang the line: "Le jour de gloire est arrive". It was their day of glory.

LEAF PLAYERS WITH TIGERS

$100,000 and Three Players Paid For Prudhomme and Alexander.

WHOLESALE TRADING.

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

TORONTO, December 6. — A day of active trading in the baseball market will result in changes of uniforms for many players next spring. After a deal between Toronto and Detroit was announced by which First Baseman Dale Alexander and Pitcher John Prudhomme went to the Tigers for three players and a reported sum of $100,000, the trades began to fall thick and fast about the lobby of the convention hotel.

Toronto will get First Baseman Sweeney from Detroit and two pitchers whose names have not been announced.

A trade between the Boston Red Sox and St. Paul of the American Association involved five players, the identity of one not being revealed.

Bryan (Slim) Harriss, one of the tallest pitchers in baseball, and Third Baseman Bill Rogell were sent to the Saints in exchange for Alex. Caston, a catcher, and Russell Scarritt, an outfielder. A catcher will be supplied by the Red Sox later.

Back to Buffalo.

The St. Louis Browns sold Pitcher Walter Beck to Buffalo of the International League, and the Phillies sent two pitchers and an outfielder to the Pacific Coast League. The pitchers, Augie Walsh and Russell Miller, will get tickets to Los Angeles while Art Jahn goes to Portland.

The Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League bought Eddie Mulligan, an infielder, from Pittsburgh.

Bornie Neis was bought by the Cincinnati Reds from Seattle, but it was believed that the little outfielder would stop at Columbus, Ohio, the American Association farm of the Reds.

A trade between the American Association and International League clubs was completed with difficulty. Indianapolis proposed to give First Baseman Maurice (Dick) Burrus and Catcher Paul Florence to Rochester for Catcher Monyhan. The Columbus Club, however, refused to waive on Florence and not until last night could President Jim Perry prevail on President Joe Carr to let the former Georgetown University catcher pass out of the league.

After Bert Niehoff had been elected by the gallery as the manager of the Louisville club of the American Association the men who do the hiring and firing for the Colonels stepped in and turned the job over to Alan Sothron, the former coach of the St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Braves, and a great pitcher when he was in his prime as an athlete.

The Little Rock Southern Association club bought Pitcher Phil Mulcahy from the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast league. New Orleans traded Pitcher D. E. Miner to Nashville for Pitcher Oscar Fuhr. Another Association club, Atlanta, bought Pitcher James Brice and Infielder Bill Marriott from Buffalo. Brice was with Binghampton last season.

Selma, Ala., in the Southeastern League, purchased the contract of First Baseman Calen Huffman from the Oklahoma City club of the Western League.

With the football season comes the anti-football season. Each year college football is under fire because of its "brutality and overemphasis."

Panthers Blank Visitors To Take Third Place in Loop Standing.

LONDON, Ont., December 6. — The Panthers are perching all alone on the third rung of the Canpro ladder following their 3 to 0 defeat of Newsy Lalonde's Big Roar crew here at the Arena last night. The two clubs fighting it out for the right to stay in the first division provided a smaller crowd than was anticipated with the cleverest and highest geared display yet put on this season on the local ice and starting with the second period, when the first scoring made its appearance, play went up and down the ice at a breath taking gait, only stopping for rare interruptions as subs were tossed over, and the still rarer toots that came from Jerry Laflamme's little tin clarinet.

MARLBOROS REACH S.P.A. FINAL ROUND

Defeat Young Rangers By Decisive Margin—Harvey Jackson Stars.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—Marlboros appear a permanent fixture in the S. P.A. junior finals, qualifying again to enter the championship contest for pre-season honors by beating Young Rangers 10 to 1 at the Arena Gardens last night, and their supremacy in the play was just as large as on the score sheet. The Marlboros have been in the finals for the Sportsmen's silverware seven successive times, which includes the years they played under the name of St. Mary's, and on Monday it will be their eighth try for the trophy. Five times they have been successful in capturing the honors and on their showing last night and all through the elimination series, they will be favorites to regain the honors by toppling the winner of the Toronto Canoe Club v. West Toronto semi-final which will be played to-morrow night.

"THE FLEET'S IN" CLARA BOW. THE SCREEN'S PRESENT MOST POPULAR STAR'S NEWEST, IS AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT

What do sailors do when on shore leave?

"The Fleet's In!" Clara Bow's latest Paramount starring hit, depicts in a novel manner what a large percentage of "gobs" do the minute they touch shore after a long routine training cruise at sea.

Malcolm St. Clair, the director, spent several days at San Pedro, port of Los Angeles, and at San Francisco studying the ways of sailors of the United States battle fleet, and how they conduct themselves when away from their ships.

For this reason the majority of the scenes in the picture will interest ex-service men beyong their appeal as entertainment, for they will recall memories of those all too infrequent hours on shore, away from the discipline of naval training.

"I found that the most popular form of entertainment for sailors was dancing. The dancing ability of a sailor is traditional, beginning from the time of the 'hornpipe.' That dance has undergone a transition in modern times and the sailors are just as adept at all the modern dances as anyone else. I also found that in nearly ever seacoast city, dance halls flourish for the entertainment of sailors on shore leave. I have incorporated all these things in Bow's picture, and I believe we have reproduced these important incidents in the lives of our sailormen with realistic atmosphere," said St. Clair.

Miss Bow's role in her new picture is that of a dance hall hostess. It is her duty to encourage the sailors to buy as many dance tickets as possible. The role gives her opportunity to give vent to her characteristic mannerisms which have brough her to the highest pinnacle of screen fame.

James Hall and Jack Oakie have the leading parts opposite the star. They are the chief figures of an intense rivalry swirling about the red-headed hostess and the subsequent climax is exciting to behold.

"The Fleet's In!" is the feature attraction at the Capitol to-night.

SPIRIT OF WEST FEATURES FILM

"Kit Carson," Starring Fred Thomson, Big Hit; Has Notable Cast.

Magnificent scenic backgrounds, spectacular dashes of Indian hordes, a swiftly moving story in which the spirit of the west of ninety years ago has been caught, are the outstanding featurdes of Fred Thomson's Paramount special, "Kit Carson," which opens at the Regent theatre to-night.

In the broad sweep of the narrative has been woven the threads of two love stories which figured in the life of the famous trapper and scout—that of an Indian girl for Kit Carson, played by the western star, and that of Kit Carson for a beautiful Spanish girl. It has its lighter moments too, with a series of old time trappers at play Silver King, Mr. Thomson's famous white horse, contributes his share both to the drama and the laughter.

The cast is exceptionally strong. Raoul Paoli, as the French-Canadian trapper and rival of Kit, gives a most distinguished performance. Nora Lane, who registered so heavily in other Thomson productions, adds to her laurels also in the picture. Dorothy Janis, a newcomer, gives promise. William Courtright, gives his customary lovable characterization.

The film was taken in its entirety on the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona and a great deal of research work was undergone by Mr. Thomson in giving the picture an authentic touch. Few pictures can compare with this production for sheer pictorial beauty, but the directors, Alfred Werker and Lloyd Ingraham, didnt' allow their fondness for background to interfere with the development of their story.

DRAFTING ROOM LEAGUE.

Owing to their decisive victory over the luckless Watts on Monday night, the Cycles are leading in the Drafting Room League with 48 points. Hugh Morton's gang had an "on night" and they piled up 2,691 pins for a total pinnage while Waterman was exceptionally brilliant in the second game making a high single amounting to 324. Bob Hay for the Watts had two games over 200 resulting in a high trio of 635 which was the best score of the game.

The Volts turned in the heaviest hitting of the night, taking high total pinnage 3,122 and also had the high total pinnage for any single game 1,140. Their 8 point gain over the Hi-Pots brings their total up to 40 but chances of winning are very slim as next Monday's games will complete the first half. Dave Grant and H. Foster were toppling the pins in Al style, the former collecting a high three total of 703 and the latter 715. Foster with 305 pins for a single game and was given a run for his money by M. Metherel who made 304 and also had a nice trio score of 676.

The Short Circuits side-stepped a shut-out in their battle with the Ohms by a flash of brilliant bowling when they captured the third game, making 2 points. R. Derrick for the Circuits took high single honors as well as high three with 260 and 592, while J. McCarney was the stellar performer for the winners with 241 and 587.

ENGINEER'S LEAGUE.

The completion of the first half of the sechedule in the Engineer's League shows the Price Setting No. 1 team which has either led or been tied all the way, sitting pretty in first place with 60 points out of a possible 72 Next in line are the Mechanical Engineers and D. C. Section who are tied for second place with 50 points each, while the Industrial Control Sextette who were nosed out by the Mechanical Engineers are third in line with 44 points.

SHOP LEAGUE.

The Stores Dept. Bowlers winners of Group 3 of the Shop League were handed quite a jolt last night when the Engineers rode them to a two game win. Although Weese and Playford performed in their usual brilliant manner their three team mates slumped badly, allowing the steady pin toppling of the Engineers to pile up a comfortable majority. Bill Stewart and Benson for the winners were the feature performers.

GOVERNORS BACK CALDER'S RULING

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (Canadian Press).—The inner circles of the National Hockey League were stirred yesterday by a "fight for a principle." It lasted more than three hours and ended with President Frank Calder of Montreal sweepingly victorious over the New York Americans on the big question of their right to the goal keeping services of Roy Worters.

In fact, so thoroughly was the President's hand upheld in a special session which paid him the unexpected tribute of extending his term of office from one to five years, that he appeared disposed to be generous toward the losers.

"The principle that players under suspension are not to be traded has now been upheld," said President Calder, "and I do not expect to be too hard on anybody."

He would not say definitely whether Worters, the star Pittsburgh goalie, who drew a suspension for holding out for a big salary boost and while under the ban was purchased by the Americans, would be permitted to play for the New York club.

"I do not want to make a snap judgment on this," President Calder said, as he left the meeting. "I will probably make an announcement when I get back to Montreal.'

He left for his home last night.

Meanwhile, Worters is still with the New York team which is scheduled to play the Maroons at Montreal to-night.

Calder Sustained

The upshot of the meeting was that the President was sustained, the Americans' appeal dismissed, and the future of the player left entirely in Calder's hands. So much for the principle. It is now in order for the special circumstances surrounding the Worters' case to be considered by the league head, with it practically certain that Worters will be allowed to continue with the Americans who gave Benny Leonard's Pittsburgh club $20,000 and Joe Miller for him.

Calder's ruling all along has been that Worters could play only for the Pirates, as it would be a dangerous precedent for a wealthy club to dicker for the services of a suspended holdout.

Just to show there were no hard feelings, William V. Dwyer of the Americans seconded the surprising resolution presented by Connie Smythe of Toronto, and passed unanimously that the constitution and by-laws providing for a one-year term for president be ignored and Calder's tenure lengthened to include the next four years. He was elected in May.

Turn Down Offer

The other New York club, the world champion Rangers, received a setback when Charles Hughes, owner of the Detroit Cougars and Detroit Olympics, who was present at the special session of the board of governors, turned down the Rangers' sensational offer of $17,500 for Harvey Rockburn to bolster their crippled defense. Hughes said the young minor leaguer is too big a drawing card with the Olympics to lose.

The hockey schedules for the groups in which Peterborough teams are playing have been drawn up.

With the first game for both the local Junior teams slated for December 28 all are anxious for a cold dip that will soon bring ice.

It is to be hoped that there are about four teams getting lined up for the City League Hockey. It's in this league and the Church League that the players learn the game. Meetings for both these leagues should soon be held for the purpose of getting things started.

The Sacred Heart Hockey Club held a meeting last night and will likely enter a team in the City League.

The hockey players at the "Y" last night lost a few pounds and tested their lungs in another snappy drill under he orders of Bert Nicholls, who was formerly with the 21st Batalion and learned all about P.T. training at the Army School, Aldershot, England. Some of the players noticed between bends were:—Lightheart, Foley, Gillespie, Cripps, Swanger, Williams, J. Mayette, Maudsley, Hall and Kenneally. The list shows that there are a good many hockey players who should have been there and weren't.

There are big happenings at the National Minor league's convention being held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, and when the smoke clears away there will be numerous changes in many lineups. The Toronto Leafs are putting over several important deals. "Lena" Staples, their catcher and a good one, has been sold to the Reading club. The biggest deal was the purchase of Dale Alexander and Johnny Prudhomme by the Detroit Tigers for the huge price of $100,000 and three players. These two stars wanted to be sold to the majors and the Leafs needed the money. The deal was satisfactory all round.

The Regina Junior rugby team, champions of Western Canada, arrived in Toronto yesterday and had a light workout at the varsity stadium. The team is reported to have looked well in the brief practice and all reports indicate that they will make a much better showing than their senior team did last Saturday against Hamilton. The Regina Pats will play the St. Thomas team, worthy champions of the East, this Saturday in the Western Ontario town.

The report comes out of Oshawa that there is a large supply of players for the intermediate team. It is said that something like fourteen have already signified their willingness to come out with the hockey team, but we remember last spring they had something like thirty players turn out with the ball team and then they didn't have much of a team from the whole outfit.

BASEBALL WAR LOOMS

Once again the International Baseball League is all agog. The former prospects of a peaceable annual meeting have gone blooey. The presentation of the pennant to Rochester will, to be sure, take place. But this polite ceremony will be quickly booted out of the limelight to bare the boards for a real row over a festering issue which is all ripe to prick.

The question is, shall the International League, a class AA organization, vote as a unit for or against the new draft proposal which the major leagues are putting up for adoption this year. It has been intimated quite plainly by the majors that the class AA leagues, as well as the other minors, must fall in line, and write the new draft provisions into the national baseball agreement. The penalty for failure to acquiesce, it has been hinted quite broadly, will be a termination of trading and buying relations with the big minors.

Apparently the International League is itself divided on the question, which just now is being discussed with great earnestness.

Assuredly since September the boys have brought wrinkles to the usually serene brow of Prexy Toole, president of the league, who had nothing to say on this issue at the time of going to press. It may be safely predicted, however, that sentiment in the International loop is against accepting the major leagues' proposals. The class AA leagues feel that they are now big enough to be exempt entirely from the draft.

Col. Jacob C. Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, world major league champions; also Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Americans, are in Toronto for this meeting, which will take place from Dec. 5 to 8 inclusive.

JACK McCARNEY NEW PRESIDENT OF HOCKEY CLUB

Officers Elected At Annual Meeting of C.G.E. Works Hockey Club.

MOTIONS PASSED.

Club Would Enter Two Senior Teams in the City League.

The annual meeting of the Canadian General Electric Company Works' Hockey Club was held Tuesday, December 4th, in the lecture room of the Laboratory, and officers for the coming year were elected. Mr. Begley, president for 1928, occupied the chair, and in his opening speech briefly reviewed the activities of the past season, which considering the many obstacles which confronted the executive, was very successful, due directly to the untiring efforts and hearty co-operation of the officers, especially the secretary, S. J. Hayes, who shouldered the big half of the burden, and successfully carried it through. Mr. Begley expressed his appreciation of the work of his assistants, the managers of the several teams, and the referees who helped to iron out the difficulties that arose during the past hockey season.

Mr. Hayes was then called on to read a report for the year and presented to the audience a financial statment that reflected credit on the business ability of the secretary and officers who, handicapped by a big outlay for a complete set of equipment, was still able to show a slight balance in the cash account. The report was accepted as read.

The motion by Mr. Begley, seconded by Mr. McGillen, that a Works' Hockey League be organized and that entries be received until December 16, carried, and the meeting was thrown open for nominations.

Mr. Begley was promptly nominated for president, but declined, claiming that it should be more appropriate for a younger man to succeed him in that capacity. S. J. Hayes was then unanimously elected for president, and A. J. Archambault to be secretary. Last year's governing body consisted of president, secretary and executive committee, consisting of three. This number of men handled the affairs of the club successfully, so adopting the same system again, the following officers were elected for the committe: Jack McCarney, J. O. Mitchell and Bill Bennett.

Motions Passed

After the motion by J. Pilling supported by Frank Woods, that the executive reconstruct the rules, and come to a decision with regards to the amount of the budget that will be necessary to cover the expenses of the coming season, the general discussion revealed the fact that everybody favored the idea of entering at least one, and if possible two, senior teams in the City League circuit, due probably to the outstanding success of the Tool Room who operated independent of the Athletic Club last year and won honors in the City League. Jack Pilling was the Logical choice of the members to represent the C.G.E. Works Club at any forthcoming meeting of the City League. The next motion to be carried out was the election of Sid. Gibbs, Jack Killoran and Bob Batley to form a committee whose duties are to ascertain how many players throughout the works are desirous of catching a place on the City League teams.

The feeling was paramount among the delegates present that something should be done to assist players who receive injuries during the course of any hockey game, and are inconvenienced as a result by loss of work and doctor's bills. As a result of a suggestion from Mr. Hayes the following resolution of something very similar is to be presented to the parent body so that unfortunate players will not have to bear the whole expense.

Moved by Mr. Simmons, seconded by J. Pilling, that when a member of the Social and Athletic Club is known to suffer hardship due to injuries received while participating in sports fostered by the said club, that the Association provide financial assistance to such a person when due inquiry indicates that such assistance is warranted, and that such should be provided in a manner that will not embarrass the person benefitted.

The next meeting will be held in two weeks time when it is hoped that at least 15 teams will have sent in their entries for the Shop League.

MISS ANNIE BURNS TO HEAD LEAGUE

Meeting Held For Purpose of Re-organizing Basketball in C.G.E.

A preliminary meeting for the purpose of reorganizing basketball among the girls in the plant and offices at the Canadian General Electric Company was held last night in the lecture room, when new officers were elected and suggestions received regarding the advisability of entering a team in the City League.

This year Miss Annie Burns will be president and will be assisted by Miss Blanche Abbott who was elected secretary-treasurer. The executive will also consist of the various team captains.

The following young ladies are requested to canvass their respective districts in order to ascertain how many employees are desirous of participating in this most interesting game, and to send in a list of the names of everyone interested to Miss A. Burns, of punch press department, not later than Friday, Dec. 7, at 5 p.m., in order that a practice may be arranged for Saturday afternoon, from 3.30 to 4.30 at the Y.W.C.A.: the Misses E. CANADIAN ORCHESTRA SCORES TRIUMPH

A distinct contribution to the advancement of Canadian music is the recording of two of the outstanding popular selections of recent years—Nanette and Frivolity—by the Eveready Concert Orchestra.

This orchestra, which has delighted the radio audience of CKNC with interesting programs during the past year, had the opportunity of making permanent records of the two selections when in Montreal last October to play at the Radio Show. The recordings were made by the Victor Talking Machine Company in their Montreal studio, and the records are being released this month.

COLLEGIATE NOTES

The opening exercises of commencement will be held on December 14 and at that time the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario and Minister of Education, will give the address for the school opening.

The carpenters are very busy in the electrical shop, and hope to have the rooms completed for the students' use around commencement time, December 14.

In the machine shop six new lathes have been installed and are also in operation. These machines were manufactured in the Canadian Machine Corporation at Galt, Ontario. They are motor driven in oanks of three: One 18in. Butler shaper, one 14in. drill press, one 12in. pedestal grinder, one bench grinder, one Parkson milling machine, complete, one sensitive drill and power hack saw.

The shop is certainly well equipped with vise, bench equipment, and a good, complete set of measuring tools, such as calipers, micrometers and dial indicators.

There is therefore nothing to hinder any boy from making a good success, especially in the 'ndustrial Section of the P.C.I.

FORCED TO SLEEP IN CHAIR—GAS SO BAD

"Nights I sat up in a chair, I had such stomach gas. I took Adlerika and nothing I eat hurts me now. I sleep fine."—Mrs. Glenn Butler.

Even the FIRST spoonful of Adlerika relieves gas on the stomach and removes astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the system. Makes you enjoy your meals and sleep better. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, McDermid Drug Co.

OBITUARY

MRS. THOMAS SHEEHAN.

LAKEFIELD, December 6. — The death occurred in Douro of Loretta Garvey, wife of Thomas Sheehan.

The funeral will take place Friday morning from St. Joseph's church.

JOHN HAY

BURNBRAE, Dec. 6 (Examiner Correspondence).—Another link with the storied past of this community was broken on Monday evening when the late John Hay passed to his reward at the age of almost 82 years. The deceased had been in his usual good health up until the last few weeks and took an active part in the work of the farm, performing tasks which many men years younger would shun.

The late Mr. Hay was born in Seymour Township on Lot 23, Concession 7, near the place where he resided at the time of his death. His whole life was spent within a few miles of his birthplace, but his circle of acquaintances was wide as evidenced by the large crowd of friends attending the funeral. A son of the late Andrew Hay, a pioneer settler of the district, the deceased was one of a typical pioneer family of which only one member, Mrs. Annie Thompson, Bonarlow, survives.

There remain to mourn the loss of the departed, his wife, formerly Janet Watson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson; six sons, Andrew of Rawdon, Albert and Thomas of Seymour, John of Peterborough, Kenneth of Rochester, N.Y., and Lorne at home, also two daughters, Mrs. William Watson of Vantage, Sask., and Miss Nettie at home. A daughter, Mrs. William Linn, passed away some three years ago.

Funeral services were conducted in St. Andrew's Church, Burnbrae on Wednesday afternoon, following interment at Burnbrae. Rev. B. A. McKenzie conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Hugh Shaw. A friend of the deceased, Albert Gifford, rendered a beautiful solo during the service.

The pall-bearers were neighbors of the late Mr. Hay, being Messrs. Harry Bedford, Charles Bedford, William Miller, Edwin Wilson, Harold Simpson, and George Anderson.

RUSSEL PEAKE.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 6. — Following an illness of seven days, Russel Peake died at his residence, on Tuesday, December 4th. Until the illness which proved fatal, he had been a man who enjoyed exceptionally good health. He was the son of the late Fred and Mrs. Peake, and was born on the English Line Farm, which at the time of his death he owned and operated. For three years he has been deputy-reeve of Seymour and by virtue of this office, attended the counties council of Northumberland and Durham, where he was considered a valuable member, not only by the council as a whole, but by the members of the various committees on which he had served during his term as member. During the present year he was a member of three committees of the Counties' Council: Roads and Bridges, Schools and the Committee of Agriculture.

Although not a member of any fraternal society, Russel Peake was a devout churchman, and a lifelong member of the English Line church. A successful farmer, he also employed his executive ability to advantage in live stock dealing and had established a reputation throughout the district for being a shrewd buyer. He is survived by his widow and four daughters: Muriel, age nine; Margaret, age seven; Helen, age five, and Dorothy, a child of two years. There also survive his step mother, three brothers and three sisters. They are Fred of Toronto; George, of Minneapolis; and Sam at home; Mrs. Austin MacKay, of Pope, Man.; Mrs. Fred Collett, of Toronto, and Miss Minnie Peake.

The funeral service will be held from his late residence on Friday, December 7th, at two o'clock. Interment will be in the English Line cemetery.

Pleasing Program Presented By Members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 6.—St. Anderw's Presbyterian Young People's Society of the church here were hosts to the sister society from Burnbrae on Monday night when the Sunday school rooms of the church were crowded with young people from both societies. he program was presented by the visiting society and the lunch was served by the home organization. During the program the chair was occupied by the Reverend D. A. McKenzie, Burnbrae, who addressed the gathering briefly on the aims which young people ought to have, their ambitions and success in the world. He also tendered some excellent advice when he reminded those present that they were living in a great, scientific age.

The following program was presented: Duet, mouth organ and piano, Mr. Haig and Mrs. Little; solo, Harold Taylor; humorous reading, Miss Hazel MacKenzie, encored; mouth organ solo, Leo Fry; violin solo, Miss Fern Weatherill, encored, the accompaniment by Miss Dorothy Watson; vocal solo, Malcolm Hutcheon, encored; mouth organ solo, Alfred Lynn; one act play, "Bugginsville Uplift Society" by seven of the members of the Burnbrae society in old time costumes. Before lunch was served the meeting was officially closed by singing the national anthem. It was also announced that the meeting next week will feature a debate: "Resolved, that missionary efforts have done more to extend civiliaztion than trade and commerce." The affirmative will be taken by Mrs John Storie and R. J. Allan. They will be opposed by Mrs. Scott and J. A. Anderson.

The Rev. W. J. Mark and Miss Hazel Atkinson moved a vote of appreciation to the visitors from Burnbrae for the excellent program they had presented.

PARIS THREATENED WITH HUGE SCANDAL

Hints Made Cabinet Ministers Involved in Shady Financial Deals.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—(A.P.)—Assets of 22,000 francs and liabilities of 219,000,000 francs, were the figures given out to-day by the legal and financial experts who have been delving into the mixed-up accounting system of the "investment" concerns whose headquarters here were with the subsidiary newspaper, Gazette du Franc.

The experts, who have been busy with a mass of documents and so-called account books in the palatial offices of The Gazette, said that the work was only half completed. Some of them thought that the ultimate loss to French savings might be close to half a billion francs.

Because of this hint, and also because yesterday a member of the Chamber of Deputies openly said that two Cabinet Ministers were involved with shady financial concerns, the identity of the third party implicated by the police became a matter of much comment. The authorities would not say who they expected to take into custody, but rumors and whispers were to the effect that the man was a prominent politician.

Fire Alarms

The fire brigade had a busy day yesterday with three calls, resulting from chimneys and overheated pipes. At 11.03 am. there was a call to 216 Perry street; a chimney fire which was easily put out with the aid of chemicals. At noon, 12.16 p.m., the brigade had a run to 479 Rubidge street, where the stove pipes were over-heated and one hour later a call was answered to 462 Elm street, where a chimney was on fire.

Only two Cases

At the present time, Peterborough city enjoys good health, according to the City Sanitary Inspector Stapleton. In conversation with The Examiner this morning, he stated that there are only two cases of typhoid fever in the city, and they have been confined to Queen Mary Isolation hospital.

Lights Installed

The linemen of the Peterborough Utilities Commission have completed erecting the colored lights on George and Charlotte streets.

FOUR CASES TO BE HEARD

the defendant's car while crossing the intersection.

It is alleged by the plaintiff that the defendant was unlawfully proceeding down Aylmer Street at a reckless rate of speed, and as a result the plaintive suffered serious injuries, head wound, body bruises and shock due to the recklessness and carelessness of the defendant.

The defendant denies driving negligently or in a reckless or careless manner or at an excessive rate of speed, and states that if the plaintive had been proceeding across the road with due care, she would have seen the car and avoided the accident. Contributory negligence is pleaded.

Gordon & Elliott are solicitors for the plaintiff and W. F. Huycke for the defendant.

William H. Thompson is claiming damages to the amount of $500 from the firm of McColl Bros., Limited, for wrongfully permitting a large quantity of gasoline, which had been stored on the defendant's property, to escape on to the plaintiff's premises to the injury of the plaintiff's enjoyment of his proprty.

The plaintiff is the owner of a house at 107 Hazlitt Street, and he resides there with his family. The defendant company is a wholesale dealer in motor oils and gasoline.

The plaintiff claims that the gasoline seeped into his cellar, causing unpleasant odors, to his and his family's intense discomfort.

The defendant denies that it suffered or permitted quantities of gasoline, stored by it, to escape from gasoline tanks and to saturate the lands of the plaintiff. The defendant alleges that if the gasoline did escape from the premises owned and operated by them, that such gasoline escaped by reason beyond the control of the defendant.

Naturalization Application.

There are four applications for naturalization to come before the same court. They are: Michael Angelo Lucano, an Italian; William Cinese, a Greek; Alessandro Autruo Pepe, and Francois Du Lacrio, Italians.

Storm Signals Down On Canals Although Still Slight Fog.

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Vessels were moving freely on Lake Superior and St. Mary's River to-day. A gale which tied up shipping yesterday died down during the night and a snowfall which hampered visibility ceased.

Storm signals are down at the canals this morning, and while snow has ceased there is a slight fog.

IN POLICE COURT

The aftermath of a recent raid on two South George Street houses, was the appearance in Police Court this morning of five men, four of whom paid fines totalling $310 and costs, while the fifth entered a plea of not guilty and was remanded, on request of the Crown, to December 13.

Harry Elmhurst of Keene was the first to appear, pleading guilty to a charge of keeping, having or consuming liquor in a place other than his own private residence. He was fined $100.00 and costs.

Charles Fife, also of Keene, indignantly protested that he had merely been carrying some "wet goods" for another party and was not guilty of a similar charge to that faced by Elmhurst. He pleaded accordingly and was remanded for a week.

Edward Teaubault fared not so well. He faced a charge of having liquor without a permit, and when asked how he pleaded, declared: "Guilty of one glass of beer."

"It will be the most expensive glass you have ever had, I'm afraid," replied the Magistrate.

The Chief of Police stated that Teaubault has been a quiet living man. The minimum fine of $100.00 and costs was imposed.

Asa White, of Oshawa, had been overtaken while leaving the place as the officers were about to raid it. This morning he pleaded guilty to having liquor in other than his own private residence, and was fined $100 and costs, along with the others.

A local man, charged with intoxication, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10.00 and costs.

Driver Charged With Manslaughter

MOTORIST DIES IN HOSPITAL AS RESULT OF AUTO COLLISION ON HIGHWAY NEAR BRIGHTON

Mark Sniderman, Driver of Car, Is Being Held For Manslaughter.

HIT MOVING VAN.

Automobile Is Said To Have Been Travelling On Wrong Side of Road.

BRIGHTON, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—Wilfred Smith, Toronto, died in the hospital at Belleville to-day from injuries sustained when an automobile and truck collided head-on near Brighton. Mark Sniderman, driver of the car, is held on a charge of manslaughter.

The inquest opened here this afternoon. Smith and Sniderman were driving east from Toronto when they collided with a heavy moving van.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—In a mix-up near here to-day between a big six-wheeled furniture truck and a large Studebaker, Stanley Gordon and Urgele Provost, of Ottawa, drivers of the truck escaped serious injury, but Wilfred Smith, Toronto, is not expected to live through the day, and Mac Sniderman, also of Toronto, and driver of the car, was badly hurt. The car was said to be travelling on the wrong side of the road.

Smith, Lappan Avenue, Toronto, was admitted to the Belleville Hospital, suffering from a severe fracture of the skull and two broken legs, as the result of the accident, two miles east of Brighton. Sniderman of 618 Runneymede Road, Toronto, is in the Trenton Hospital.

Failed to See Truck.

Speeding along the slippery highway just as dawn was breaking, the driver of the ill-fated car apparently failed to see the truck owned by Fourniers of Ottawa, and crashed head-on into the heavy vehicle. Neither left the road, but the car was completely wrecked, and the furniture van suffered some injuries about the front.

According to the driver of the van, Stanley Gordon, of Ottawa, who was interviewed by the Provincial Police shortly after the accident, the car was travelling at a high rate of speed and on the wrong side of the road. Tire marks on the road in the new fallen snow plainly bore out the statement that the Sniderman car was on the wrong side.

Gordon was the relief driver, the regular one being asleep by his side at the time of the accident. He is Urgele Provost, and has been with the Fournier Company for some time. Provost escaped uninjured, but Gordon was cut about the face from flying glass.

APPOINTED TO SENATE

OTTAWA, December 7, Canadian Press. — Hon. Walter Foster, of St. John, N. B., has been appointed to the New Brunswick vacancy in the Senate, it was announced at the office of the Prime Minister yesterday.

CITY CLERK IS HONORED

S. R. Armstrong Receives Handsome Gift From City Council and Officials.

MAYOR'S BANQUET.

His Worship Mayor Denne entertained the members of the City Council, the Utilities Commission and other city officials, heads of departments and their wives at a banquet held in the Empress hotel last night. It was also made the occasion of honoring City Clerk S. R. Armstrong for the splendid service which he had rendered the city of Peterborough during the last thirty-five years. As a slight token of the esteem in which Mr. Armstrong is held by the city council and heads of the departments a beautiful silver tray and tea set was presented to him.

Mayor Denne in a short address paid tribute to the service Mr. Armstrong had rendered the city. He recalled that ever since he entered the council the clerk had always been willing to help him in every possible way and that he always had the interests of the city at heart. He also promised Mr. Armstrong that the city would give him a vacation this winter when he and Mrs. Armstrong might take a trip and enjoy a much needed rest.

Alderman Nagel Phelan made the presentation to Mr. Armstrong and he too told of the great help the clerk had been to him in his nine years on the city council.

Taken By Surprise

Mr. Armstrong completely taken by surprise, thanked the council and the heads of the city departments for their kind gift and said it had always been a pleasure for him to work with the council and was glad to know that to some extent his efforts had been appreciated. He said that with one exception he was the oldest city clerk in Canada only being surpassed by the town clerk of Orillia who has served 53 years. In speaking of the heads of the departments he said they were all friends and get along well together and hence it was no wonder that the city of Peterborough is making progress.

Fred Roy exhibited his four reels of motion pictures which were taken by him on his trip overseas this summer. The pictures were greatly enjoyed and admired by those present and Mr. Roy's running comment added a personal touch that brought the scenes all the closer.

Before the banquet was brought to a close a vote of thanks was extended to the Mayor Denne by City Solicitor Joseph Wearing, Alderman James Hamilton, Vincent Eastwood and Frank Stinson. Each speaker gave great credit to the mayor for the great amount of work done in the city this year and the wonderful co-operation that existed between the mayor, aldermen and other city officials.

Chilean Vessel in Collision With Steamship America Off Punta Patache.

MOST OF CREW RESCUED.

IQUIQUE, Chile, Dec. 7.— (Canadian Press).—Seventeen persons were known to-day to have been drowned when the Chilean steamship Quintero sank off Punta Patache, near here, after a collision with the steamship America.

After the crash the America stood by and rescued the captain of the Quintero and most of his crew. They were later landed at Iquique by the America. The rescue vessel also had aboard it three bodies which had been taken from the water after the Quintero sunk.

Officers of the America said that the collision was violent and that the other boat sank rapidly. Port officials went aboard the America as soon as it arrived and started an investigation. What they learned has not yet been divulged.

MAYOR SEEKS CO-OPERATION IN OLD HOME WEEK

Mayor Denne and Alderman Nagel Phelan Wait Upon County Council.

HAVE THEIR OWN

Each Municipality is Asked to be Represented in the Monster Parade.

Old Home Week, not for the city alone, but for the entire county of Peterborough, was the broad idea broached to the County Council Thursday afternoon by Mayor Denne and Alderman Phelan.

"We're not thinking of the city only," said the Mayor. "We'd like to see it a country affair. Each municipality would have its own. However, we came here specially to request that each municipality be represented in the parade which we will have, similar to the parade on the anniversary of Confederation. And we wish to offer to send out invitations for you. All you have to do is give us the names of the people you want invited and we will look after the rest. There are a lot of Old Boys from the county who would be delighted to come back for the big first week in July."

"Don't forget the old girls" Warden Smithson added.

Mayor Denne—"I'm glad to see you are interested in the old girls, too."

(Like Premier King, Hon. R. B. Bennet and E. W. Beatty, the Warden is a bachelor).

"Not too old" was his reply to Mayore Denne, keeping the laughter rippling around the council chamber.

Ald. Phelan indorsed Mayor Denne's invitation. "This is my first visit to the County Council, and I am delighted to see such a fine body of men."

Warden Smithson said that within the last county. It would be had left the county. It would be splendid to get them back even on a visit, but especially if they's stay."

"Some of them might" Mayor Denne promised as a parting inducement for the county's wholehearted support.

Nassau Bridge Repaired

Recent imjrovements to the county bridge at Nassau will cost about $300, Mr. A. C. Connor of Toronto, the County Council's engineer reported Thursday afternoon. The centre pier had settled nine inches and moved slightly to the east, throwing the bridge nine inches off its bearings. The contractor for the work was Norman McLeod of Toronto. The centre span was raised eight inches on one side and ten on the other.

Mr. Connor related other minor details of the work. Reeve Middleton suggested that the Young's Point bridge should be examined while Mr. Connor is in the city. The centre pier was split, and the bridge seemed to have swayed to one side.

Reeve Parker suggested Mr. Connor's examination of the abutments of the Buckhorn bridge to determine whether their present extensions beyond the bridge railing were wide enough for a sidewalk. The bridge, Mr. Parker said, was quite narrow, especially with the increased automobile traffic during the tourists' vacation months. Pedestrians crossing the bridge were spattered with mud, at times, and several accidents had been narrowly averted.

Mr. Connor accompanied by Reeve Parker, is inspecting the two bridges to-day.

THE WEATHER

While there is but a light covering of snow in the city, fairly good sleighing prevails but a few miles northwards. In fact some of the residents in more northern sections commence their journey to Peterborough to the accompaniment of sleighbells, only to find on their trip south that wheels are in order if they wish to reach the city. A few inches more of snow and sleighing would be good here, as well as farther north. The temperature continues moderate and no really cold weather has been experienced here as yet. Temperatures of 35 to 40 below zero, as have already occurred in the northwest, are not desired here.—W. P.

KIWANIS CLUB ELECTS J. J. TURNER TO PRESIDENCY

Officers For Year 1929 Are Elected at Weekly Club Luncheon.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

President Joe John Sets Record With 100 Per Cent. Attendance For Years.

Vice-President John J. Turner was the unanimous choice of his fellow members for the 1929 presidency of the Peterborough Kiwanis club, succeeding Joe John, who for the past year brought distinction to the local club and set a splendid example by his record of 100 per cent attendance at all meetings. The election of officers and a directorate for the ensuing year occupied the attention of a large turn-out of Kiwanians at the noon hour luncheon in the Empress Hotel, and resulted in the follow being elected:

President—J. J. Turner.
Vice-President—Carl S. Browne.
District Trustee—Past President Joseph John.
Treasurer—John B. Nelson.
Directors—A. J. Reynolds, Charles H. Elliott, John A. Dewart, H. J. Boyle, R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, H. J. McCannan and J. R. Heron.

A secretary will be chosen by the executive within a week or so to succeed H. Gilgour, who resigned at the executive meeting last night. To-day's luncheon meeting was productive of much fun as well as serious business with the officers-elect treating with cigars of such quality and quantity that Chris. Graham's hostelry must have done a land office business. Then, with all due deference to the candidates, Ernie Smith started an auction sale of all the cigars that he could re-collect and before it was over a sum well over $8.00 was realized for the flower fund.

During the meeting, the club also expressed itself in favor of decorating the main streets with trees for the Christmas season, as had been done last year with such good effect.

The Secretary's Report

There was much that was encouraging in the report of Honorary Secretary H. Gilgour. Though concise to the point of brevity, it gave the members a thorough understanding of the club's work and circumstances. It read:

There are 63 active members on the roster.

CHEESE-BOX MAKERS TO BE HELD LIABLE FOR POOR SHIPMENTS

First Annual Convention of Cheesemakers For Central Ontario Closes.

LEADS MARKET PRICE.

Speaker at Banquet Declares Canadian Cheese Can Compete With New Zealand.

BELLEVILLE, December 7. (Special.) — With the election of officers at the close of yesterday afternoon's session, and a monster banquet held at the New Queen's Hotel last night, the annual Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association Convention was brought to a close, and some two hundred and eight cheesemakers, instructors and dairymen disbanded for another year.

All of last year's officers were reappointed by the Board of Directors, and W. E. Brennan of Bogar, will be president for another year; W. V. Drewery, of Warkworth, vice-president; R. J. Dulmage, secretary-treasurer, and W. Irwin, honorary president. The directors are H. S. Channell, Hillier, John Finnegan, Mark Brennan, R. J. Dulmage and W. E. Cooper.

A balance of $174.49 was shown to be the credits on hand for the new organization up to and including December 5, 1928, while there is still some $45 outstanding.

The Resolutions Committee brought in several resolutions thanking the city council for the use of the city hall, thanking the speakers, etc., but one outstanding resolution was presented by the body when the question of cheese boxes was brought up. It was unanimously decided yesterday that the cheese box makers should be held responsible for green, unfit boxes sent to the factories, and a resolution to this effect was mailed to all box manufacturers.

Ended with Banquet.

Last night was a fitting close to the convention when a banquet, attended by nearly all who had been present at the convention, was held in the Queen's Hotel. Three prominent speakers were on hand to address the guests in the persons of Dr. J. A. Ruddick, Canadian Dairy Commissioner, John Elliott, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Standard Branch, Belleville; and there is no man who knows more about the cheese industry in Central Ontario than Mr. Elliott, and lastly, W. J. Newman, M. P. P. of Lorneville, Ont.

All the speakers were brief in their remarks, and the closing session of the convention could not have lasted over two hours in all. Mr. Ruddick was the first, and main, speaker, and in opening his address stated that he believed that the movement for organization was one of the most important ever taken in the history of the cheese making industry. "I have mentioned," he said, "on other occasions a little bit of the history connected with the dairying industry that may bear repetition at this time. On the first of July, 1867, the first Dominion Day, a great picnic was held to celebrate the occas-

KING'S POWERS OF RESISTANCE AID HIM WELL

His Majesty's Condition, However, Is Still Causing Much Anxiety.

RADIOGRAPHS TAKEN.

X-ray Investigation Is Made To Study Right Side of Chest.

LONDON, December 7 (Canadian Press). — King George's powers of resistance to-day were serving him well in his battle with the severe and persistent illness which attacked him more than a fortnight ago. His condition, however, was still causing anxiety.

Recent medical bulletins have been favorable. To-day it was stated that His Majesty was maintaining his general strength. The bolstering up of which the sleep during the night undoubtedly contributed a large part.

The bulletin read: "The King had some restful sleep and his general strength is maintained. Further investigation of the right side of the chest will be undertaken during the day."

The physicians seemed to be concerned with how the infective process around the lung region of the King's right side was developing. This is the point which has been stressed recently, while a few days ago the the condition of the heart seemed uppermost in the minds of the doctors.

A large crowd gathered this afternoon to watch the Queen and Princess Mary go for a drive. They were smiling and chatting briskly as they left the palace.

Radiographs Taken.

It was stated on good authority that radiographs of King George were taken at Buckingham Palace this afternoon. It was understood the object of the X-ray investigation was to study the right side of the chest where the infection has become localized.

COUNTY COUNCIL VIEWS BRIDGES

Members Inspect Young's Point and Buckhorn Bridges With Engineer.

CONTRADICTS REPORT.

The work of the County Council was held up this morning by the absence of some members who accompanied A. C. Connor of Toronto, the county engineer, on an inspection of the Young's Point and Buckhorn bridges. It was a busy morning, however, for Reeve Breckenridge who, as chairman of the finance committee, had to verify the heavy files of accounts submitted by the treasurer, Ed. M. Elliott. Other members spent an hour in the court room where Judge O'Connor of Cobourg was presiding at a trial involving an automobile accident and incidentally a liquor permit.

In his report as chairman of the roads and bridges committee Thursday, Reeve Parker said: "Referring to the report of the land surveyor in connection with the Base Line bridge (Otonabee), I consider it my duty in order to be fair to my colleagues (the Reeves of Otonabee), to correct an erroneous report, that is that although the county authorized such survey and guaranteed one-half of the cost, yet some mistaken idea became prevalent that Otonabee had met all the expense, which is not correct, from the fact that the reeves, in accordance with the provision, had the account presented to the county, and the county, as a result, paid one-half.

"I have pleasure in further stating that all expenditures authorized by the various committees have been efficiently carried out by the different reeves and deputy reeves. All will agree with me in stating that last spring was exceptionally hard on not only bridges, but roads as well."

Mr. Justice McEvoy Grants Two Weeks Stay For Burowski

Sheriff Armstrong, of Parry Sound, Receives Telegram Granting Reprieve Fourteen Minutes Before Man Was To Ascend Gallows.

LAWYER VISITED ATTORNEY-GENERAL YESTERDAY; WITH TWO AFFIDAVITS TELLING FULL DETAILS

Took News Calmly, Shaking Hands With Provincial Officer, Turnkey, and Spiritual Adviser — Was Convicted of Shooting Thomas Jackson.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., December 7 (Special to The Examiner). — Fourteen minutes before John Burowski was to mount the gallows to pay with his life for the shooting of Thomas Jackson last August 18, Sheriff J. E. Armstrong received a telegram from Mr. Justice McEvoy in Toronto, putting off the date of execution until December 21. No reason was given for the respite. When the sheriff entered the death cell where the condemned man was momentarily expecting the hangman party, and told him of the reprieve, Burowski said, "I will probably get 20 years now."

He took the news calmly, shaking hands with the provincial officers, the chief turnkey, Tom Keating, and Father Kelley, who were present expecting to escort the man to the gallows.

The two weeks' respite is the outcome of a visit paid to Attorney-General Price yesterday by J. R. Hett, the condemned man's lawyer. He left Parry Sound on Wednesday carrying two affidavits made by his client in which he tells the full details of the train robbery, preceding the shooting. In them he names two accomplices, one an Englishman and the other a Pole, who are at present in the United States. The reprieve comes as a great surprise, however.

Mr. Hett had telephoned to the sheriff at four o'clock on Thursday afternoon that he had little hope of having the date of the execution postponed. When the message was retailed to the prisoner he smiled grimly, and said: "I am not worried —I will never hang on the gallows." When the sheriff told him the date had been postponed to-night he repeated that statement.

Everybody Ready.

Everything was ready for the execution which was to have taken place at 12.30. It was 12.16 when the message putting off the date for two weeks was received. The scaffold was completed and tested with a bag of sand by Hangman Arthur Ellis on Thursday afternoon. On Thursday night electricians had rigged up two powerful electric light bulbs above it. It would have been Hangman Ellis's five hundred and sixty-seventh commission. The scaffold had been erected in the jail yard on which the prisoner's cell faces. Snow fell all day, and it was covered to a depth of two inches. Just before 12 o'clock one of the turnkeys swept it off. From Burowski's cell to the gallows is less than 20 feet. He was to have left his cell, walk down a short corridor and pass through a door into the yard. There are thirteen steps leading up to the platform, which is 12 feet square. The top of the scaffold protrudes over the top of the jail wall a distance of four feet.

Although newspaper men had been denied admission to the jail, a full view of the death cell was obtainable from an upper window of the courthouse which adjoins that institution.

Watch Changed Twice.

The death watch in the cell of the condemned man was changed twice Thursday. At six o'clock Provincial Officer Beatty and a special constable relieved the previous watch and remained with Burowski until the news of the reprieve was received.

He was visited yesterday by Inspector Miller and Inspector Stringer of the Provincial Police. They talked with him half an hour. At four o'clock Sheriff J. E. Armstrong entered the cell and told Burowski that the attempt made by his lawyer, J. R. Hett, for a postponement would likely be unsuccessful. At half-past four, Norman Greenway, Baptist evangelist from Toronto, who is at present conducting services here, was admitted to the cell. He talked to the prisoner for half an hour. I told him the congregation of our church was praying for him, declared Mr. Greenway. He expressed his thanks to me. I was into see him yesterday. At that time he had hopes of a reprieve, and he is still nopeful.

At 5 o'clock Turnkey Tom Keating took Burowski his supper. It consisted of boiled pork, potatoes and coffee, the regular prison fare. He ate all of it, and then lit a cigarette. He smoked continually. At 6 o'clock Father Gregory Kelly, of St. Anne's Church, Toronto, heard the prisoner's confession, and administered to him the last rites of the Church.

Paced Cell.

The death watch was then changed Burowski started pacing his cell, up and down, taking eleven steps each way. He was wearing the blue suit in which he was arrested and a flannel shirt, open at the throat. His hair was slicked back and he appeared flushed and excited. He had gotten thin during his confinement in jail. He lighted one cigarette after another and talked continually to Officer Beatty. One window in his cell which is over the ground floo.

DEEDS HOME TO COUNTY COUNCIL

Inmate of House of Refuge Gives Havelock Property to County.

ENTIRELY SATISFIED

Joseph Isaiah Young, some time of Havelock and for the most of his life a resident of the United States, is so content with the haven he has found in the county House of Refuge that he has transferred to the county council the deed of his house and lot at Havelock.

Reeve C. S. Tanner of Lakefield referred to the gift in his report of the House of Refuge. "The legal details have been fully attended to. Mr. Young said he wished to make this transfer. He appeared with us before Judge Huycke who was satisfied with the arrangement and gave his approval. Mr. Young said he was more than satisfied with the House of Refuge. He had gone to some relatives, but they had got tired of him, he said. At the House of Refuge he wants to be free to leave and return as he desires, and to be subject to the rules of the institution only when he is there. He also asks not to be required to do any work. It is not that he wishes to be idle, for he is looking after the furnace and hopes to be of help around the Home"

Reeve Curtis of Havelock added that Mr. Young had been for a long time in the United States. After a conversation with him, Mr. Young decided that it would only be fair to offer this property to the County in consideration of the privileges he desired and also for his maintenance. He has a cash balance in the bank of some $600. The county was using him so well, he said that he wanted to hand over the Havelock property to the county council.

Mr. Tanner moved, seconded by Mr. Cavanagh, that the agreement be approved.

Twenty-three Inmates

"We had twenty-four inmates at the beginning of the year," Mr. Tanner continued. Three died and two were removed to other institutions. We now have twenty-three. I have found the work rather pleasant, and I appreciate the confidence you placed in me in making me chairman of the Board. The superintendent and the matron are very desirable parties for that work, and things are going smoothly. The farm has been improved, and we have set up a pump by which we now have water in the barn for the stock. I was pleased to notice that the Grand Jury made a favorable report of the House after their visit.

Orangemen Hold Annual Banquet

BLACK KNIGHTS CHALLENGED TO MAINTAIN THE DIGNITY AND PRIDE OF THEIR NOBLE CHAPTER

Grand Master Addresses Banquet of Local Weir Black Preceptory Number 261.

MANY TOASTS.

Speaker Gives Much of Credit To Pioneer Orangemen of Canada For Work Accomplished.

Coming to this city to attend the banquet in Victoria Hall, given in his honor by Weir Black Preceptory, No. 261, M. W. Sir H. A. Graham, of Kingston, Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter of British America, last night addressed nearly one hundred representatives of the local and preceptories of Lindsay, Campbellford and other centres throughout the district. His message worthy of the office which he holds, had in it a plea and a challenge to his auditors to promote and maintain the dignity and pride of the Black Chapter, that it may continue to command the respect accorded it, especially of late years.

The banquet was a decided triumph not only for the Preceptory but for the members of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Society, No. 525, for a most appetizing and complete supper was followed by a toast list that brought into prominence as speakers many high officials of "the Black," including the Grand Master, the Grand Chaplain, M. W. Rev. A. L. Green of Belleville, as well as the Dean of local Orangemen, Colonel J. W. Miller, and the members of the Provincial and Dominion Parliaments. Presiding, in most acceptable manner, was the Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter, Ontario East, namely E. F. Reid, of Peterborough, while in the unavoidable absence of His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, ex-Alderman Bro. John Edgar represented the city. During the fore part of the evening, Toastmaster Reid called attention to communications of regret at their absence from several expected guests, including the Mayor, and J. J. Turner. On the latter's behalf he presented a small flag to the guest of honor.

Deep concern for the health of His Majesty the King, was noted throughout the opening words of the toastmaster as he proposed the first toast of the evening.

When glasses had been lowered, he continued with remarks introductory of the honored guest, and extended a welcome to all guests, particularly those who had come from outside the city.

Of Colonel Miller, he stated that the man about to propose the next toast was one of only four veterans of 1866 now in Peterborough, and he had honored the meeting by his presence.

Canada and The Empire.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself has said
This is my own, my native land——

Thus quoting Scott Wells, Brother Colonel J. W. Miller began his toast to Canada and the Empire, saying in part:

"We look back to early days in Britain and see men of intelligence and high conceptions. It seems to me God said: 'I will give thee the heathen as a heritage,' and no country has done more for their enlightenment! The British naval men opened the doors of the dark regions and explored the seas, and when the flag was raised to heaven there was law and equity.

"It was our forefathers who marched through great battles and when those battles were over Great Britain extended the hand of friendship to those whom she defeated. The people she beat were always the better of the beating, and Britain stands today holding the torch of liberty. Canadians helped maintain that torch. The great Christian spirit of Britain reached the Red men in early days of Canada. Civilization has come and to-day Canada holds the place of honor among the nations of the world. She has the men, and all we need is more of them.

"Canada is the land of hope and glory. Let us be thankful to God and proud of the Motherland."

Recalls Acquaintance

In responding to Colonel Miller's toast, E. A. Peck, M.P., expressed his pleasure at being present, and recalled acquaintance with a previous Grand Master, Colonel Edwards. "I am sure that you have, in Mr. Graham, one who will follow in his footsteps," said he.

"Canada and the Empire is a serious subject and I would leave with you two thoughts; the first of which is, that the country with which we have been endowed is one of great natural wealth." He then briefly reviewed the development of Canada first in the fur trade, later the fisheries, and more recently along mining, lumbering and agricultural lines. porting so much of our natural wealth "The question arises," said Mr. Peck, "are we doing the right thing in exporting so much of our natural

LEGION HOLDS NOMINATIONS

A. H. McKeel Is Honored With Membership For Services Rendered.

BUILT MEMBERSHIP.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 7. — That His Majesty King George V., might have a speedy recovery to excellent health, was the unanimous wish of the Campbellford Branch of the Canadian Legion at their regular meeting in their club rooms last night. The words were spoken by the President, Major J. M. Bygott, and echoed by every member present.

There was much business on hand for the meeting. Three new members were presented with their membership cards and buttons. According to the constitution of the local branch last night was the meeting for the nomination of officers for 1929. The election will be held two weeks hence, and the installation will take place at the first meeting of the new year. The offices to be filled were those of president, two vice-presidents, secretary-treasurer, three members of the executive committee and the auditors. In each case there were several nominations, and in some cases those nominated would not permit their names to stand.

For the president's chair there will be three candidates: George Free, the present vice-president; J. R. Wilkinson, second vice-president; and James Watters, chairman of the executive committee. Major Bygott, president, would not allow his name to stand for another election. He pointed out that he had held the office for 18 months, since the Legion was formed here, and thought that the honors ought to be passed along. His nomination was greeted with applause. His withdrawal was received as inevitable under the circumstances.

Five Nominated.

For the office of first vice-president, there were five names listed: Ernest Armstrong, J. R. Wilkinson, J. Jones, James Watters, and Dr. D. B. Johnston. For the chair of the second vice-president there was only one name put forward: Thomas Dutton of Healey Falls. J. D. MacEachern and N. A. MacCall will contest the office of secretary-treasurer. For the three places on the executive committee there were five names put forward: Bert Jones, J. M. Bygott, E. Claverly, Thomas Dutton and Dr. D. B. Johnston. N. A. MacEachern and Carl Stevens were named as auditorsa. There are two to be appointed.

Since the meeting was for the nomination of 1929 officers, there was a roll call of the present list immediately after the usual opening ceremony. There being no new applications for membership, the president formally presented the three badges received from the provincial command. These were for Dr. Johnston, J. M. Ferris and A. H. McKeel, honorary. In presenting the badge and card to Comrade McKeel, Major Bygott pointed out that the branch had established a precedent, and it was not without much discussion on the matter before the step had been taken. The membership, he said, was a token of appreciation of the legion for the work McKeel had done in erecting war memorials at Trent River and Alderville in memory of days of 1914 to 1918 Major Bygott hoped that Comrade McKeel would attend the meetings of the branch and take his part in

YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD WEEKLY MEETING

Minister Takes a Subject, "What It Means to be a Friend."

(Examiner Correspondence).

BETHANY, Dec. 7.—At the midweek meeting of the young people of the United Church, held on Wednesday evening, Rev. Mr. Poulter, first vice-president of the society, was in charge. Rev. Mr. Poulter gave an interesting talk on "What it means to be a friend," speaking from the words in the 15th chapter of John, where Jesus said to His disciples, "I have called you friends."

The devotional period was led by the president, Bertrand Monk, who also led in a fifteen-minute song service. The gathering was divided into two sides under captains, Mansel Wright and Doris Driver, for the conundrum contest, with the result that at the end of half an hour, Mansel Wright won by four points, and in the total, one point. Next Wednesday, the program will be in charge of the Missionary Committee.

Soft Note Of Romance Steals Into Assembly; Warden Discovers Engagement Of Councillor

A soft note of romance stole quietly into the assembly of the County Council this week. After dinner on Wednesday the eagle eye of Warden Smithson, idling over the social column of the Toronto Globe, halted upon the announcement of an engagement that seemed vaguely familiar and local in the name of one of the principals. It read as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Taggart, Westport, Ont., announce the engagement of their daughter, Renette Gertrude, to Willard Gordon Waterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waterman, Frazerville, Ont., the marriage to take place in December.

There was no doubt about it. Willard Gordon Waterman was none other than the tall, good-looking young Deputy-Reeve of North Monaghan, the young companion of the veteran Reeve Harold Rye, and a capable young farmer with a mind of his own, and who is apparently unafraid to think and vote according to his own decisions. He is obviously one of the youngest members of the Council.

The literature of love includes a line coined from the experience of mankind—"all the world loves a lover," especially when it applies to a young gentleman in public life. And it was in that spirit that the discussions since the Warden's discovery have tossed up several gentle allusions to the junior Reeve of Monaghan's forthcoming introduction to a popular march by a famous native of Hamburg, one Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, who died nearly a hundred years ago in Leipzig.

TOWNSHIP OF ENNISMORE ASKS FOR NEW CHEMONG BRIDGE

Deputation of County Council is Appointed to Interview Hon. Charles Dunning.

GOING THIS TIME

City of Peterborough and Chamber of Commerce is Also Asked to Co-operate.

Ennismore is asking Santa Claus for a new bridge.

The Santa Claus of their appeal is the Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, who will be interviewed before Christmas if the appointment can be arranged, by a deputation including as many of the county councillors as can make this trip, and probably the Ennismore township council together with representatives of Peterborough city council and the Chamber of Commerce.

This proposal has been made by the county council for the last five years.

"Well, this time you're going," Warden Smithson declared Thursday afternoon, and figuratively pressed the button for immediate action by telephoning E. A. Peck, M.P., to ask for an appointment. Reeve Tanner of Lakefield suggested soliciting the Peterborough city organization for support, and a committee, composed of Warden Smithson, Reeves Parker, Middleton, Cavanagh and Clark, was appointed to wait upon Mayor Denne and James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, at once.

The Warden's authority for his prompt proceeding was a resolution in council by Reeve Parker, seconded by Reeve Clark, that the council go in a body to Ottawa, at a date to be decided upon by the Warden, to ask the government for a large grant for the construction of a new bridge.

W. A. Anderson, M.P.P., Present

During the session there had been several references to this proposal, and the presence of W. A. Anderson, M.P.P., Thursday afternoon, brought it directly before the attention of the council. Mr. Anderson said he had been unable to be present at the sessions earlier in the year at which the Ennismore bridge had been fully discussed by the council and Mr. Peck, Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Duffus. He wished to offer his own services in the cause, he said, and would do anything he could in co-operating with the county council.

Reeves Parker, Clark and Cavanagh advocated an appeal to the federal government.

"When the county went on record as being willing to contribute $20,000 toward the cost of the bridge," said John Clarke, "we should go as far as we can, but if we sit here and do nothing no government will volunteer to help us. There is no use letting the matter dangle as we have been doing. Repairs to the floating bridge have cost about $3,000 every year. Let us find out if the old bridge is to be cut adrift and floated downstream or what is to become of it."

Peterborough City's Interest

Mr. Anderson expressed his pleasson from his long illness. It was very important, he continued, that there should be a proper bridge across Chemong Lake to Ennismore township. But there was another party which should have an interest in it, the city of Peterborough. If there were no bridge there the people from that section of the country would go off to Omemee and Lindsay to do business. People in the urban centres were not contributing as they should to the payment for highways. The burden was falling too heavily upon rural ratepayers. If the county council could get the government to assist in building the proposed Ennismore bridge it would be one of the best things the county had ever done.

"Of course I can't say what the Ontario government will do, but I shall be glad to go with you and Mr. Bradburn if you wait upon the Minister of Highways. I will do anything I can to help in this movement."

Going to Omemee.

Reeve Cavanagh of Ennismore said that when he was in Omemee two weeks ago he counted fifteen loads of grain that had gone there that morning from Ennismore. They had gone that longer trip because those farmers were afraid to cross the bridge with their loads. The city of Peterborough should be interested in that fact.

County Clerk Elliott gave the information that when the floating bridge was built, the town of Peterborough had contributed to the funds $3,000 and also paid $200 a year for twenty years.

The County's Limit

Warden Smithson said the council had done all it could in offering to issue debentures for $20,000. That was the limit of its borrowing power for one year.

"We've been talking for five years about going to Ottawa. Well, the difference this year is that you are going to get a chance to go. I agree that this matter should be taken up with the federal government so that we may know what their attitude will be. It is plain that we will have to get big assistance from the two governments and the city of Peterborough if a new bridge is to be built."

The vote on the Parker-Clark motion was unanimously affirmative.

"You're going," the Warden announced. "It is the only way out."

Reeve Cavanagh said Ennismore would contribute one thousand dollars. Mr. Elliott told Mr. Anderson that the last estimate of the cost was $368,000. Reeve Tanner advised the council to solicit the aid of the city in the deputation to Ottawa. Reeve Leahy seconded the motion appointing the committee to interview Mayor Denne and Mr. Dutton.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday and little business was transacted. The inquiry from local buyers for American corn was steady and a number of cars were sold for all-rail shipment from Chicago. A moderate amount of business was done in most lines of grain in the domestic cash market and prices were unchanged.

The movement of Spring and Winter wheat flour continued good and prices for all grades were firm.

The undertone to the millfeed market was steady under a good demand for all lines. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was moderate and values were well maintained.

The trade in fresh and storage eggs continued active and prices were firmly maintained. Receipts were 1,262 cases.

Potatoes continued on good demand and values were about steady. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 75 to 77c, and Green Mountains at 80 to 82c per 90 lbs., in bags.

The bean market was steady at $5.25 per bushel for Canadian beans, with jobbers selling at 9½c per lb., yellow beans at 8½c, and yellow eyes at 9c per lb.

There were no further developments in the butter situation, but the undertone was firm under a continued steady demand. Receipts were 128 packages.

Extreme dullness again marked the local and export trade in cheese, but the tone of the market was steady. Receipts were 561 boxes.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—The situation on Canadian egg markets shows some signs of weakness. Offers of fresh eggs from B. C. are liberal.

Montreal.—The local situation on the egg market is uncharged. The deadlock on the turkey market is maintained, but a break either way is expected soon. Lowest offers here yesterday for turkeys were 39 to 40c for birds over 15 pounds; 37c for birds of 12 to 15 pounds; 35c for 10 to 12 pounds; 33 to 34 cents for 8 to 10 pound birds; 30 to 34 cents for 6 to 8 pound birds; old toms and hens over over and under 10 pounds, 30 to 34 cents.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—With the best shipping demand here for corn yesterday that has been witnessed in some time, the corn market took on new strength. Fresh export business in corn here and at the Gulf of Mexico was indicated, and other grain derived firmness from corn.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, ¼ to ⅝c net higher. Wheat finished ⅛ to ⅞c up; oats ⅛ to ¼c advance, and provisions unchanged to 10c down.

Helping to lift the corn market yesterday was the fact that other cities were reported outbidding Chicago for corn at various points in Illinois. Besides, yesterday's arrivals of corn here, 294 cars, were of less volume than had generally been looked for, and country offerings were likewise relatively small despite excellent weather for curing and moving the new crop. Under such circumstances, numerous traders who Wednesday were conspicuous sellers made a quick switch yesterday to the buying side of the market and although there was something of a reaction at the last, friends of higher prices for corn had an evident advantage during the day as a whole.

Sharp upturns in corn quotations at Argentine markets were also a subject of comment. On the other hand, assertions were made by some trade experts that United States corn is already much higher in price than the level at which farmers can afford to feed the corn to hogs or cattle, and that if such conditions persist, a decidedly larger movement of corn to market would ensue than would otherwise be the case. Absence of selling pressure was notable in the oats market, and oats receipts continued small.

Heavy rains in the Argentine wheat harvest region were of some effect toward giving a firmer tone to the wheat market. In addition, advices were received that wheat yields in Western Australia are very disappointing, and will be 10,000,000 bushels less than expected. Unofficial estimates yesterday on new domestic winter wheat area and the condition of the winter crop were about as has generally been predicted.

Provisions tended downward, notwithstanding that hog prices were but little changed.

SUGAR SALES POOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—The raw sugar market was unchanged yesterday and while no sales were reported, offerings at the last paid prices of $3.96 for Cuban duty paid were a little more liberal with buyers not inclined to pay above $3.98.

Price changes in raw sugar futures were narrow and trading was light and mostly in the way of exchanging from the near to distant positions. The market early was 1 to 2 points lower under liquidation and some European selling which was promoted by the disappointing showing of London and the increased offerings in the spot market. The offerings were not very aggressive, however, and a little steadier tone developed later, with prices rallying on covering by December shorts and trade buying, with the close one point higher on December, and one point lower on later deliveries. Approximate sales 34,530 tons. December closed 2.11; Jan., 2.06; March 2.12; May 2.19; July, 2.26; Sept., 2.33; Dec. (1929), 2.36.

The refined market continued quiet with prices unchanged at $5.25 for fine granulated. Withdrawals, however, continued of fair proportions.

COFFEE MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—Coffee future: Rio opened unchanged to 26 points lower and closed at a net decline of 15 to 46 points, with March selling off to $14.50. Santos opened 6 to 22 points lower and closed at a net decline of 5 to 22 points.

Estimated sales: Rio, 58,000; Santos 39,000.

Closing quotations: Rio, Dec. 15.29; Jan. 15.05; March 14.50; May, 13.82; July 13.20; Sept. 12.90; Oct. 12.90; Dec. (1929), $12.60.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—Large dealers in eggs revised their prices for fresh commitments in a downward direction yesterday, and are quoting to shippers on a basis of 58c per dozen for fresh extras, 42c for pullet extras cases returned. Special top prices are also being paid in the market for strictly fresh gathered from Ontario points by some local houses. Receipts of local fresh eggs continue light and dealers' reports are that storage eggs are moving steadily into consumptive channels at values which show very little change from a week ago. The arrival of British Columbia eggs last week and this has had an important bearing on local market feeling, and it appears quite evident that the peak has been reached. While current production is still at a low ebb in Ontario, the recent mild weather has improved laying. Prices of fresh eggs to the retail trade are steady.

Poultry receipts are much heavier, but prices are holding fairly steady. Dealers are buying in the country and floors of local houses are being cleared for the reception of Christmas poultry. The market for turkeys and geese will be well under way in about a week from now. Turkeys are more noticeable on the market and the quality is showing considerable improvement.

The surplus of all lines of poultry over immediate consumptive requirements is being readily absorbed for storage, but the interest is now centring largely on the supply of turkeys for the Christmas trade in order to establish a definite price basis for the Yuletide table bird.

Butter was moving out yesterday at a little brisker rate than at midweek, the improvement in activity, it was explained, due to better inquiry for stocks. Prices were steady at the lat e advance in prices for pasteurized creamery solids with sales reported at 41¼c per pound, and higher for extra fancy make when urgently wanted. Undergrades were moving slowly at values which displayed signs of easiness.

Cheese was unchanged and the market movement quiet. Dealers are quoting from 21¼c to 21¾c per pound, for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered Toronto.

CHOIR PRESENTS CONCERT AT APSLEY

United Church Holds Annual Fowl Supper in Town Hall.

(Examiner Correspondence).

APSLEY, Dec. 7.—A fowl supper was held in the Town Hall on Saturday evening, under the auspices of the United Church. After the supper, adjournment was made to the church, where a concert was given by members of the choir of Knox United Church, Lakefield. Owing to the lateness of the hour, and the long return journey to be made by the choir, the program had to be curtailed somewhat, which was a distinct loss as the members were greatly enjoyed as evidenced by the hearty applause.

Rev. T. W. Wesley, of Lakefield, presided for the program. The departure of the choir was so hurried at the close of the entertainment that the formal vote of thanks was overlooked, which Rev. W. H. Taylor deeply regrets. He wishes, however, to take this means of expressing on behalf of the audience and himself, deep appreciation of their services and warm thanks for the very enjoyable program provided.

The proceeds for the evening amounted to about thirty-seven dollars, which will be devoted to missions, maintenance, etc.

Those not members of the choir who contributed vocal numbers were Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Dunford, Mrs. Bell and Messrs. Stevens, Hill and Bell.

Endorsement was given to the policy of flat rate for rural Hydro and restriction of the services of government lecturers and facilities to women's institutes was viewed with disapproval.

ADULT BIBLE CLASS DIVIDES SURPLUS

Bethany Organization Elects Officers for Year 1929.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, Dec. 7.—T. J. Jackson was elected president of the Adult Bible Class of the United Church, at the annual meeting held on Monday evening.

Rev. Alfred Poulter acted as chairman for the occasion, and reports of a very satisfactory nature were given by the president, secretary and tresaurer. It was found the treasury contained almost two hundred and fifty dollars. This was divided among supplies for the class, donations to the mission fund of the school and to the fund for the upkeep of the church. A portion was kept in reserve for an emergency. Only one change was necessary in the office and that was in the office of treasurer, John Porteous having resigned, and Mr. Bray was elected to the position.

The officers for the year 1929 are: President, T. J. Jackson; vice-president, Mrs. Arnott; secretary, Mrs. Ona Thorndyke; treasurer, E. Bray and teacher, W. A. Jakeman.

DIVISION COURT CASES ARE HEARD

Judgment Is Reserved In One and the Other Is Withdrawn.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 7.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—There only two cases to be brought before His Honor Judge Huycke of Peterborough in the regular session of the division court here on Wednesday afternoon. The first was a garnishee brought by a livery man against a local automobile dealer whom he thought was agent for the person who owed the money. This proved a mistaken idea and no action could be taken since the man named in the official document was not the agent, and the papers would have to be drawn up with the correct name inserted.

The second case as a suit involving several accounts. The principals in the action were the Trent Coal Company vs Linton Bros. From evidence adduced, it appeared that the Linton Bros. bought their coal from the Trent Coal Company, sometimes referred to as the Robert Hicks Company, and believed they were dealing with a man who appears to have been only an agent of the company. The payments were made to him, and in doing so, a contrary account held by Linton Bros. was considered a part payment. This had apparently not been satisfactory and the "Friendly" suit which was started in the court. Robert Hicks, president of the company which used his name, was present to give evidence. A. T. Linton and Fred Linton also testified. The accounts concerned were the private accounts for coal for each of the Linton Brothers' residences and for the store on Front street where they carry on their business. There was also a contrary account against M. Mulhearn from whom the local coal had been purchased. Both the Linton Brothers stated that they believed they were dealing with Mulhearn himself and not as an agent for any company or concern. They had offered a check for the balance of their accounts, but it had been refused for some reason.

Archie Cochrane, Cobourg, appeared in the interests of the coal company. D. J. Lynch, Campbellford, appeared for Linton Brothers. After hearing the evidence and the arguments of the two counsel, Judge Huycke reserved judgment.

AN INTELLIGENT JURY.

The members of the Middlesex jury, which at the last Assizes found William Murrell guilty of murder, and who since have made some surprising statements, will never again be called upon to perform jury duty, the authorities having decided to erase their names from the jury list.

That may not be considered much punishment for the jurors, but it at least puts the proper value upon their intelligence.

Until this amazing incident occurred it was not considered possible to select a jury of twelve men anywhere in Ontario who would not know that a verdict of guilty in a murder case left no alternative to the presiding judge but to impose a death sentence.

Yet some members of this Middlesex jury would have the world believe now that if they had known that the death penalty was involved in such a decision they would not have returned a verdict of guilty, and other jurors, talking freely with newspaper men, have declared that the victim was not murdered at all, but killed by the reckless firing of a bystander.

The St. Thomas Times-Journal calls the conduct of the "twelve good men and true" "a pitiable example of weak-kneed citizenship by men who show less than an elementary knowledge of their duties."

Certainly if such incidents were common faith in the jury system would disappear completely.

TOURIST TRADE VALUABLE.

Probably when the members of the County Council rejected the request of the Trent Waterway Association for a grant of $200 the county legislators had not read Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor's reference to the great value of the tourist trade to this country.

In his address at the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal the general manager pointed out that this trade amounted last year to $275,000,000, climbing close to the value of Canada's wheat exports and greater than the value of our mineral production and of the output of Canadian pulp and paper mills.

Truly, the tourist traffic has become "a Canadian business interest of high importance," and the district that goes after this trade persistently and intelligently is going to benefit materially.

That is the object of the Trent Waterway Association, and it has already given ample evidence of its ability to get the desired results.

As the people of many sections of the county are materially interested in the tourist trade and reap rich returns therefrom, the investment of a small grant in advertising the district would seem to be good business from a county viewpoint, and it is unfortunate that no assistance has been authorized.

The municipalities of the whole district should get behind the only organization that exists for the purpose of attracting this rich traffic into this part of Ontario.

THE PARKING BYLAW.

"Motorist," in a letter appearing elsewhere in today's issue, calls attention to the necessity for more rigorous enforcement of the parking regulations.

While it is recognized that the parking problem is a tough nut to crack and that the complete enforcement of hard and fast regulations always presents difficulties, the authorities should find this communication worthy of consideration.

If there are glaring cases of infractions of the parking regulations, not merely for a matter of a few minutes, but all day long, as our correspondent claims them, those encharged with the enforcement of the rules are falling down on the job.

The regulations are plain and explicit, the areas were all set forth in the bylaw, the proper signs have been erected, and if the law is being ignored, as "Motorist" complains, the issue is squarely up to the police department.

The parking bylaw was designed in the general interest, and there is no reason why it should not be effectively enforced, seeing that the area covered is comparatively restricted.

A few fines for the most persistent offenders would speedily improve conditions; it is only necessary to show that there are teeth in the bylaw to ensure its being obeyed.

ENCOURAGING STATEMENTS.

Important developments were in evidence at the 111th annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, chief of which was the request of the president, Sir Charles Gordon, that the shareholders to approve a resolution to increase the authorized capital of the bank to $50,000,000.

The addresses of the president and of Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the general manager, were eloquent of the great prosperity reigning in Canada and of the successful efforts of the Bank of Montreal to increase the scope of its service.

The reports leave no doubt of the fact that the Bank of Montreal has fully shared in the general prosperity, its funds having found full employment.

Sir Charles Gordon in his illumining address reviewed in some detail the great developments in Canadian business and industry during the year, while the general manager declared that Canada as a whole has enjoyed more prosperity than the Dominion has ever experienced before, with the revival experienced in the Maritime Provinces as one of the happiest features.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor in his enthusiastic summary of Canadian prosperity particularly stressed the value to this country of the tourist trade, which, he says, has become "a Canadian business interest of high importance."

The tone of these addresses and the abundant evidence offered in the reports of the year's operations of the bank's continued success and prosperity are alike satisfactory to the people of this country, who recognize the very important part in Canada's development played by the Bank of Montreal.

A PLEA IS MADE.

The Vancouver Sun says:

"The rural postmaster derives his revenue almost entirely from the sale of stamps, 11,811 postoffices in Canada being commission paid offices.

"Commissions range from 20 cents a day to $10 a day or more, according to the number of stamps sold. Out of this revenue, the postmaster is expected to pay all expenses, such as clerical help and light, heat and rent, except in Government buildings which are in large towns only. Some 10,000 postmasters are receiving from 20 cents to $2.00 a day out of which all expenses must be paid. At the present time, this represents a living wage of from $60 to $620 a year.

"How can the Government of Canada expect to maintain an efficient postal service when the salaries paid to the postmasters, the backbone of the service, is a public scandal?"

It is remarkable what an excellent postal service this Dominion has in spite of the low salaries paid to so many trusted and painstaking officials. If the small commission postmasters are illy paid, then even more so is the rural mail carrier. It will also be heard that the city carrier is not well paid, all things considered, and there is a demand at Ottawa now for an increased schedule of salaries.

The fact of the matter is, that with a higher standard of living generally throughout the country, with prosperous conditions which invite a greater spending power on the part of the people, and with industrial and business openings where a competence can be secured, there is no longer the urge to secure Government positions as obtained, say twenty years ago. The bright young man can hardly see a future in the Civil Service, although there is an occasional plum offered to the right party.

The matter of salary recompense is bound to work out right in the end. The moment that the public service begins to suffer by failure to attract efficient employees, there will be action taken in the matter of salary schedules.—St. Catharines Standard.

WHAT! DIDN'T KNOW OUR PREMIER?

After Mr. Gladstone died an old farmer was found somewhere in the Midlands who had never heard of him. The other day, too, the despatches told us that a woman had been found in Boston who didn't know there were such peoples as Herbert Hoover and Al Smith. But the most striking indication that fame is never universal and that some people are incorrigibly oblivious to greatness, came yesterday from London. The Empire Review—Empire Review, mark well—thought that Mr. Mackenzie King was the Prime Minister of Ontario.

The Empire Review admits it. Somebody, it says, sent it an article from Toronto, "on behalf of the Prime Minister of Ontario." The article contained an intimation that the Ottawa Government might sympathetically receive complaints of the complexity of regulations governing admission of immigrants to Canada, and so the Review, ever watchful over the affairs of the Empire, and thinking that our Mr. King was a provincial statesman, put this over the article:

"BY THE HONORABLE MACKENZIE KING, PRIME MINISTER OF ONTARIO."

The Toronto Telegram, no doubt, will take up the cudgels on behalf of Ontario; our feeling is to vindicate the fame of Mr. King. Because, somehow or other, those stupid outlanders don't seem to realize what a great man our Premier is. It was bad enough when Margot Asquith, jotting down in her diary a day's activities in Ottawa, wrote that "the nicest man I met there was Mr. Mackenzie Smith;" and it was also pretty terrible when, just at the time when Mr. King was going over to Europe with Mr. Kellogg to sign the Peace Pact, the New York Times came out and said that only two statesmen of major calibre were going to sign the treaty—Mr. Kellogg and M. Briand. But this Empire Review lapse is the limit. It's as bad as though Sporting Life thought Gene Tunney a lightweight, or that the American Golfer mistook Bobby Jones for the open champion of Maine.

Mr. Larkin, we think, should take this matter up with Downing Street. For if a periodical like the Empire Review, which carries at its masthead—

"Far as the breeze can bear, the billows foam, Survey our Empire, and behold our home."

is going to betray that they don't know all about our great statesmen, and get to mixing them up with provincial premiers, there's no telling what mischief will follow.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is evident that Ontario's liquor stores have been doing a bigger—if not a better—business.

The announcement of another big store for Charlotte street is further evidence that the "Hell" street of the old-timers is becoming a very important business thoroughfare.

Apparently Al. Jolson can also blacken eyes as well as bring tears into them.

When the United States Ambassador to Great Britain described the Canada-United States border as a world example, he was not, of course, thinking of the rum-running activities.

A Thought

"JOY"

(By Velma Runnels, Campbellford)

How wonderful it is to compare youth with spring. Those happy, spring days that make our hearts as light as the down of a thistle. Life springs up in every wood and the air fairly drips with songs from our merry songsters. Flowers spring up and adorn the earth's surface with dazzling robes. But can you not hear those gay voices beyond it all? It is the jubilant chorus of youth. Youth is so much like spring; beautiful, carefree, careless and happy.

Joy is one of the golden gifts given to us. Some hide this precious ornament and make their lives a dreary winter. Why must we hide the beautiful things in life?

Christmas is coming and what a wonderful joy that should mean to each one of us. The winter snows may blow around our doors and the winter's howling winds may cut our faces, but each and every house should be made a spring on that wonderful day of days. Youth can sing her chorus to the aged and the aged can admire the beauty which is so restless and carefree.

Joy and it workers can melt the frozen snow and pick the nodding daisies at any time. It can make the Christmas tide a chequered dream then turn it into the threaded gleams of reality.

We want the glory of Christmas to flame high and tip this busy world into the joys of spring again. In the springtime God gives His people something new to look at. He makes their cold hearts warm with His gifts. How can we draw our friends closer to us at the Yuletide? Give them gifts that come from the heart. Expensive gifts are not always the ones most freely given. They are the small gifts that were bought by a struggle. God gave His only Son and it was a great sacrifice. So we must sacrifice a great deal and try to give joy to others, not only on the King's birthday but every day of the year.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things.—Phil. 4:8.

* * *

Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy goodness to us during the night. Thou hast watched over us whilst we slept. Now we pray Thee to guard and guide us through this day. May Thy presence be with us. As our day, so may our strength be.

May Thy love be in our hearts and manifest in our conduct. Enable us to resist evil, to endure trial, to overcome difficulties and in all things to do Thy will. Whatsoever our hands find to do, may we do it with our might.

Keep us from becoming discouraged. May Thy joy be our strength. May we not grow weary in well-doing. May Thy word be a lamp to our feet and light to our path. Keep our hearts and minds. May we think of the things which are pure and lovely and of a good report. Supply all our needs this day. Make all things work together for our good. We ask in Jesus' name. Amen.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Good and evil aspects conflict today, according to astrology. Mercury slightly adverse to Venus may cause delays and mistakes.

It is a most inauspicious day for launching new enterprises, or even for opening new offices or shops.

There is a forbidding aspect for those who seek positions of any sort and they who expect political rewards may be especially subject to disappointment while this rule prevails.

After 10 o'clock in the morning the planetary government is favorable for shopping, for meetings at afternoon teas and for attendance at matinees.

Under this direction of the stars women may be less critical of one another than they would be when other configurations prevail.

Teachers and newspaper workers are supposed to be fortunate under this rule which makes for recognition of intellectual effort.

Engineers and builders are well directed today which should stimulate them to supreme effort.

All the signs seem to promise to the United States the most marvelous buildings ever erected and a new fame is foretold for America.

The seers declare that old world residents will find in America marvels greater than any they have had to offer and it is prophesied that foreign students will come to study our art and architecture, in numbers never foretold by even the most optimistic.

Now that the new era is well advanced glimpses of its real meaning are given to the wise, astrologers declare, and they remind the public how much the stars have foretold.

Controversy regarding naval matters may be expected at this time when ships and shipping will come much into public interest.

Novel recreations are forecast for the winter resorts where extraordinary numbers of refugees from cold weather will congregate.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of wonderful experiences. A disappointment or two may be followed by new opportunities and big experiences.

Children born on this day probably will succeed in whatever they undertake. They may be hasty in temper, nervous and high strung but able to accomplish wonders in anything they undertake.

There are no restrictions and no special taxes in force in Lithuania regarding the establishment and operation of business enterprizes by foreigners.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER LI.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unhappy marriage with SADIE BARROW—to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland, through his friend, LOMBARD, Giles meets Julie and determines to make her love him and then spurn her to avenge his brother. But later, after they have found out that they really love each other, he finds out that she is a cousin of the other Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. As he cannot marry her, she plunges into a wild, reckless life, and finally decides to marry a rich, older man named SCHOFIELD. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money he will tell Schofield that Chittenham and Julie spent a night together in Switzerland. Chittenham decides to get a divorce from Sadie and marry Julie, and Julie tells Schofield she cannot marry him. But then Sadie goes blind, and Chittenham feels that he cannot leave her. Julie runs away. Schofield, who believes Lombard's story and is thrashed by Chittenham for doing so, is run down by an automobile. The driver said he and Chittenham spent the stormy night on St. Bernard together, talking. Schofield, ashamed to have believed Lombard, seeks Julie to apologize. Julie goes to Boulogne. There Schofield finds her. He tells her later he has let Chittenham know. So she runs away to Switzerland where she gives lessons in English.

A week before she was to leave, Julie suddenly felt a great longing to climb the St. Bernard once more.

She had often thought of it, but always with resentment and bitterness. She had known her greatest happiness up there, in the cold bare little hotel, but she had also, because of those moments known her greatest sorrow.

She made inquiries and was told that she could not go without a guide.

"It is a dangerous time of the year," she was warned. "The snow is not yet hard enough to make it safe unless you know the way, and are an experienced climber."

"After Christmas is better," so the husband of the woman who kept the chateau told her. He had been a great climber in his younger days, and his wife proudly boasted that he knew every pass that had been trodden by the feet of man.

"I will think about it," Julie promised. "I know a guide with whom you will be quite safe," he said. "You have but to let me know."

It was the same day in the list of visitors in the paper who were expected at the Palace Hotel, Caux, for Christmas that Julie saw Giles Chittenham's name.

She was glancing down the list without much interest, wondering if anyone she had known in England might by chance be mentioned there, when suddenly his name seemed to leap out at her in letters of fire. "Mr. Giles Chittenham and his fiancee, Miss Beatrice Neale."

There followed a little chatty paragraph about them—but Julie read no more. She stood with the paper clutched in her hands, cold to the lips. He had forgotten her so soon—he was to be married to another woman!

He had forgotten her so soon.

She heard herself speaking aloud in the silent room, passionately.

"But you belong to me—you belong to me!"

The sound of her own voice frightened her, and she dropped the paper and pressed her hands to her lips

She had lost him—it was all over—some other woman of whom she had never heard had stolen him from her.

She went to the window and looked out.

The mountain tops were touched with the sunset afterglow, and there was a faint reflection of their grandeur in the still bosom of the lake.

It was far up there on the heights that Giles Chittenham had held her in his arms and said that he loved her—not yet a year ago!

Bim had often said bitterly that no man could be faithful, and Julie had not believed her. She believed her now—and such a tide of hatred and despair rose in her heart that she was afraid.

Three times Giles had struck at her—three times he had made her suffer beyond all endurance, and now she would suffer no more. She put on her thick boots and her warmest coat and went out. At the front door she met the woman who kept the house.

"You are going out?" she asked; she glanced up at the sky. "I should not go far. There is more snow to come, much more snow."

"I am not going far," Julie said, and hurried on.

The woman closed the door and went back to her warm kitchen. She was feeling happy nad pleased about her Christmas. Her rooms were all fully booked—even the room Julie was leaving—and the weather promised well for the sports.

She told her husband who was sitting smoking his pipe by the stove, that it was a good thing Miss Langdon was leaving—not that she wished her to go for she liked her well enough, but because now she could get three times as much money for her room. There was a knock at the front door, and she broke off in what she was saying to see who the visitor might be.

A tall man in a big overcoat stood there. He asked for Miss Langdon. He spoke eagerly, as if with great excitement.

"She has but a moment ago gone out. If Monsieur would put himself to the great trouble of coming in to wait."

"I will certainly wait."

It had begun to snow afresh, and the shoulders of Chittenham's coat were white.

"There is a great deal of snow to come," he said.

"It will be good for the sports," she answered cheerfully. She led him into the front room and turned on the light. "Mademoiselle will not be long," she reiterated. "She has but a moment ago gone out."

Chittenham took off his coat and hat and sat down, but he could not rest. As soon as he was alone he was on his feet again, pacing the room.

For months he had not ceased in his search for Julie, and it was only two days ago that a chance stroke of fate had led him to her at last.

He had been visiting some people in London whose daughter had come home for the Christmas holidays from school in Switzerland. She had been showing amateur photographs of her school friends, and amongst them was one of Julie.

Giles had been bored by her chatter, and had pushed the photographs aside when she pressed one more upon his notice.

"That's Miss Langdon, who comes to teach the Swiss girls English. She's a darling—"

He had looked down into Julie's face.

Now he was here—in a few moments he would be with her and hold her in his arms. He walked over to the window and stood looking out. The snow was falling thickly and the sunset glow on the mountains had faded and died.

The footsteps of the people hurrying up the s reet were muffled and already the snow had been driven by the cold wind into little drifts against the window and the curbstone outside.

How long would she be? Every mo ment seemed an eternity. When half an hour had passed Chittenham went out into the hall and called for Madame.

"You are sure Miss Langdon will be back soon? If you have any idea where she has gone I will go and find her."

But Madame had no idea—Miss Langdon had said she would not be long, and at six o'clock they always had tea.

It was half-past five now and quite dark.

"Does Miss Langdon always come in to tea?" Giles asked restlessly.

"Oh, but always! She very seldom stays out."

He went back to the room and waited another half hour, then Madame herself came to him.

"It is strange," she admitted uneasily. "I cannot understand. The omelette is all ready and will be spoiled. Will Monsieur take something to eat or a little wine? Or, if he is tired of waiting, will he return later?"

"I will wait here till Miss Langdon comes in," Giles said obstinately.

But at ten o'clock she had still not returned.

Madame was growing alarmed; she gave Giles the names of the people Julie knew and the few houses to which she occasionally went, but though he inquired of them all, there was no news.

Outside the snow was falling like a white, suffocating blanket.

"Something has happened to her," Chittenham told himself in anguish. "After all these months I am too late."

He went up to Julie's room, followed by Madame, tearful and voluble. Everything was in order—a small fire burned, and a pair of slippers lay car lessly by the bed where Julie had kicked them off. All her clothes were still in the drawers and wardrobes.

"Miss Langdon is staying somewhere because of the snow," Giles said, trying to speak calmly. "She is all right. She will come back when the snow lessens, or she will send you word."

But Madame wept and wrung her hands.

"If she is out in this snow she will die," she declared. "Adolf will tell you how terrible the snow can be. One gets a faintness round the heart—a cramp—and Adolf has lived amongst the snow and the mountains all his life."

"Would she have told you if she meant to stay out late?" Chittenham asked.

Madame declared that Julie never stayed out late—that she was the quietest, most simple lady—only once could she remember that Mademoiselle had not been in to tea at six o'clock, and that was when she went to a party at the school where she taught English to the young ladies of Switzerland.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE DISTRUST OUR FELLOWS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

A correspondent to this column wants to know why one of her sons has no faith in anyone. This lack of confidence on his part is especially hard on his young daughter, who is not allowed to go anywhere.

Cases of this sort are by no means uncommon. Life is full of disappointments. The majority of us learn how to take them without becoming hard and cynical. Some take these disappointments and disillusionments too seriously and despair of mankind.

We have different names for various types of disappointed and disillusioned people who have allowed their experience to affect their character and disposition. The disappointed lover is likely to lose faith in all women (at least temporarily) and we call him a misogymist, a woman hater. The misanthrope is one who has lost faith in all mankind. He is likely to be a cynic to boot. The atheist is one who has no faith in God. He is an unbeliever.

Finally we have the pessimist, who has lost faith in the whole universe. He believes that evil is more forceful than good and that there is no hope for the race. He looks on the dark side of life, expects the worst and is seldom disappointed.

In addition to those who have had some deep, humiliating experience which has caused them to lose faith in some phase of life, or in human beings or in life itself, there are some who assume an attitude of distrust of everyone on general principles as a protective measure. This is one method of forestalling disappointment. If you don't expect any good you will never be disappointed at the misfortune that comes your way. The ancient Greek Stoic philosophy and the Hindo Nirvana are built upon this conception of life.

Restoring confidence when once lost is not an impossible task so long as a man retains his own integrity and self respect. But if these are also lost it is almost hopeless to attempt to restore his humanity. If a man can't trust himself and his best friends he is not likely to have much faith in strangers and in mankind in general.

Why [illegible] what we do? Ask Dr. Thomson [illegible]te care of this paper, and send [illegible] envelope for reply.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BIRDS' PICNIC

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

One day a little bird chirped to its mother:

"Why don't we ever have a picnic such as you used to tell me about when I was a little baby in the nest and you and daddy used to bring me good things to eat? In my nesting days I often heard you and daddy talk about flying off to have a picnic with the other birds."

"Oh, yes, we often had picnics then," said Mother Bird as she looked carefully over the ground for crumbs which were now so scarce that every one of them must now be picked up and eaten if the birds were not to starve.

"Well, why don't we have picnic now?" asked Little Bird, who had grown enough since his nesting days so that now he could fly about with his brothers and sisters and other birds, big and small.

"We never have picnics in winter!" chirped Daddy Bird. "Worse luck!" he went on, deep down in his throat and he fluffed out his feathers to cover his legs and claws as he sat perched on a cold telegraph wire with the others. "No picnics in winter, Little Bird!" he sang with a shiver.

"It was so lovely in summer," said Mrs. Starling ass he flew down to the ground and walked about with quick steps, her head bobbing to and fro as she looked for some seeds. "I always dread winter!"

"Speaking of picnics!" cawed Mr. Black, an old crow gentleman bird, who only had one eye, for the other had been shot out by a farmer who did not like to see Mr. Black picking up the newly planted corn in the spring. "Speaking of picnics, why don't some of you ask that old rabbit gentleman I see so often hopping around in the woods and fields. He seems a right nice sort of a bunny and very kind, I'm told."

"Oh, you mean Uncle Wiggily!" said Daddy Bird.

"If that's his name—yes!" cawed Mr. Black. "Why don't you ask him to give us birds a winter picnic? There is no reason why a picnic can't be held in the winter as well as in the summer. After all, it is only good things to eat that make a picnic worth having. And if Uncle Jiggily as you call him——"

"No, not Jiggily—his name is Wiggily!" chirped Little Bird, who often perched on the warm chimney of the bunny's hollow stump bungalow.

"Well, Wiggily or Squiggily or Jiggily it's all the same if he gives us a picnic," went on Mr. Black. "Can't some of you, who know him so well, ask him?"

"I will!" offered Daddy Bird. "It's a fine idea, Mr. Black. It's strange none of us ever thought of it before. I'll fly right over to Uncle Wiggily's house and ask him to make us a winter picnic."

A little later as Uncle Wiggily was hopping out of his bungalow to go and twinkle his pink nose at Mr. Twisty-tail's pig pen house, Daddy Bird flew down and perched in a low tree.

"Uncle Wiggily, will you please make a winter picnic for us?" he chirped. "You see now that there is snow and ice on the ground we cannot so easily find crumbs and seeds to eat. But you have many crumbs in your bungalow and if you gave us only a few it would feed us."

"Of course I'll have a picnic for you!" cried jolly Uncle Wiggily. "I fed some of you birds at Thanksgiving, but I suppose what you ate then does you no good now. Yes, this afternoon you shall have a fine picnic. Invite everybody! No tickets will be sold and there will be enough for all to eat!"

"Hurray!" cried Daddy Bird.

Uncle Wiggily had Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy gather up all the crumbs and scraps of food in the bungalow and they were scattered out in front. Then from far and near all the hungry birds flew, as they had done at Thanksgiving, and down they fluttered to the bunny's picnic.

Such feasting as there was. Little Bird and his brothers and sisters had as jolly a time as ever they had had in the cosy home nest.

When the picnic was over and there were plenty of crumbs left for the next day, Daddy Bird said:

"Thank you, Uncle Wiggily, for the lovely picnic!"

"I think we should do more than thank him," chirped Mother Bird. "We should do Uncle Wiggily a favor."

"But what favor could we birds do for a big rabbit gentleman in a fur coat?" asked Daddy Bird. "If it were summer we might give him some feathers to make a bed. But in winter we need all our feathers to keep warm. What favor can we do Uncle Wiggily?"

"I'll tell you!" softly chirped Mother Bird. "It will be a secret," and she whispered something to her husband.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

ALL THAT WE CAN DO

All that we can do is this:
Love, whatever love we miss,
Help, if we are helped or not,
And remember, though forgot.

All that we can do is that:
Do what God may set us at,
Give, nor look for gratitude,
Gentle, even to the rude.

All that we can do is thus
Play the part that's given us,
Meet the world with quiet mind
Even to unkindness kind.

All that we can do is so
Just to do the best we know,
Help, if we are helped or not,
And remember, though forgot.

The United States exported 277,771 long tons of anthracite, 1,606,021 of bituminous and 69,890 of coke during August, 1928.

Invention Would Make Use of Low Grade Ores

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The Minneapolis Journal yesterday says that Miss Cora H. Webster, a young Minneapolis woman, has discovered a steel making process which has been purchased by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and which when put to active use should revive the mining of low grade iron ore in Minnesota and the world.

When developed it should furnish the answer to the problem on which experts have worked for decades—to utilize low grade iron ores in the manufacture of steel, The Journal says. It adds:

"Miss Webster is one of few women who have completed courses in chemical engineering at the University of Minnesota. She is a chemist and metallurgist, and was graduated by the University in 1923.

Revenue Freight Has Increase For Month

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—Revenue freigeht carried by Canadan railways during September amounted to 11,339,516 tons. This was an increase of 1,939,173 tons over August and an increase of 2,113,625 tons over September, 1927. Figures were made available at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics yesterday.

Of the total 8,403,972 tons were loaded in Canada. Freigeht of foreign origin amounted to 2,935,544 tons of which 1,487,633 tons went to Canadian destinations.

Produucts of mines were the largest item with a total of 3,641,420 tons. Agricultural products amounted to 3,537,532 tons and manufacturers and miscellaneous 2,629,077 tons.

The cumulative total for the year to September 30 was 81,854,433 tons, an increase of 5,856,776 tons over the similar period in 1927.

Increase In Deposits In Canadian Banks

OTTAWA, Ont., December 7. Canadian Press. — Increase in the total amount of current and savings deposits held by the Canadian banks is shown in statement for the month of October issued from the Department of Finance to-day. Current deposits were $716,857,806, $63,661,193 higher than at the end of previous month. Savings deposits showed increase of $26,780,753 over September, and totalled $1,511,595,332. Current loans held by banks in Canada showed an increase of more than thirty-five million dollars while call loans held in Canada were on increase, and those held on outside on decrease.

Issues Stage Comeback After Weak Opening

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—The stock market, which went through one of the most sweeping re-actions in recent years at yesterday's session, staged a remarkable come-back after a weak opening today.

Early declines of three to twenty points were largely made up by midday and a long list of issues were marked up two to ten points above yesterday's final quotations in the afternoon trading. Sales were in an enormous volume, with the ticker nearly half an hour behind the market at midday.

The recovery was stimulated by indications of easing of credit conditions. Although call loans renewed at ten per cent., the highest opening rate in eight years, a plentiful supply of funds appeared at that figure, leading to hopes of lowering in the rate. Receipt of $5,000,000 in gold from Canada, coupled with the predictions that the current inflow may reach $30,000,000, also helped to turn the tide of speculative sentiment.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

ABANA

A well-known engineer who examined Abana a couple of days ago reports to us that only sufficient work has been completed on the 100 foot level to interest the No. 1 vein. On the 200 the No. 2 vein was cut and the No. 1 vein intersected in the shaft. On the 300 foot level the vein has been opened up by crosscuts for 600 feet; that is, 400 feet west of the dyke and 200 feet east. Seven diamond drill holes have been put down from this level, and while he said no figures were available, five were reported to have cut ore. In his opinion insufficient underground work has been done to allow an actual estimate of $12,000,000 in reserves. He says, in part, "Twelve million dollars of actual and probable ore may be said to be quite liberal.

VIPOND

It is reported from Timmins that production from the Vipond this year will reach a total of close to $700,000, as against less than $650,000 last year. During the last three months the grade of ore was raised to approximately $8.95 a ton with total costs of less than $6, and a net return of $3 a ton is assured. This represents an annual net of around $260,000, which is more than double the earnings when the company paid a dividend in 1926.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

Bathurst officials are in receipt of radio messages to the effect that drifting on the second level still continues in high grade ore, according to reliable advices. In addition to this, it is stated, the No. 1 vein is showing considerable high grade ore also.

Clearwater Lake advices are to the effect that over 1,100 feet of diamond drilling has been completed on the property of the Bobjo Mines, Limited. While there is no assay plant at the property, the core is said to look good. It is said that four holes have been put down to date and in addition to this work the ore zone has been stripped for a further 70 feet and a new vein located further south.

Noranda is reported to have struck ore in their No. 4 shaft. This shaft is now said to be down to a depth of some 180 feet.

Diamond drilling on the Sylvanite is said to have encountered a wide carrying good values on the north east corner of the property.

The shaft on Mining Corporation's Murray property is now down some 300 feet, having encountered some mineralization but no ore as yet. Present plans are to sink to 500 feet where lateral work will be carried out. It is understood also that diamond drilling will be carried out from a station to be cut at the 500-foot horizon.

A report on the Kirkland Gold Belt property was prepared recently by K. B. Heisy, M.E., in which he states: "The showing here is, to my knowledge, the best surface gold deposit ever found east of Kirkland Lake. The chances for making a successful mine here are good. Geological and structural conditions to ore depth deposition are good." At present some 30 men are employed in surface work at the property. A diamond drill is working to intersect the ore at depth and to help pick out the best spot for a shaft site. Shaft sinking will commence soon. This property represents one of J. J. Bryne's many activities in the eastern Kirkland Lake camp.

Recent unexpected strength in the shares of Nipissing and Robb Montbray gave rise to many reports of new strikes, etc. Alex Faskin, president of the Nipissing and a director of Robb Montbray states that there is nothing new at he properties that he knows of. It was mentioned some time ago that underground work at the Robb Montbray had ceased and that attentions were confined to diamond drilling.

It is reported that Leo Erenhous and Bert Ray, have purchased the Cocheram-Graham claims at Cold Lake, 30 miles northeast of Crow River. The group is situated to the south of and adjoining the discovry group, now held by the Northern Areals Minerals Exploration Company. A company is in process of formation to develop these claims. The property purchased is said to comprise two groups.

NORANDA

The fact that Noranda officials are withholding news from the public until the annual report appears, probably next February, has made the stock subject to rather wide fluctuations. Rumor mongers, who have their own little axe to grind, are every ready to circulate stories, when they feel that they will not be made ridiculous by official news of a constructive character next day.

Noranda, The Financial News Bureau is informed, will have a lot of interesting news for shareholders when the report appears. Rapid headway is being made in proving the downward extension of the six or seven ore bodies opened up last year above 300 feet, and it is reported that results have been highly favorable. A very substntial increase in ore reserves may be looked for.

Work at the property falls under five main headings: 1—Smelter performance has been far beyond expectations; treatment has been more than double what was rated when the mine went into production, and the second unit will go into production early next year, and should repeat what the first unit had accomplished. Millheads are reported also to be better than anticipated, recovery being close to $24 per ton, from which profits should be 50 per cent.

2—The price of copper is two cents uer ton above the level on which ore reserves were based at the end of 1927. This is an important factor in computing profits. The statistical position of the world copper market is so strong as to assure maintenance of high copper prices for a considerable period to come. Mills of United States companies, for instance, have been operating at full capacity, but in face of this stocks of copper metal have dwindled.

3—Noranda's old workings are being extended steadily. This includes the opening up of several important new ore bodies, indicated by surface outcrops and drills to be rich, and the lower extensions (below 300 feet) of the numerous ore bodies opened up above that horizon.

4—The new workings to the north, which will tap the rich ore at depth.

5—The "H" and "B" ore bodies, which between 600 and 975 feet changed the entire complexion of the mine, and are expected to add hundreds of millions of dollars to ore reserves when fully developed.

Minerals Exporation Ltd. Organized to Explore Shatford Lake and Wintering Lake Properties

Minerals Exporation Limited has been incorporated with a Province of Manitoba charter for the purpose of exploring and acquiring mineral properties in an early stage of development which show promise of later profitable re-sale after further preliminary work has been done, the basis of re-sale being recovery of moneys already expended in cash and the retention of a non-assessable stock interest in any company formed to develop the property sold.

The company has already acquired three properties which are said to show considerable promise, two being in the Shatford Lake district in the vicinity of the tin discoveries recently made, and the third at Wintering Lake near Mile 185 Hundson Bay railway, in Northern Manitoba. No. 1 property comprises 600 acres, making the Edwin group, south of Shatford Lake, in the line of strike of the tin find now being investigated by Manitoba Basin Mines associates. No. 2 property is three claims approximately three miles south-east along the greenstone-granite contact where there is some surface evidence of mineralization. It is understood that negotiations leading to the disposal of the larger group are in progress with a company in process of organization to undertake intensive investigation of several groups in the neighborhood. At Wintering Lake the company owns 31 claims at the northeast of the lake, in close proximity to the Gordon Murray group optioned by Atlas Exploration Company and on which considerable exploration was completed this summer. The indicated mineralization is copper. The surface promise is stated to be excellent.

The company is capitalized at 50,000 no par value shares of which 25,000 have already been issued and a further 20,000 is offered to finance contemplated development plans. GRAIN SHIPMENTS.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 7 (Canadian Press). — The Royalton, with 320,000 bushels of wheat for Port Colborne, was the only vessel clearing yesterday from the port of Fort William-Port Arthur. The Nettleton, loading grain yesterday, will also leave for the East. Seven boats are en route light for grain. Weather at the head of the Lakes is very favorable, there being no ice to interfere with vessel movement in the harbor, and the thermometer standing well above zero, with light breezes and clear sky. Navigation on the lake is as good as at any time this fall.

Three coal boats are unloading and two others en route.

Following is yesterday's report on vessel movements:

Cleared—Royalton, Port Colborne, wheat.

In port—Hagarty, Mantadoc, Soodoc, discharging coal; A. E. Nettleton, loading grain; Winona, discharging rails; Canadian, discharging freight; Fairmount, making repairs.

Stock Values Fluctuate On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—Selling again brought about fairly severe declines in early trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, but the wave of liquidation was stopped later in the morning, the recovery being general. The market course ran practically parallel to Wall Street, with the more speculative issues bearing the brunt of the attack.

A number of issues opened two or three points lower than yesterday's closing quotations, supporting orders resulting in recoveries in most cases. Walkers was extremely active and in the early business fell off three points to 71, later moving up to 73½, where it showed a loss of a good fraction. Canadian General Electric ran contrary to the general trend and on sales. Sales of 50 shares was up three at 138.

Sellers Outnumber Buyers On Chicako Wheat Market

CHICAGO, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices here tended downward early to-day, despite the relative strength shown by the wheat market at Liverpool. Sellers of wheat in Chicago outnumbered the buyers, owing more or less to the bearish upturns regarding the crop outlook for domestic winter wheat. Opening at ¼ off to 3-8 up, Chicago wheat later showed a material set-back all around. Corn, oats and provisions were comparatively firm, with corn starting 1-8 to ¾ higher, but subsequently re-acting.

Chicago—Wheat, December 115½; March 119¾. Corn, December 84¼; March 87 5-8. Oats, December 48; March 48 3-8.

Mine Leaders Drop On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, December 7. (Canadian Press.)—Noranda recovered towards noon to-day to gain 1.25 to 56.25 on the Standard Mining Exchange after it had opened at 55.00, and sold as low at 53.75. The market generally was irregular with a slight downward trend prominent among some of the leaders. Hollinger Consolidated was up 25c to 8.25 and Sudbury Basin 15 to 7.00, after selling had brought about declines. Barry-Hollinger ran into heavy selling, and dropped 2 to 23. Bathurst was down 3 to 36; Howey 1-2 at 99 1-2. Mining Corporation lost 20c to 3.60, as did Towagamac to 3.20. Siscoe was down 4 1-4 to 70 1-4, while Wright-Hargreaves was 5 cents lower at 1.90. Nipissing sold at 3.50, a loss of 10c. Sherritt Gordon advanced 10c to 6.35. Malartic was down 2 1-4 at 80 1-4. Abana gained 24c to 3.10, and Hudson Bay 5 to 19.10, while Pend-O'Reille lost 30c to 9.70.

BANK OF MONTREAL ANNUAL MEETING MARKED BY MANY IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS

Authorized Capital to be Increased From $31,175,000 to $50,000,000—Sincere Regret Expressed at Absence of Sir Vincent Meredith, Chairman of the Board—Sir Charles Gordon Presides For First Time—Executive Committee to be Increased From Three to Five Members—Warm Tribute to General Manager and Staff — Prosperous Year Reviewed.

The 111th annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, held at the head office, was marked by a number of important incidents and developments. Sincere expressions of regret were made at the absence of Sir Vincent Meredith, Chairman of the Board, who had presided at the Annual Meeting of the Bank for so many years.

Of special importance was the announcement of an increase in the authorized capital from $31,175,000 to $50,000,000. No intimation was given of the amount that would be issued at the present time.

Authority was also given for the enlargement of the executive committee from 3 to 5 members. At a subsequent meeting, the executive committee of the board was appointed, consisting of Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., Sir Charles Gordon, G.B.E., H. R. Drummond, Major-General the Hon. S. C. Mewburn C.M.G., and E. W. Beatty, K.C.

Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank, presided for the first time. In his address to shareholders, he said, in part:—

"The statement of the year's operations shows that we have fully participated in the general prosperity. Our funds have found full employment, in particular during the past eight months, due to the continued improvement in trade and industry, to the reaping of another bountiful harvest in the prairie provinces, and the generally prosperous state of agriculture in other provinces, and also to the higher rates for call money in New York. On this latter point I shall have a few more words to say presently.

"While agricultural, commercial, and industrial activities have been carried on during the year in greater volume than ever before, it cannot be said that the banks have felt any great strain from these sources. Here, as in the United States, many companies have carried over from the war period large reserve profits which now serve as working capital, and others have issued securities which, being absorbed by the public, have left them independent of the banks.

"An even more important factor, perhaps, is that the turnover in wholesale and retail business is now much more rapid and that therefore the banks are not called upon to finance such relatively large stocks as formerly. This change was inaugurated under pressure of necessity, following the post-war depression, but the principal reason for its continuance is the extraordinary improvement in transportation facilities, permitting of a more rapid replenishment of stocks. While automobile traffic has had its part in this change, I think the public hardly realizes how much of it is due to the increased efficiency of our railways.

Widening Basis of Production.

"Reviewing the business situation in Canada, one cannot but remark how rapidly the basic sources of our national wealth are widening. The concurrence of a wide variety of raw material with water powers on a truly gigantic scale gives Canada extraordinary opportunities for all-round development, and the fact that these opportunities are now being realized is resulting in the establishment of primary enterprises involving large investments of capital and contributing in marked degree to the general activity.

Call Money Market.

"There seems to be a somewhat widespread idea that Canadian banks have transferred large amounts of money to New York for employment in call loans. That notion is wholly erroneous. The policy of the Bank of Montreal, and I may say I believe this applies to all Canadian banks, has long been to carry in New York a substantial proportion of ready reserves or quick assets. No funds, however, are ever transferred to New York or London to be loaned on call until every legitimate need of our own cuntry has been carefully examined and, if at all possible, complied with. Our loans there have been less than they were a year ago."

General Manager's Address.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor general-manager of Bank of Montreal, reviewing the business of the Bank, said in part:—

"Our net profits are well in advance of those of any post-war year; owing, first, to highly prosperous conditions in Canada, resulting in increased demands for loans to be used in productive enterprise, with comparative freedom from losses, and second, to higher rates of interest obtained upon that portion of our funds carried as quickly available assets in New York and London, our reserve centres outside of this country.

A Prosperous Year for Canada.

"Canada as a whole has enjoyed more prosperity than ever before. At the commencement of 1928 a succession of good harvest had already placed the country on a prosperous footing, and the position has been further improved this year by good average yields of the staple crops in all the older provinces, while the Prairie Provinces have far surpassed their previous records. In industrial activity an extraordinary enlargement has shown itself in construction works, many being of a most impressive character. These include the further exploitation of those great natural assets, water powers, minerals and forests. Also, we have seen a further increase in revenue from the tourist trade, now ranking high among Canada's business activities.

"These factors have put large sums of money into general circulation; they have increased the demands upon many of our industries and have created the highest scale of employment since the War. Particularly in the two chief industrial provinces, Quebec and Ontario, manufacturing has been on an unprecedented scale, despite exceptions in a few lines owing to outside competition.

"In Western Canada the year has been remarkable, not only for the record grain crops in the Prairie Provinces, but also for a reduction in harvesting cost per bushel, due chiefly to good weather and partly to the growing effectiveness of agricultural machinery.

"The relative decline of rural population, often the subject of comment, is partly attributable to the growing production per man-power brought about by machinery. The varied labor saving equipment increasingly used on farms all over Canada both enlarges the product.ve capacity and improves the living conditions of our rural population.

"These developments show the Canadian farmer to-day as a man of affairs, who is rapidly bringing his methods up to the standard of highly developed urban industries.

Better Conditions in Maritimes.

"One of the happiest developments has been the definite revival of prosperity in the Maritime Provinces, now coming into line with the rest of Canada in this respect. Old-established industries are taking on new life, important new industries based on the exploitation of water power and forest wealth are being established; new settlers are being attracted; and tourists in ever-increasing numbers are discovering in these provinces a summer paradise.

Tourist Trade of High Importance.

"The tourist trade, already referred to, has risen so fast from the comparative unimportance of a few years ago that according to Government statistics tourists from abroad spent over $275,000,000 in Canada in 1927. As every province reports an even larger number of tourists this year, the spending also has no doubt been greater during 1928.

"Compare this tourist trade of $275,000,000 with some other sources of the country's revenue. Thus, the value of Canada's wheat exports in 1927 was $348,000,000; of our mineral production, $245,000,000; of the output of our pulp and paper mills, $220,000,000. Evidently the tourist trade has become a Canadian business interest of high importance."

opened on the court yard where the gallows had been erected. The other opened on a smaller yard where an officer was stationed. At a window of the court which overooks the prisoner's cell, two other officers were placed. Inspector Miller and Inspector Stringer of the Provincial Police, had taken every precaution in case an attempt was made by the prisoner's friends to get him out of jail.

Burowski had changed his story of the shooting and the mail robbery three times. Nothing but the general outlines of his last statement has been made public. He at first declared that he had met his accomplices on the road and that he knew nothing about them. He then made a statement to the police in which he declared that he and two friends, an Italian and the other a Pole, planned the robbery in Toronto at a Queen street cafe. Burowski said he was the only member of the trio who could drive a car and it was his job to meet the train from Romfort Junction. When it arrived at Parry Sound he was to have an auto and speed away with his accomplices to Sudbury. For his part in the crime he was to have received $20,000. His last story, it is understood, varies in some important details from his other accounts of the hold-up and shooting. The last man hanged in Parry Sound was George Cason, executed by Hangman Radcliffe 18 years ago, for killing a man whom he had attempted to rob. No claim had been made for the body of Burowski when the execution takes place on the 21st. He will probably be buried in the jail yard.

The telegram which gave Burowski twoweeks' reprieve was filed in Toronto at 12.07 a.m. Friday and telephoned to the jail from the station at 12.16 a.m. It reads as follows:

To J. E. Armstrong,
Sheriff,
Parry Sound, Ont.

Mr. Justice McEvoy has granted a two weeks' reprieve to John Burowski. Original reprieve order will be mailed to you as soon as possible This is your authority to stay execution of the sentence until you receive original order and thereafter for a period of two weeks from its date.

(Signed) W. H. Price,
Attorney-General
for Ontario

Mr. Justice McEvoy conferred with his brother Judges and with a representative of the Attorney-General, last night at his home, following the application made during the afternoon.

J. R. Hett, counsel for Burowski, presented affidavits yesterday in which the prisoner charged two men yet unnamed, with the killing which followed the train robbery. One was a Pole and the other an Italian.

Thomas Jackson was shot and killed when he went to help the men fleeing from a mail car robbery, to get the car out of a ditch. The owners of the car (which had been stolen) arrived on the scene and in the struggle Burowski was captured. Jackson was hit by a bullet, and the other bandits escaped.

On Way To Quebec.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 7.—On his way from Parry Sound to Quebec, Arthur Ellis, official hangman for Canada, passed through Toronto today. He is to carry out an execution in Quebec a week from to-day, then he is scheduled to go to London to hang Wm. Murrell on Dec. 17, and thence to Parry Sound to hang Burowski.

SALVATION ARMY HOLDS BIG BAZAAR

Proceeds Will Go to Aid Winter Work Throughout City.

The Salvation Army held their Christmas bazaar yesterday afternoon and evening in the Junior Hall. The proceeds of the bazaar will go to aid the winter work of the Army.

The bazaar presented a cheerful scene with the booths gaily decorated with colored streamers and bunting by the ladies. All the work was done and donated by the ladies and young people of the Army.

There was a splendid booth of the Young People's Legion selling fancy work and other fine articles of needle work. The Legion is composed of young girls, who are taught sewing, fancy work, knitting and picture work under the direction of Mrs. W. G. Robinson. Miss Jean Gilman and Mrs. Howard Young. A mothers' booth was that of the Home League composed of the senior women, who were selling sewing of their own make under the supervision of Mrs. J. Pammett and Mrs. E. Hedge. This organization work was for the general benefit of the corps. A unique booth was the one conducted by Mrs. W. Jones and Mrs. G. Thomas. The articles for sale were divided under the names of days of the week. Sunday had a picture of General Booth nicely draped with the guard flag and articles useful on the Sabbath. Monday had wash day supplies; Tuesday, ironing goods; Wednesday, all the things necessary in baking; Thursday, needles and sewing supplies; Friday, all the mops and brushes necessary for cleaning day; and Saturday, as bake day, had all pans and plates used in the preparation of dainties.

Home-made candies were on sale in the Band of Love booth. This band is the kindergarten of the Army and the children are taught drills, physical exercises and sewing by Misses May Robinson and K. Winslaid. The Corps booth was one of miscellaneous articles all donated by the ladies. Mrs. Ensign Green was in charge of the booth. One booth that attracted much attention was the refreshment booth, in charge of Mrs. W. Naish.

A large and busy rummage sale was conducted in the ante-room by Mrs. J. Pammett, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Griffin.

During the evening a well-enjoyed musical program was given by the instrumental quartette, consisting of Bandmaster F. Robinson, Deputy Bandmaster S. Richardson, and Bandsmen Vic Lang and Mel. Shadgett.

The bazaar will also be open this evening.

A century or so ago men wore earrings and carried muffs on the streets of Boston.

WOMEN NOT GOOD AS BROADCASTERS

Fail at Tests for Talking for British Broadcasting Corporation.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 7 (By the Canadian Press)—Women, who have invaded many of the spheres formerly held exclusively by men and have succeeded therein, are now faced with a new challenge—the British Broadcasting Corporation says it is not the corporation's intention to employ women as announcers. At present there are a few women employed part time before the microphone in London, announcing programmes during the afternoon, in the Children's Hour, and at some provincial stations, and these will be retained, but the corporation states that it is not its policy to employ women for broadcasting work.

In an interview an official of the British Broadcasting Corporation said: "The B.B.C. has tested recently a large number of women applicants for the positions of announcers. There are no vacancies for announcers, male or female, and the B.B.C. does not contemplate appointing women to full-time announcing posts in the near future. Among those women tested no suitable candidate was found. This was possibly due to the limitations of the microphone, and possibly to the limitations of those who were tested."

Answering several questions, an official supplemented the above statement by saying that the women who were given a trial before the microphone came from all parts of the country and that they were well educated. The test took place two months ago, and consisted of readings from books to which the officials listened in. No members of the general listening-in hear the efforts of the candidates.

There was no direct answer to the question: "Are women banned for ever as announcers to the B.B.C?" the reply being, "We have no vacancy for an announcer."

The official refused to commit himself when he was asked: "In the event of there being a vacancy will the B.B.C. give equal consideration to the applications of women and men?"

The B.B.C. contend that while a candidate must be able to appear before the microphone it is essential that an announcer should have executive ability to discharge heavy responsibilities at unexpected moments. He sometimes has complete charge of the studio and has to make quick decisions and be a good disciplinarian.

A Pioneer Christmas

(By Nelly Bly, Madoc)

Nelly Bly—
Shuts her eye
When she goes to sleep.
And when she opens them again,
Her eyes begin to peep.
Hi, Nelly! Ho, Nelly!
Listen, love, to me.
I sing for you, I'll play for you
The sweetest melody.

The little group of us are gathered in the old log shanty which is now our home in Northern Ontario—a rather forlorn little group, for it is the day before Christmas, and the late afternoon is dull and cheerless, and outside a heavy snow storm is raging. So outdoor play is forbidden. And Mother has been ill, so in the one room available to us, we must keep quiet and not disturb Mother, who is trying to rest.

The question just now interesting us, is "Will Santa Claus be able to find us here; so far from everybody. When he found our little family group in the far away home of the cathedral town of Wakefield last Christmas?"

There is myself, just eight, and the eldest of the group; sister, six years old; brother, four, and my own special charge now, little Blossom, two years old; for Mother's hands will be full with the tiny delicate baby, just two weeks old.

Sister expresses utter disbelief that Santa could ever get down the black, ugly stove pipe, for all are missing the great glowing fireplaces of the English home. The tide is turned to more cheerful thoughts, when Mother joins the group. Such a thin, white-looking Mother, too dainty and fragile for a Canadian farm, one would think, and too young-looking to be the Mother of the five of us; but with a staunch brave heart to meet the many difficulties in the New World home.

She sets herself to brighten us up, and soon is telling the ever-entrancing story of the Babe of Bethlehem, and the Wise Men who followed the Star. Then she starts us singing, for she is musical. How we miss the piano left behind in Old England, but she tells us we must sing the songs we know, and so never forget them. So "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," is followed by "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," and "Christians, Awake!" This is joined in by Dad, who has come in from doing chores, and whose favorite it is.

Then we each have our own song—mine, "Nelly Bly" sung to me, and at me by Dad in his play hour with us at night, and by Mother, when she rocked me at eventide or to sooth the aching ear, or cure the other childish troubles.

Sister's is "Maggie by My Side." Brother chimes in for his, "Willie, We Have Missed You," and even Baby Blossom claims her's:

Soon beyond the harbor bar,
Shall my bark be sailing far,
O'er the world I wander lone,
Sweet Belle Mahone."

Now the question comes: Little baby must have a song, too; but alas, she has no name; so after many suggestion, Mother decides she shall be named for her own dearly loved friend in the English home, so Kathryn she is to be, and "Oh, Have You Ne'er Heard of Kate Kearny?" will be her special song until Mother can think of another.

So now we sing, "Sun of My Soul," and "Jesus, Tender Shepherd, Hear Me," and prayers are said at Mother's knee, before we are dismissed for bed.

But now the question of hanging stockings comes up. "At home," the big fireplace was always the place, but now if we each take them to our beds, Santa may not find them, so they are all hung by Mother's bed downstairs, and we go off contented and happy.

Shall we ever forget Christmas morning? Very early, about four, brother wakes and adventures to see if Santa has arrived, and is sternly sent back by father. About six, Sister Maggie thinks it is getting awfully late, but Mother bids her "stay in bed until fires are lighted and the rooms warmed," so back we all go again, but soon we are called to dress, and boots and stockings must be put on for fear of colds.

By the time we are ready, the simple, hot breakfast of oatmeal porridge with lots of creamy milk and hot buttered toast is ready, and Mother promises us if we will eat breakfast first, she will let everything else wait and will spend her time with us while we find out what Santa Claus has brought.

One or two things we know already, for some parcels won't stay hid, but after longing, lingering glances at the stockings we are coaxed to eat breakfast first, for father says we wouldn't eat any afterwards.

That first Christmas in Canada remains "a picture of memory" even now; when the children of those days are now bearing the stress and strain of life, and the dear father and mother, with little sister, and brother, too, have gone to "Gather at the River."

How Mother contrived it, I really can't imagine. In the tiny baby's sock were bootees, a wooly hood and mittens, just right for the rigorous climate, and what joy it brought to us that the dear, wee one was remembered by Santa.

Blossom, too, has mittens, and a warm red quilted hood, with candy, an apple, and an orange with raisins from a precious treasured hoard, and a doll.

Brother finds a whip for his hobby horse, reins knitted with infinite patience, and a pair of "Wellington" boots, long-legged like father's, with red tops. This has been his one desire, so he is supremely happy.

Sister has a doll, too, and a workbox, and a needle-book with needles of all sizes. Also small spools, tiny buttons, and blunt scissors, and bright remnants for doll clothes; for already she bids fair to be a good needlewoman, and delights in sewing.

For myself, I find a book, "The Wide, Wide World," a story told me over and over by mother, but I am lost to the world. I care not what my stocking holds besides, I have my book. Afterwards I find a drawing slate, and Christmas goodies, but my book is the one thing necessary for my happiness just then.

My own Christmas gift; the first I ever really made, was a pair of white woollen stockings, knitted with infinite pains for brother. They are almost shapeless, but I have been learning to knit and am proud that they are finished. They help to fill the new boots, so I am happy, too.

Dear memories of the olden days! Many things are forgotten, but that day can never be. Father calls us to order, and the Christmas story is read once again from the Book, and "Christians, Awake," is sung.

We all try to help with the clearing up, and then father gets the horses and the long sleigh ready, and takes us children for a long ride, for the sleighing is a delightful novelty to us all, and mother must have quiet, for she must bathe and dress the new baby, and Christmas dinner must be prepared. So, after father getting wood and water in plenty, away we go, and father tells us stories as we drive along. Then sets us to singing again. Then, as we grow cold and restless, turns again home, to mother and Christmas dinner.

The afternoon passes quietly in games and stories from father and mother, who are striving to create an English Christmas in this northland.

After a simple evening meal of hot milk, bread and butter and just a taste of English cake, bed-time comes early for us all, for the open-air drive and the excitement has tired us all, and Mother, too, is ready to spend an hour or two in quiet and writting letters to absent English friends.

AT the very first cough or sneeze, don't fail to use OWBRIDGE'S—a remedy for coughs, colds and respiratory troubles, as effective as it is famous.

GIRLS REFUSE INFORMATION ON WILD PARTY

Three Saucy Misses Smile as Details of Fatal Night Are Rehearsed.

YOUTH IS KILLED.

Tragedy Is Ascribed To Jealousy Over 14 Year Old Girl Student.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 6.—Echoes of a strange revelry in the city's night life, when young girls clinked glasses with the men and a jazz band crashed on in the dance, in contrast to a tragic scene in the driveway, where a youth lay gasping out his life, with three ragged bullet holes in his body, and a mere child slumped in the back of an automobile with her right eye shot out—all came moaning back through a Memphis courtroom.

Echoes of an evening when 14-year-old Beth Seaver "stepped out" with her boy friend and three girl chums for a touch of Bohemian adventure with a Bacchanalian hue, and in the moral a stern and uncompromising state's attorney draws the shadowy outlines of grim prison walls—and the electric chair.

While the story was being rehearsed under oath, the judge leaned back in his chair and gazed intently at the saucy, smiling faces of the material witnesses—three girls who accompanied Beth Seavers and young Robert S. McDonald to the death dance in Germantown,a suburb fringing the eastern border of the city. They are seminary girls—and they won't tell.

Shet, She Won't Tell.

"Bob" McDonald, 18, is in his grave. Miss Seavers, central figure in the dance murder mystery and the only eye-witness, except the murderer, is in a hospital, disfigured for life—and she won't tell.

"What can be done to stop them—these young girls in their 'teens drinking liquor with the boys at roadhouse orgies?" shouted W. Tyler McLain, state's attorney.

"Nothing," observed Judge A. B. Pittman, sitting in the Circuit Court. "Morals and religion are twin brothers, Mr. State's Attorney; they can't be regulated by law."

"I'm going to get at the bottom of this murder if I have to send every young girl at that dance to jail as accessory to the crime," the state's attorney cried, shaking his finger at Nellie Montgomery, 18, and her sister, Jessica, 16, and Sybil Delahite, also 16, seated in a row in court. Girlish curls hang from beneath small hats, and short skirts expose three pairs of silk-stockinged knees.

Hold Man For Murder.

John Wesley Turner, 33, married, wife and three children in court is held for trial the third Monday in next January on an indictment charging first degree murder.

"An accident," is Turner's plea.

"What a remarkable accident," hurled back Sheriff Will S. Knight.

A winding trail of romance has led the pack from the sheriff's office in swift pursuit of clues in Memphis' latest murder mystery.

The arrest of Turner, who admits young McDonald was slain by Turner's automatic rifle, which he said fell and was accidentally discharged—four times!—came after the state's attorney unearthed evidence tending to show that Turner and Miss Seavers were old acquaintances.

"I never saw the man before the night of the dance," the girl swore, to the perplexity of the court.

wealth; for last year, our exports were valued at many millions of dollars? It is a great country and we have no right to close it up to others, but we must be careful not to exploit it. There reposes upon us a great responsibility in the management of our country.

"My other thought is of the Empire. Britain won Canada for us, developed our country until it was ready to take its place among the nations and while we may now be independent, we should remember that independence does not mean separation. United, we stand; divided, we fall."

Musical Numbers

No banquet meeting is complete without music and while last night's program was not extensive in this regard, there were two occasions on which Bother Robert Hendry delighted his listeners with humorous songs while accompanied at the piano by Brother Neil Porter. Heartily applauded were his Scotttish numbers, while a couple of jokes at the expense of guests present were not amiss.

Ontario, Our Province

That the subject of his toast might be appreciated the better, Sir A. F. Hagerman, in proposing the toast to "Ontario, Our Province," gave comprehensive statistics regarding her geopraphical, economical, educational and industrial possibilities, and in conclusion declared that, "It is ours, not to be exploited but to live in, loving our fellow men and to leave, better than we found it."

Bro. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Drawing from an extensive inspection of Northern Ontario's development, which he had made while touring with the Hon. William Finlayson some time ago, the local member of the provincial house, W. H. Bradburn, justified his declaration that Ontario is the banner province of the Dominion. Mr. Bradburn told of the extensive power development in the North, particularly in the Nipigon district, where much of the electrical equipment used had been produced at the C.G.E. plant in Peterborough; he went on to speak of prospects around Kenora and Cobalt, and touched on the effectiveness of the fire prevention measures used, the air service playing a prominent part. Finally, he dwelt on the pulp and paper industry, and incidentally mentioned the extensive work of the Peterborough firm of Morrow and Beatty, contractors, and concluded by urging a conscientious effort to promote the welfare of the province.

Our City

A resident of Peterborough for the past 42 years, Sir. J. J. Cunningham recalled the days when he walked along board sidewalks to the little frame building that was the market hall, crossed the pasture fields where now stands the C.G.E. plant and played among the slab piles where the immense Quaker Oat plant is to be seen to-day. "Peterborough has become a city to be proud of and our pride may only be justified by the plane of our citizenship" said he in proposing the toast to our city.

Following in the same line of thought, ex-Alderman Brother John Edgar responded on behalf of a city of numerous and large industries, splendid educational facilities and beautiful homes, which place it among the best cities of its size in Ontario.

Toast to Grand Black

The toast that brought to his feet the main speaker of the evening was thatp roposed in brief manner by Wor. Sir. R. Ritchie, W. P., R.B.P., No. 261—to the Grand Black Chapter of British Amerieas.

The Grand Master of Grand Black Chapter, M.W., Sir H. A. Graham, was accorded a hearty reception as he arose. Perhaps it was the example set by the previous speakers—at any rate, he turned back the years to the early days of his career as an Orangeman, and later, as a member of the Royal Black preceptory and recalled that it was in Peterborough that he had been appointed to the provincial chapter for Ontario East. Six years later, in Lindsay, he had been appointed to Grand Orange lodge.

Speaking of the Orange lodge, he urged the members of the 'Black' to never cease taking an interest in the primary Orange lodges, which have attained, as has the Black Preceptory, a new place of respect. "I have not missed a meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge in nineteen years and have been proud to note the class of men whom I have met there. We must avoid being careless in the conferring of our degrees and if we are careful, I cannot see anything but prosperity ahead, of the Orange and the Black." The speaker went on to give credit to the pioneer Orangemen in this country, and turning eastward, told of progress made in Quebec and along the Gaspe coast. He urged a more loyal attention to the requirements and life of the preceptory.

Other Speakers

There were other brief addresses during the evening, all in keeping with the spirit of the meeting. The toast to the Grand Black Chapter of Ontario East was proposed by R. W. Sir Knight George Porter who paid tribute to late M.W. Sir Knight Weir whose memory has been honored by his picture having been placed on the banner of the preceptory. Sir Knight S. Weir, his son, was present last night, a member of R.B.P. No. 261.

In responding to the toast, M.W. the Rev. A. L. Green thanked those present for the honor conferred upon him, and touched on the principles and qualities of members of the R.B.P. He referred to Canada as the best country on earth with Ontario its best province.

R. W. Sir Knight E. N. Mitchell of Lindsay, also responding to the toast, spoke of the illness of the king and of the deep concern felt throughout he Dominion, as a result. He referred proudly to the freedom which Canadians have enjoyed, politically and religiously.

Sir Knight H. Gardiner proposed the toast to the visitors in most able manner while those speaking on behalf of the visitors were Sir Knight Montgomery of Norwood; Sir Knight H. Minifie, of Coldsprings; Sir Knight Richardson of Pontypool, and Sir Knight Isaac Barlow of Havelock. Sir Knight Isaac Weir, of Toronto, spoke briefly, thanking the Knights for the honor accorded his father's memory.

Then followed the toast to the ladies by Sir Knight F. Millard and responded to by Sister Flossie Brown of Eastern Star L.O.B.A. Mr. Millard paid tribute to the worth of the ladies of the L.O.B.A. and to the splendid banquet which they had provided.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

SANDERCOCK—JEWELL.

HASTINGS, Dec. 7. — At eleven o'clock on Wednesday, Dec. 5th, Trinity United church parsonage, Hastings, was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Rev. A. Carman Hie united in marriage, Lillian Maud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Jewell of Dartford, to Eric George, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sandercock of Fenella. Miss Lila Jewell, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Gordon Sandercock, brother of the groom, was best man. The bridal party left by auto for the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding dinner was served to the immediatae friends of the bride and groom. During the afternoon, the happy couple left on an extended motor trip to Oshawa, Toronto and other western points. the meetings as a full fledged member.

Appreciates Honor

Accepting the card and button, A. H. McKeel said that he very much appreciated the honor which the membership automatically afforded him in connecting him with the "country's best." Regarding the memorials, he said that the people of Trent River had been solid behind him in the work. As evidence, he quoted how an elderly resident had been ready for work at five-thirty on the first morning and continued throughout without missing an hour. As for the memorial at Alderville, he felt sure that the Indians would be pleased to learn of the honor the Campbellford Legion had bestowed upon him. They were true friends, he said, reminding the members that the Indians had fought in the war even when they could not have been made to fight. He did not want to take any more credit than anyone else for his work. Everyone had been anxious for a memorial in both places. It had only been necessary for them to have a leader to start the work moving. The Alderville memorial was much more attractive now than it had been at the time of its unveiling, Mr. McKeel claimed. A fence had been built around it and the entire enclosure made more attractive. He was very desirous of seeing a monument erected in Campbellford to the memory of Nurse Edith Cavell, he claimed. As for the present memorial, he said he had had nothing to do with it. He had not been "consulted in any shape or form." In closing, he again expressed his appreciation for the honor of being made a member of the Legion.

Regarding the sacred concert held in the Regent Theatre last Sunday night, Major Bygott expressed the opinion that it was the most successful yet. As for the concert Wednesday night, it had also been successful. He could not say what was the financial returns, since the accounts were not yet all adjusted.

There was a letter from Comrade Haig, who is confined in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, expressing appreciation for the manner in which the Legion had remembered him.

The installation of officers was discussed at some length, and it was suggested that the affair take the form of a social evening after the installation had been completed. Other suggestions were that Col. Ackerman of Peterborough be asked to be present. It was understood that the Colonel had previously expressed a desire to visit the local branch. It was also thought a good opportunity to invite ex-service men from Havelock and Warkworth. Neither of these places have an established branch of the Legion and it was thought that Veterans from the two places would appreciate some first-hand information on the workings of the internal machinery of the organization.

Sarah or Reminding

(By Mrs. A. R., City)

"Give—Give of your Best—Give when it hurts you to give, and you will be repaid threefold by the joy and contentment such giving brings."

The minister was earnestly appealing to the generosity of the more fortunate congregation of the neighboring church; pleading with them the cause of his own over-crowded, poverty stricken parish. Eloquently he had related to them stories of suffering and sorrow; of courageous battle against overwhelming odds; of little children who were denied the natural birthright of childhood—the birthright of care-free happiness.

Little Margaret had listened with wide-open eyes fixed on the speaker, her sweet sensitive face flushed with the troubled nature of her thoughts as for the first time in her young life she was brought to realize that all children were not as happy as she; that there were boys and girls to whom Christmas was the same as any other day—no new clothes, no new toys, no bright parties. She wanted so much to bring happiness to one of these little children. What could she do? What could she give? Over and over again she pondered the question without seeming to come any nearer to the solution—then, an inspiration. She knew.

Her letter to Santa Claus was still in the little box on her bedroom table, she would tell him to give one of the toys she had asked for to some poor little girl—which of them could she best spare? "Give of your best—give when it hurts you to give," resounded in her ears. There followed a short, sharp struggle and then decision.

"Daddy," she said, as they wended their way home, "I am going to ask Santa Claus to give Sarah to the poorest little girl he knows in that minister's church."

"But, Margaret, that means giving up Sarah yourself."

"I know, Daddy, I want her to have it instead of me."

Her father was silent for a moment, then glancing tenderly at the anxious face of his small daughter, replied. "I think Santa Claus will be delighted to do as you wish."

'Sarah' was no mystery to Margaret's father, for ever since she had first seen the doll in the big store she had been full of excitement over it. Its beautiful hair and eyes, its rich wonderful clothes had made Margaret think of a princess. She had recently learned that Sarah meant "A princess," and had promptly named it and headed it at the top of her list, happy in the sure knowledge that at Christmas the doll would be hers for Santa Claus had never yet denied her the gift she most desired—and now she was giving Sarah away. A happy smile lighted her face as she pictured to herself the great joy awaiting Sarah's future owner.

"Dear God, please don't let Santa Clause forget to come," breathed little Mary as she placed her letter in the hearth. She remembered last Christmas when she asked why he hadn't been her mother had cried a little and said she expected he had forgotten them. But Mary had no fears to-night as she hung up her worn stocking, for God would remind him and with happy confidence she scampered into bed and pulling the poor scanty coverings over her shivering little body was soon in the tranquil sleep of childhood.

Mary wakened early next morning. She had long since learned to rise so as not to disturb her mother who so often worked far into the night in order to add to her earnings; but this morning it was difficult to lie quietly when she wished to see if her stockings had been filled. Perhaps if she crept softly—"Mary". A low voice whispered. "Yes, Daddy" her mother was striking matches by the dim light of the kitchen, her eager eyes espied the bulging sides and contents at last lay warm in her mother's bed things were heaped up at the foot of her bed.

A Happy Christmas of Yesteryear

(By "Eve.")

It was the night before Christmas, and in the home of the Stantons there was a pleasant air of anticipation as the younger members of the family gathered round the table to watch and often hinder their elders in the mysterious preparations for the next day's festivities.

Ethel, the eldest daughter, and considered quite grown-up, though she was only 15 years of age, was engaged in making mince pies. Bertha was making pretty paper chains for decorations. Mother was busy with the sage and onions with which she was stuffing the noble bird, fully 20 pounds in weight, for the Christmas dinner. The children gazed with wide-open eyes as she proceeded to fill the goose with not only sage and onions but an old china cup ("so as we'll know it's ours," confided Nellie.) Then when it was good and full and all neatly stitched up, a tag was put on with "Stanton" written very large and it was ready to go to the bakers.

"There," said mother with flushed face. "I'm glad that's done. "You mean," dad said smiling, "you'll be glad when it is done." "Thank goodness," remarked mother, "we haven't got to cook it. I'd be afraid it wasn't done through even if we did manage to get it in the oven. Such a size; however did it stand on those two legs I don't know." "Now, children," she added, "the sooner you go to bed the sooner it will be morning."

"Is Santa Claus really coming to-night, mummy?" asked little May.

"Yes, but not till you're fast asleep," answered mother, "so come off to bed and hang up your stocking, where Santa Claus will see it when he comes."

It was an excited, chattering little group that trailed upstairs with mother. She tucked each little form snugly in and with a final admonition to go right to sleep, turned out the light and descended to the living room.

Ethel, as the eldest, was privileged to stay up and help in the final preparation for the great day. For weeks, the cakes and puddings had been mellowing in a box upstairs, but there were jellies and trifles to be made, lemonade and candy, and the final touches to the Christmas tree. Then, when the very last thing had been done a tired but very happy girl crept softly to bed. It seemed she had hardly slept at all when she heard a voice greeting her 'A Merry Christmas.'

From the kiddies' room came cries of "Look what I've got!" It was Chirstmas morning!

Breakfast for once was a rough and tumble affair and everyone was too excited to eat much. Afterwards, the children gathered round while daddy told them the story of the first Christmas, of the shepherds in the field and the angels appearing in the sky to tell them of the birth of the Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Then very soon came a rat-a-tat-tat at the door, and in trooped the Christmas guests, aunties, uncles and cousins, all red cheeked and stamping snow off their feet, and everyone talking at once and wishing each other a Merry Christmas. The little guests were taken to look at the Christmas tree, all resplendent in tinsel and candles and mysterious little parcels hung and mysterious with each name.

Auntie Mary insisted on coming into the kitchen to lend a hand, and was given the task of putting just the right amount of flavoring into the pudding sauce. This seemed to be a bigger job than one would think, for spoonful after spoonful went in. At last: "Ethel," she cried, "did you put any sugar in?" Ethel looked aghast, "Goodness, no, I forgot it!" "Oh" wailed Auntie, "and I've been putting brandy in and wondering why it didn't taste right. We shall all be tipsy."

To Ethel was entrusted the task of laying the tables, grown-ups in the dining room, children in the parlour. She looked critically at the grown-ups' table. Best white linen cloth, serviettes, glass and cutlery, and a sprig of holly in the centre. She decided up to get the best white and gold dinner service out of the cupboard and espied a silver and glass epergne; a seldom used article which had won at a party once. Well on the table. What was really no need as she carefully lit and filled it with her chagrin for salt his tree was lit up and they sat around it and sang carols. To Ethel was given the task of unloading the tree of its gifts and everyone had a little surprise. Then mother produced a parcel labelled "Ethel" and it proved to be a manicure set which she had long coveted.

"What shall we play?" was the next question.

"Blind man's buff," said Nellie, "and daddy be blind man."

Daddy was blind man so long that when he did make a capture, everyone was so hot, mother suggested they all sit down and rest and maybe Auntie Lucy could give them a recitation. She did gladly, and enthralled their with the tale of the Ghost train.

Soon baby eyes began to grow big and starry and mother and aunties carried tired but happy little people off to bed. What fun it was to sleep the wrong way of the bed with head against the wall and feet pointing to the other side. Five little girls in one bed and four little boys in another, so tired they were soon fast asleep. All except one little figure that came creeping downstairs about half an hour later into the room where the grown-ups sat. Tears rolled down his cheeks as he sobbed out "Got toothache" Alas for the candy!

Mother cuddled him in her arms and after a while the sobs ceased and daddy carried him up to bed.

What talks of old times as they gathered round the table once more to sup off cold roose and mince pies. Ethel as a privileged person listened wide-eyed and supremely happy to the merry talk and longed for nothing better than to grow up like her mother and have Christmas parties such as this with loved ones round to talk of happy times gone by.

Among The New Gift Suggestions

(By Marjorie Howe Dixon)

WHEN the Christmas season approaches and the advertisements everywhere are permeated with gift suggestions, it seems as though every known article of merchandise is offered as a gift,—by the advertiser at least.

This year one fully expects to see some advertiser extolling the merits of his plum colored sink (plumb being the favorite color of plumbers) and showing a wife accepting it with pleasure from her beaming husband, the faucets being tastefully decorated with holly. Not that we object to mauve or heliotrope sinks! Not in the least. And of course there are wives here and there (no survey has been made as yet) who would prefer a new sink to any other gift they might receive! However, when gifts for women predominate in the gift shops why choose a sink?

Logical Gifts for Men

Appropriate gifts for men are much harder to find. There are always things in leather, and ash trays, galore. But he really can't carry more than seven bill folds, and if he doesn't smoke, what then?

Why, then you must strive to find a gift that fits in with his pet hobby, —his office, or his bridge game. For the latter, are suggested imported cards. A pack of these is of great interest. Instead of the conventional Kings, and Jacks, each face is different and as fascinating as a portrait. The Queens are especially pleasing, with faces of rare loveliness.

For a man's desk, there are many desk sets. The new fountain pen holders come in a great variety of design and material. Among the new gift suggestions is a combination calendar pad and diary. This has a fine tooled cover with gold on morocco. The pad within is bound into the cover, and the lower edge of each sheet sticks out below and is perforated at the edge of the cover. Each day is dated and may be torn off.

Books on Open Shelves

Open shelves for books as in a library are becoming a feature of some of the new offices. Besides books, one or two objets d'art may be used oppropriately. Should your friend perchance collect pewter, or candlesticks, or old ivory, or clocks, why not place part of his collection on the shelves of his office? Where does the gift come in? Well, you can add to his favorite collection, can you not? Or buy him a lamp that will show off his treasures.

Lamps deserve a complete story in themselves. In the Modern Art style, a lamp seems to fit very nicely into the formalities of office furniture and furnishings. This is one of the few places where the modern art fits without jarring on its surroundings. In some libraries lamps in this style are good, too.

Fine Designs in Lamps

It is quite possible to fit very modern pieces and antiques together as some decorators have already shown us. But it takes skill and knowledge to do this. When it comes to lamps, however, there are so many lovely ones designed, in Italian pottery, Spanish, Colonial, Venetian, that one need not despair.

Before one leaves the subject of gifts for men, there is one line of gifts that is comparatively new,—if you have plenty to spend. This line includes radio cabinets. One of these was of carved oak in Gothic design with appropriate bronze hinges, a lock and door pulls. Another one of interest was covered entirely with petit point. One can imagine it fitting in beautifully in some homes.

Suggestions in Wrought Iron

Where a man and wife have a mutual interest in, say, gardening, the problem of giving to them is simplified. For their indoor garden, there is a number of new suggestions in wrought iron. Flower stands in all sorts of paints and finishes are offered. These hold one, two, three,—six pots or more. One stand resembles a wrought iron gate in its general flat appearance. Here and there on it are arranged pots for trailing vines.

Fancy pottery jars to hold plants are imported from other countries. These are gay and modern in design and color. A number of them are especially designed to hold cactus. If your friend is not collecting cactus you can offer him another variety. There is a clever imitation cactus in pale green velvet that is most deceptive in its pretty little flower pot. Even the spines are imitated.

Breakfast Set for Two

A useful present for a young couple who are starting house-keeping would be a breakfast set for two. Plates, butter plates, cups, egg cups, cereal bowls in pairs, a toast rack, a coffee pot, a hot water jub and the usual sugar and creamer, constitute one set. These are of a cheerful buttercup yellow in English china with bright flowers dashed on the sides.

If one were to consider gifts in the electric department there are ever so many that are practical and decorative, too. Waffle irons came in more attractive designs, every year. Percolators, too, wear new coats,—new designs. Toasters do everything but think. We haven't found one yet that will ring a bell to remind one's husband (who is reading his paper at the breakfast table and told to "mind the toast") that the toast is done. Ours always finds that out, when it is burned to a crisp. He is so surprised. Even unto the fourth crisp at the same meal.

Electric Grills Useful

The electric grills offered to you these days are enough to convince any bride that a range is quite unnecessary. You con poach eggs, fry bacon, toast and cook a few other things all at the same time,—why buy a range?

Right here, we remember our plum colored sink. And we know this year's advertising will invite the fond husband to buy one of these butter colored ranges, for the little woman for her Christmas. (The color is especially recommended not to show splashes). It has always seemed to us to be a bit hard on Santa to deliver a range,—with chimneys the way they are now, and all,—but then, perhaps he doesn't mind. We think we will ask him some day.

Christmas Cookery

by Marjorie Howe Dixon

IN some homes, special little cakes for Christmas are an established custom. If there is a Swedish grandmother about the place, she will be busy for weeks before Christmas with her cooking. If one can find a Danish friend somewhere, one can learn to make the delicious Danish pastry. From the French one can receive instructions in making the dainty little cakes that are "made in France."

We always wanted to know what Petit Fours were. See if they sound good:

Take small circles of sponge cake, split and fill with peach jam. Roll in fondant, roll again in chopped brazil nuts. It would make anyone hungry just to listen to the recipe.

Here's a Pleasing Change

That's a sample of French cakes. A French menu for a meal would offer a pleasant change from the accepted roast turkey and cranberries that is so typically Canadian. The main dish in this menu — Chicken Souffle—might be a little less expensive to serve, with turkey usually so high-priced around the holidays. Here is the menu:

Cream of Asparagus Soup
Hors d'Oeuvres
Chicken Souffle
Halibut Steak Saute
Hearts of Lettuce
Chocolate Charlotte
Cheese—Coffee

Chicken Souffle Recipe

For chicken souffle, you will need 1½ cupsful of cold chicken, 1 cup cooked rice, 2 eggs. Add the chicken cut in small pieces, to the rice while hot. Season with butter and salt and chicken gravy. Add well-beaten egg yolks, then stiffy beaten whites. Bake in glass dish until the top is nicely browned.

The fish course may have to be changed to whatever can be bought at the time. The salad course, too, should be left to the hostess' discretion.

Chocolate charlotte made in a mold, then turned out and decorated with whipped cream, will look more like Christmas, with holly atop its mound, and a small Santa to guard it. This would be served on a puff paste in France,—but it does very nicely without it.

Chocolate Charlotte

You make chocolate charlotte with whipped cream and gelatin. You will need 1 quart of heavy cream, sugar, 1 teaspoon of vanilla and 2 teaspoons of gelatin; two squares of bitter chocolate will flavor this.

Whip the cream, sweeten and add the vanilla. Dissolve the gelatin with cold water, set in pan of hot water to melt. Add to this the melted squares of chocolate. Cool. Set the cream in a pan of ice water and stir in the gelatin gradually. When it begins to stiffen, pour in a mold. Use whipped cream and holly to garnish it, when serving.

A Swedish Christmas menu is distinctly individual. It starts with a cold fruit soup—certainly that has a foreign sound, hasn't it? Here is a suggestion for a menu:

Ice Cold Fruit Coup, Croutons
Wienerschnitzel—Mashed Potatoes
Carrot Pudding, Salad
Apple Meringue
Coffee Pepperkorn

It's a Swedish Cake

If the last "Pepperkorn" is not spelled right, any Swedish housewife will know what is meant,—little cakes that are so important a feature of Swedish holiday celebrations.

Space is limited, the recipes for the main dishes, only, will be given.

Cold Fruit Soup

3 pints of water, 2 cups of orange juice, 2 tablespoons potato starch, 1 cup sugar, 2 oranges. Bring the water and juice to a boil and add sugar to taste. Dissolve the starch in cold water and thicken the mixture. Let boil three minutes. Add the two oranges sliced thin, and let cool. Serve with whipped cream and croutons of fresh bread, fried golden brown in butter.

Wienerschnitzel (Breaded veal patties).—Two pounds veal steak, 3 tablespoons salt, 2 cups water, 1 cup grated bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons of flour, 18 small boned anchovies, 1 lemon sliced, 2 tablespoons capers. Wipe the meat with a hot cloth. Cut into patties 3 inches square and pound. Mix the salt and water. Dip the meat in and dry on a towel. Roll in crumbs and fry in butter, both sides. Place the patties on a platter. Make a brown gravy by pouring boiling water into the frying pan. Pour the gravy over the patties. On each patty place 1 slice of lemon, 2 halves of anchovy and add a few capers. Garnish the platter with mashed potatoes.

Carrot Pudding. — Two small bunches of carrots, two eggs, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon grated fresh breadcrumbs, 2 tablespoons butter. Beat the eggs, add salt, milk, crumbs and carrots, partly cooked and grated, and melted butter. Butter a baking dish and line with crumbs. Place the mixture in this and put in a moderate oven. Cook until thoroughly set and crumbs are brown.

Apple Meringue—12 to 15 apples, 1½ cups sugar, 1½ tablespoons of butter, ½ a lemon, juice and rind, 3 egg whites, 5 tablespoons of sugar, ½ cup almonds. Pare apples, cut in eighths and remove cores. Place apples in pan over the fire, adding butter, sugar, lemon juice and rind.

Heat slowly until apples are soft. Beat egg whites stiff, adding sugar gradually. Butter the baking dish and place apples in it. Put egg whites on top. Blanch almonds, cut in strips and stick in eggs. Bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned. Serve with cream.

Variety to the Menu

With these unusual and tempting dishes, from other countries, you can very the Christmas menu. With these suggestions and your own traditional cakes, candies and breads, if you have such, your family will call your name blessed. As for tradition, you can always start one—if for instance, you are a bride and beginning your career as a housewife. And there is a distinct advantage in starting a tradition —you can arrange it exactly as you please, while those that are handed down,—well, they may not prove satisfactory.

Herewith our very best wishes for your Christmas cookery!

DISTRICT DEVASTATED BY 'QUAKE

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.— (Canadian Press)—E. J. Daly, Ottawa, has been appointed county court judge for the county of Carleton, in succession to late Judge Mulligan who died recently at Sudbury, it was announced yesterday.

It is estimated that Germany will consume more than 800,000 metric tons of gasoline and almost 1,200,000 tons of gasoline and benzol during 1928.

KIWANIS MEET IN SPECIAL SESSION

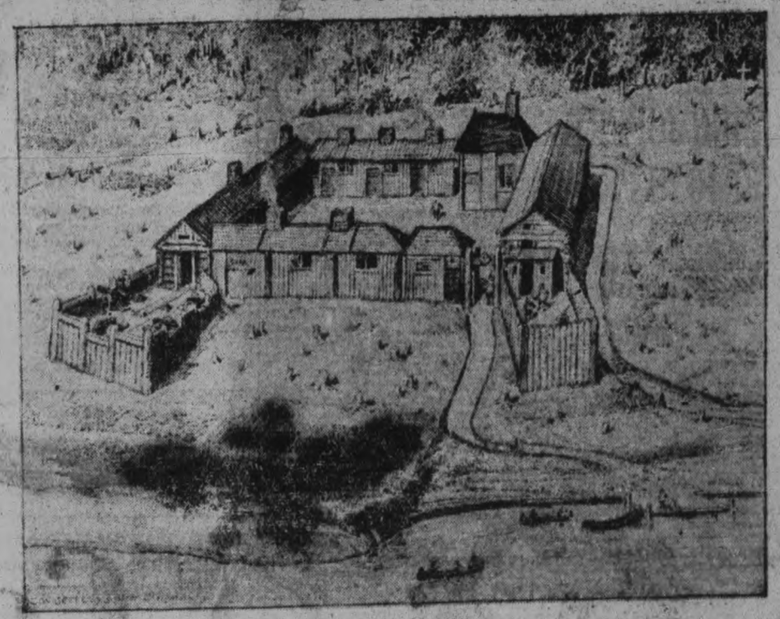
Two Hundred Officials in Canada and United States Convene in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 7 (CP).—Andrew G. Gaul, of Hamilton, Ont., Governor-elect of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime Kiwanis district, and two hundred other officials, including all governors-elect from Canada and the United States, convened here yesterday for the annual council meeting of the organization, December 5 to 8. Mr. Gaul will take office on January 1.

O. Sam Cummings, of Kansas City, president of Kiwanis International, is in charge of the sessions, which bring together the largest gathering of officers at any time excepting in international convention. "The council," remarked Mr. Cummings, in his opening address, "is the legislative body empowered to confer and advise with the board of trustees on all official matters of the 1,750 clubs with 102,000 members on the North American continent."

In the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime district there are 40 Kiwanis clubs with a membership of 3,100, Mr. Gaul, who was elected this fall at Kingston, Ont., told the council.

FIRST FORT OF PORT ROYAL



Above is shown the first fort or "Habitation" of Port Royal, Acadia, built by Champlain and de Monts in 1605, as it will look if the project is carried out to reconstruct the stronghold with a gift of $10,000 voluntarily offered by friends in New England to the Historical Association of Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, for the specific purpose. Through the president, L. M. Fortier, the Annapolis Royal Historical Association has approached the prime minister, the cabinet minister representing Nova Scotia, Hon. J. L. Ralston, and the department of interior with regard to providing a sum equal to the gift of American friends to be devoted to acquiring the lands needed, reforesting, etc., and perpetual care and upkeep of the property, the title of which is to be vested in the crown. The response has been so encouraging that the association has decided to accept the offer. The plan of the first "Habitation" in the "cradle of Canadian history," as reproduced above, has been made by C. W. Jefferys, the Canadian artist noted for his historical work.

WORDS ADDED BY THOUSANDS

Science is Changing the Language—Newest is "Nemo."

CARBOLOY ADOPTED

A quarter of a million new words that the dictionary makers of 1900 never heard of are in the books to-day, and the number grows by thousands every year. Science is adding most of these new terms to our language.

Possibly the newest is "nemo," which is pure Latin for "nobody." Thus radio broadcasting technicians refer to a stadium, hall or distant studio from which a program is being transmitted to the broadcasting station over a telephone wire as a "nemo station."

Just as new is the word "perminvar," the name of a new metal, the characteristics of which are its high magnetic permeability and the invariability of its behavior under magnetic influence. The name is a compound of two words, "permeable" and "invariable." Perminvar is a compound of iron, nickel and cobalt.

Behind it is an interesting story beginning several years ago when Dr. G. W. Elmen, of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, discovered that an alloy of iron and nickel in certain proportions and under certain pressures was forty times as responsive to magnetism as pure soft iron, previously regarded as the most magnetic of all substances.

Carboloy.

Here's another new word, "carboloy." That is the name of a new metal that will cut a screw thread on a glass rod, bore a smooth hole in a block of concrete, or cut porcelain on a lathe, feats which have been regarded as impossible. Carboloy is an alloy of tungsten, carbide and cobalt. The hardest cutting tools heretofore in use, allows of chromium and cobalt, have to be sharpened after being used less than 200 times; carboloy tools can be used 11,000 times before resharpening. Ordinary steel tools are worn down by an emery wheel; carboloy tools wear down the emery!

Science moves its products rapidly from the laboratory into everyday use. Most of us remember when automobiles were called "horseless carriages," when airplanes were considered impractical, when radio was unknown. The coming of each of these has brought new words to our speech. Science changes everything it touches. It even changes our language.

CONSERVATIVE WINS IN CLOSE CONTEST

Victoria Majority of Two Years Ago is Nearly Wiped Out.

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—Conservatives of Victoria City Federal Riding retained the seat in yesterday's by-election, according to complete, though unofficial, returns last night.

In a vote that exceeded that cast in the last Federal general election, D. B. Plunkett, Conservative, had a majority of 83 over his Liberal opponent, Dr. J. D. MacLean. The vote was: Plunkett, 5,639; MacLean, 5,556.

Yesterday's by-election was for the purpose of choosing a successor to Hon. S. F. Tolmie, Conservative, now British Columbia's Premier, who resigned when he became leader of the Provincial Conservative party.

Dr. Tolmie was elected in the general election by a majority of 2,781 over E. C. C. Martin, Liberal. The vote then was: Tolmie, 6,836; Martin, 4,055.

Christmas Thrills

(By Ella May.)

"Oh, girls, look here; wouldn't this be great as a Christmas gift!"

"Why, Helen, are you thinking of Christmas presents so soon? I'm not going to bother about Christmas until I have to. I don't get the same thrill out of Christmas as I used to. We go to just the same parties, have just the same crowd, and do just the same as we do every other year—no surprises at all."

"Yes, I know, Grace, I feel the same about it, but what can we do? Nothing that I know of anyway."

"Well, here is where I leave you for now; see you to-morrow."

"All right; so long, Helen."

"Bye-bye, Grace."

Next morning at school the two friends take up the same subject. Grace has received an invitation to spend Christmas week with her cousin, Clarice. Her home is in the country and Grace is seriously thinking of going, but Helen doesn't think much of the plan.

"Yes, I know; but Grace, about the most exciting thing that could happen out in that country would be a heavy snow-storm."

"Well, perhaps, anyway, even that might be interesting. They must be going to have a real week, though; the invitation says, 'Come prepared for anything but a heat wave'."

"Here's hoping you have a good time then, Grace. Merry Christmas."

"Same to you, Helen."

On the way home, Grace wonders which one of the boys to invite as an escort and finally decides on Roy as he is the best sport.

"Hello, Helen, did you have a good holiday?"

"Hello, Grace. I surely did, as usual, but tell me, how did you enjoy the country?"

"Just fine. I had a wonderful time, and when I tell you about you'll wish you had been with me.

"There were no set plans. Clarice made suggestions and then we voted on what to do. We had a sleighing party to a friend's place. We held the party out in the kitchen, roasted chicken at the fire-place ourselves, played games danced, and then drove home. Another time, a party of about fifteen went bob-sleighing. I never had so much fun running up and down hills since I was about ten years old as I did that afternoon.

"One afternoon the boys suggested a skating party on the lake. We played tag, crack-the-whip, and, well, everything we couldn't do at home on a rink with a band and a fence around it.

"I even went skiing and never had a choice of so many hills before. Some of the party were never on skis before. They surely provided laughs for all.

"One evening we spent just as we pleased. Some went to a school concert, others skating, etc., while about six of us stayed at the house and made pop-corn. I never ate so much before. It tastes twice as good when every one pops some, then all sit around the stove with a plate full, talking and laughing.

"My goodness! I forgot the Christmas tree we had. Great fun was had by all when we were given cotton stockings and told to hang them up. Our names were written on slips of paper, then each had to choose one. Next, we all went to town and bought presents for each other. It was great fun filling the stockings; there was everything from dolls to onions in them.

"Say, you must be tired listening to me talk this length of time. Tell me about the good time you had."

Helen: "There isn't anything to tell. I thought I had a good time, but it's nothing compared with the fun you tell of. What I want to know is, why can't we all get in on a party like that some Christmas? It isn't fair that you should have all the fun. When the rest hear of this they'll mob you."

Grace: "No they won't, not after the way you and the rest all kidded me about going to be snowed under. The next time any one of you want surprises and thrills for Christmas, spend the holiday in the country."

Christmas

(Elizabeth Cameron, Lakefield.)

All during the past month or so we have watched the skies, looked for snowfalls, and awaited the coming winter. It is a busy season, this making ready for the short cold days, and long dark nights, when we need firing, and food, and warm clothing in greater plenty. Outside the goodman is setting all things in order in barn and byre replenishing the woodpile or coalbin, and seeing to it that there is a store of provision for such live stock as he possesses; while indoors the good wife is busying herself with extra comforts, with additional things for Christmas enjoyment and winter use. The children are looking for snow to enjoy their sleds and various amusements, for children in the country love the snow. The trains are fuller than ever, people hurrying about business so as to reach a certain goal by the end of the year. The shops and stores have all their Christmas attractions ready to lure the dollars from the people's pockets; the markets put on an air of plenty and festivity; shipping is congested with freights and travellers, all hastening to their destination before Christmas comes; the last of the fleet of grain-carriers are battling their way through storm and ice to land their cargoes and crews ere navigation closes, and Canada generally is about her usual business at this time of year, counting the results of her labors, and preparing for the New Year so soon to dawn, even while she takes time off for Christmas Holidays.

So many people think of Christmas as a time of feasting and jollity, of fun and frolic, and indulgence only; and while they are in the main, openhanded to the demands made upon them in the name of charity, they do not personally think up some way of bringing happiness to those who have it not themselves. Their minds are so filled with the feasting and the clangor of bells, the lights and the music, and the assembling of folks from far and near, that they fail to stand awhile in silence, and gaze on that humble scene of long ago, without which is no true Christmas.

And what is it that we see? Some poor working people, a young girl, weak with the trial she has just undergone, the tiny helpless infan laid, for want of a cradle, on some hay in a stable manger, the placid cattle and beasts of burden feeding and resting their wearied bodies in the stalls close by, all lit dimly by a small lamp and by one glorious star gleaming overhead. Who, gazing thus, could have ever imagined that there, in such poor surroundings, lay the greatest influence the world has ever known; that which, throughout the future ages was to gradually transform the earth, and bring light into the dark places.

True, there was triumphant singing of a like unheard before, but it was not the people intent upon the comings, and goings, and ceremonials of the city who listened to it. It was only some simple men who sat in the silence of the starlit night, doing their humble duty faithfully who heard it. And these shepherds wended their way to the city, not to enter its noise and traffic, but to turn aside and gaze, even as we do in our imaginations, at that little tragedy of the poor. Out from the night, from far across the distant plains and mountains, in ghostly silence came the little procession of laden camels, mounted by the three hooded Eastern figures and their attendants, and as the pale light creeps slowly up the horizon they stop before that poor shelter, and there, before a tiny Jewish baby, in speechless adoration, they laid the first Christmas gifts. Strange gifts these—gold—frankincense—myrrh. The gift for royalty—the gift for holiness—the gift for death! And, still silently, their gifts offered and received, they mounted their beasts and departed into the night. Out of the unknown they came, and into the shadows they went, and no man knoweth of a certainty whither! But from that beginning came the Spirit of Christmas giving, which has grown, till throughout the whole Christian world we still carry out the primal idea.

And in this spirit we ask ourselves "Who is without? Whom can we gather in? For whom can we make Christmas a glad and happy time? How about the old folk? Those whose own happy festivals are past? The lonely boy or girl; working in our midst, with only a solitary room to go to and no festivity to cheer the home-longing heart? There are plenty if we seek them out, so gather them in and happiness will shine into your heart also. Then there are those other dumb children of our Father; those who stood silent and kindly at the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem, whose representatives are among us all to-day; who stand so grateful, in their patience, for our bounty. Temper the cold to them, be regardful of their small comforts, their often needless sufferings, and make their Christmas a day of plenty, and warmth, and kindness to them. They know so much (how much we cannot tell), they are so kindly and forgiving, and when their life goes back to the Giver of all life, let it be with a good accounting of us, their human guardians. "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," so let us make this a true Christmas festival for all we can, and let us make a gift of love and reverence to that Holy Child, who gave us Christmas, the dearest day in all the year.

POLICIES ARE FORMULATED

Isaac McNabb Attends Kiwanis Council Meeting in Chicago.

FOREIGN EXTENSION.

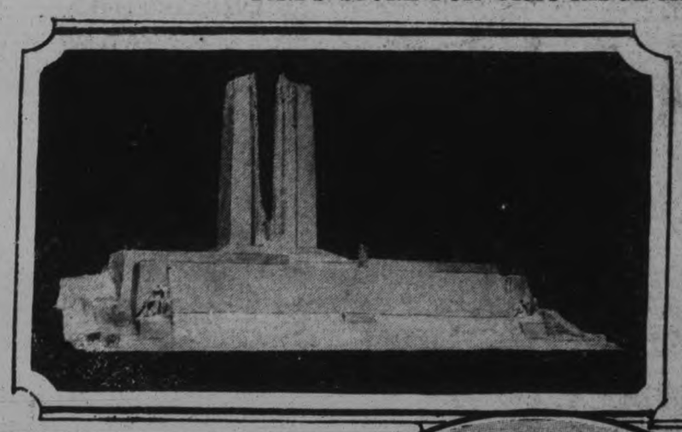
CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 7 (CP).—One hundred officials of Kiwanis International from Canada and the United States, meeting here in a three-day council, to-day, formulated plans and policies for 1929 that will effect the thousands of members in both countries.

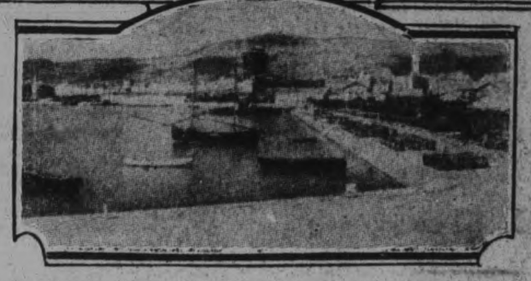
Stressing the importance of increasing the membership in each one of the clubs already established, O. Sam Cummings, of Kansas City, Mo., president of Kiwanis, urged district officials, who will take office on January 1, to emphasize the invitation of business and professional men to join Kiwanis clubs.

The president also announced the appointment of a special committee to study foreign extension. Hundreds of letters asking for the building of Kiwanis clubs in foreign lands have been received by Kiwanis International.

Andrew G. Gaul, of Hamilton, Ont., governor-elect of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime Kiwanis district announced the appointments of Lieutenant-Governors for his district: J. Smyth Carter, of Toronto, Ont.; Isaac McNabb, of Peterborough, Ont.; Tom Yull, of London, Ont.; Louis N. L'esperance, of Montreal, Que., and Dr. Charles K. Fuller, of Yarmouth, N. S.

FINDS STONE FOR VIMY RIDGE MEMORIAL





In searching for stone suitable for Canada's great memorial to her soldiers at Vimy Ridge, W. S. Allward, Toronto sculptor, found what he wanted at Spalato, a small town on the Dalmatian coast. Here in quarries once worked by Diocletian, three hundred years B.C., he decided on the stone, once pink buff, now ripened into a rich amber, out of which memorial figures will be cut. Studios will be set up in the quarries and the sculpture work carried out there. Upper left is an artist's conception of what the Vimy memorial will look like when completed. The map in upper right shows the location of Spalato, or Split, as it was called later. Below is a view of the town of Split, where the quarries are located and where Diocletian once built his palace of the same stone as that proposed for Vimy memorial.

AGEING JOFFRE ENJOYS PEACE

Victor of Marne Enjoys Tranquil Old Age in Beautiful Home Near Paris.

LIFE SERENE.

LOUVECIENNES, France, Dec. 7 (C.P.).—Joffre he whose moves were with Army Corps and groups of armies, sits in a little garden kiosk on fine afternoons playing checkers with his wife. Sometimes Dr. Tuffier, his nearest neighbor, drops in to engage the marshal in a spirited game of backgammon, singular contrast to those terrible days in the early part of the war when he loomed in the imagination of France like a demi-god, a huge personality, immovably calm, radiating power.

General Joffre, massive, expressionless, reposeful, gazed with large kind eyes and was wholly uncommunicative, is still restrained in speech but rather from the habit of a lifetime than from unwillingness to talk.

"Yes, I have finished my memories," said he the other day. "I have just signed the last of the 800 pages."

The Marshal, according to official form, has initialed each sheet of typewritten manuscript. He expects at some time to publish his work in two volumes.

"But not now," said he. "I do not wish to injure anyone or to stir up controversies. I have written the record of events with which I was concerned. There it is, for publication some day. I give the documents. Others may form their opinions from them."

The Marshal was no doubt alluding to the parts played in the battle of the Marne by Gallieni and others.

"I wonder," remarked Madame Joffre, "how many people would have claimed to have lost the battle of the Marne, had it been lost?"

French Won at Marne.

"The French Army won the Battle of the Marne," said the Marshal. "It is enough that the French Army saved France. The individual part need not be considered."

"Marshal Joffre seems to live in eclipse," the writer said to Colonel Phillipe Bunau-Varilla the other day.

"Joffre likes to live in eclipse. He does not care for the fierce lights that beat on high place," replied the Colonel.

"Still, it seems extraordinary that Joffre's name should not even have been mentioned in the anniversary at Meaux, Sept. 9, of the Battle of Marne. The victory was celebrated without so much as a mention of Joffre."

"The modest man who forgets himself," observed Bunau-Varilla dryly, "is soon forgotten by others."

Not Forgotten by French.

Joffre is, of course, not forgotten by the mass of his countrymen, but he would rather decline than accept invitations. Some political currents are against him, old jealousies survive, yet they do not appear to trouble the Marshal. Foch, whom he advanced, is a loyal friend and a frequent visitor at Louveciennes, and so are the Marquis De Chambrun and General Castelnau. The Marshal's health has not been altogether good.

"I take precautions," said he, "I find at 77 that I must be careful." His breakfast consists of a slice of bread and a glass of milk. His lunch and dinner are light, vegetables and fruit largely, scarcely any meat. His figure is growing slender. He is not at all the thick-bodied Marshal who visited America in 1917. He has had to order new uniforms, a complete series, recently. However, except at his headquarters, he prefers a loose-worn lounge suit.

Marshal Joffre's old age is tranquil. Tranquil because of the inner and the outer calm in which he lives. He is still theoretically in active service, as Marshals are never retired. He has large and beautiful rooms in the war college in Paris for offices, with a small staff, a major, a lieutenant, a secretary. The Marshall receives official visitors there by appointment and deals with official correspondence, of which he has considerable. Military questions of the higher sort are referred to him by the war council for his judgment and comment. His papers on these subjects are described as models of compact lucidity. He and Madame Joffre have a flat in the Rue De La Pompe, but they spend most of the year at the place they have been creating here and in which they, particularly Madame Joffre, have put much thought and love. They had a farm not far away, and they occasionally walked in the forest that stood in the high ground of their present home.

Live Near Nature.

"I believe you could see Paris from here," remarked Joffre to his wife one day, and when they went back to their cottage he looked with an engineer's eye at a topographical map of the region.

"Yes, we could have a wonderful near view with Paris beyond," he said.

This was six years ago. He bought ten acres. They sold the farm and have been finding occupation and enjoyment in building and developing a park, orchards and gardens. Madame Joffre designed the pavilion, a beautiful white structure, with a columned portico, shining among the trees. One might call it a high-ceilinged bungalow, for all the rooms are on the same level, except some for domestics artfully concealed in a galleried corner. Quite half the house is a large living-room, the wide circular windows at one end looking out on the gardens with a far view cityward. Notre Dame and the Eiffel tower are visible from the foot of the gardens.

The living-room is "T" shaped. The dining-room being an alcove forming the base of the "T." Madame Joffre got the idea from an ancient house in Bordeaux. The Marshal's workroom and all the other rooms open off the living-room.

Such are the surroundings which the victor of the Marne is passing the evening of his life.

KING PASSES RESTFUL NIGHT

General Strength Is Being Maintained—Further Investigation To-day.

SIX NURSES ON DUTY.

LONDON, December 7. (Special.)—The following bulletin on the King's condition was issued this morning by the King's physicians:

"The King had some restful sleep, and his general strength is maintained. Further investigation of the right side of the chest will be taken during the day."

Six Nurses on Duty.

Six nurses altogether have been on the King's case, but only four names were given out. They were those of Nurse Purdue, Westminster Hospital; Black and Davies of the London Hospital, and Gordon of St. Thomas's Hospital. The medical papers stress the importance of good nursing in a case like the King's.

The Associated Press was told at the palace late last night that the King had obtained a certain amount of rest during the day, and this was regarded as a favorable feature. Yet the four physicians held a long consultation last evening and Sir Stanley Hewett again passed the night at the palace.

London was gratified by the progress of the homeward journeys of the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Gloucester. The heir to the throne has made such good time that it was figured that he might arrive home by next Wednesday morning.

CHEESE MAKER SETS RECORD

Douglas Tourney Has Total Output Graded Number One.

WINS FIRST PRIZE.

BRICKLEY, Dec. 6 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Co-operation was the keynote of the banquet which was held by the Brickley Butter and Cheese Co., in the frame schoolhouse on Tuesday night. This is the second affair of its kind, and the remarkable success of the Brickley factory may at least be partly attributed to the social function where good fellowship and good advice go hand in hand. The banquet was held under the advice of the Government, and was primarily for the patrons, officials and their wives and families. There were about two hundred seated at the tables. During the evening Douglas Tourney came in for a good deal of praise when it was pointed out that he had made all 100 per cent. cheese during the season just past. Mrs. Tourney also came in for her share of the honors when it was stated that the factory and grounds had won first prize for the cleanest factory in the province and for having the most attractive grounds.

The meal was all that human heart could desire both in quality and quantity. While the speakers were putting the finishing touches on the preparations of their remarks John Storie of Campbellford, led the diners in community singing and also famoured his audience with some of the solos for which he is well known throughout the district.

Johnny Murray, Provincial government dairy instructor and inspector was the first to speak. He paid tribute to the patrons of the factory for the high grade of milk they had produced and to the cheesemaker who had manufactured such a high grade product with such remarkable consistency throughout the entire season. The record was perfect.

Must Send Good Milk

William Drury of Warkworth, president of the Cheesemakers Association pointed out how a first grade cheese was the way to higher profits and that the sending of first grade milk to the factory was the only way to get this result.

Alfred Merrils, president of the District Dairyman's Association and director for the district to the Provincial association, spoke on the care of milk by the dry well system. He expressed the opinion that this was the most satisfactory method yet devised. The dry wells should be about ten feet deep and concrete cased throughout. About three feet of water should be put into them and the cans lowered into it.

Richard Honey of Warkworth pointed out that to make first class cheese, it was necessary to have first class milk. First class milk could not be had when turnips were fed to the stock. This was one detail which the patrons of the Brickley factory had guarded against carefully. John O'Reilly of Warkworth spoke briefly expressing his appreciation for the excellent banquet which had been served by the ladies. Alfred Germain claimed that a better quality of milk could be produced much cheaper by feeding bran and alfalfa hay to the stock. Mr. Convey, secretary treasurer of the company stated that the factory was as strong financially, if not stronger, than any other factory in the district.

In tendering a vote of thanks to the speakers and to John Storie for his part in the entertainment, John Doherty, president of the factory, expressed the opinion that the banquet would become an annual affair. The vote was seconded by Charles McLeary, vice president of the company.

DELEGATES APPOINTED

(Examiner Correspondence).

OMEMEE, Dec. 7.—The December meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Trinity Church was held at the home of Mrs. T. C. Ivory on Wednesday afternoon. The first vice-president, Mrs. H. Lamb, conducted the meeting. It being the last of the year, reports were heard from the treasurer of the society, the Mission Band president, the systematic giving treasurer, and supply fund treasurer. It was unanimously decided to send $10 to the rest fund as in previous years. A letter from Mrs. H. A. Morrison, the corresponding secretary of the Lindsay Presbyterial, read by Miss L. Race, pertained to the annual report, the convention in January in Cannington, and the appointment of a temperance secretary. As corresponding secretary, Miss Race gave a splendid report of the year's work. A letter of thanks from the Deaconess Home, Toronto, for two quilts sent recently was read by the president, and a vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. C. Ivory and Mrs. William Earle for the quilting of same. Mrs. J. Bushnell and Mrs. W. Henderson were appointed a program committee for the next three months, and Mrs. S. Vaughan kindly consented to be responsible for the missionary story in Sunday School the first Sunday in January. The president thanked the girls who made the posters for the bazaar, all of which were very attractive.

Delegates Appointed.

A very appropriate and pleasing duet, "Christmas Festival," was given by Misses Eva and Lillian Race. Mrs. J. Shield and Miss Eva Race were appointed with the president, Mrs. Blanchard, to attend the W.M.S. Presbyterial in Cannington on January 23.

After singing a few verses of the Christmas hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful," the scriptural reading was given by Mrs. B. Pogue, and prayer offered by Mrs. R. Poast. The devotional leaflet, entitled "Christian Stewardship," was read by Mrs. Overholt. Sentence prayers were offered by Mrs. Vaughan, Mrs. Haggarth and Mrs. H. Lamb. The president gave the first part of the fourth chapter of the study book, "Drums in the Darkness," and the second part was given by Mrs. L. A. Mahood.

The following was the result of the election of officers:

President—Mrs. J. T. E. Blanchard; 1st Vice-President—Mrs. S. D. Vaughan; 2nd Vice-President—Miss L. Parsons; Treasurer—Mrs. J. Shield; Secretary—Mrs. E. Bradburn; Assistant Secretary—Mrs. L. A. Mahood; Corresponding Secretary—Miss L. Race; Pianist—Miss Eva Race; Treasurer Supply Fund—Mrs. C. L. Morcombe; Secretary Missionary Monthly—Miss L. Race; Temperance Secretary—Mrs. R. Rutherford; Superintendents of Mission Band—Mrs. Blanchard, Mrs. Morcombe and Mrs. R. H. Williamson.

The new president then took the chair, and in a few words thanked the ladies for the office conferred on her. A vote of thanks was extended to the retiring officers for their faithful services and also to Mrs. T. C. Ivory for her kind hospitality.

A vocal solo, entitled "What Will You Find in Jesus," given by Mrs. Charles Rutherford, pleased the gathering.

Mrs. William Earle kindly invited the society to meet at her home in January.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. T. C. Ivory, Mrs. C. R. Cornell and Miss Barrie, and a social hour enjoyed.

The Viennese opera star, Madame Marion Lzckely Franck, will be heard in the second of a series of concert program from WGY, Friday evening, December 7, at 8.30 when she will sing a group of Schumann compositions.

Madame Franck recently came to the United States after a successful Remains the deathless Symbol of vent Opera Company of London. She is a native of Vienna and gained her first operatic success as a contralto with the LaScala Opera Company of Milan. She was especially trained as a singer of Wagnerian opera but is a gifted linguist and has a large repertoire which includes Italian and French operatic roles. Madame Franck's program on December 7 will include the following Schumann compositions: "Widmung," "Die Lotus Blume," "In Wunder Schone Monat Mai," "Was Will de Finsame Trane," "An der Sonnen Schein," and "Hauptmann's Weib."

"Humor is Salt of Life -- But Beware" Says "Aunty Burlesque"

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION,

You wrote something some time ago about woman's sense of humor, and I liked very much what you expressed as your ideas. It is true, as you said, that women don't find amusement in the things that hurt people—except a few, of course, who delight in teasing and annoying. You will generally find that the woman who likes to have people wait on her hand and foot is the woman who will laugh at other people's misfortunes while she wails over her own.

The kind of humor that is based on personalities is stupid. Comedy that depends upon the eccentricities and pains of individuals is too obvious for the real humorist, and being humorous at the expense of others is evidence of lack of sportsmanship and of poor breeding. It is detestable to make others feel uncomfortable in order to demonstrate one's 'wit.'

And sarcasm! It is always cheap. It is easier for any person with the intelligence of a ten-year-old child to be sarcastic than it is for her to suppress the desire to be sarcastic. There is nothing really smart about sarcasm.

I am, I admit, a bit of a crank on this question of humor. The only real humor, I believe, is found by paralleling the evident aspect of a thing with its humorous aspect, without making it lose its true value or become distorted.

Mark Twain has a wide reputation as a humorist, and yet he is wholeheartedly obvious. I can't appreciate him. Next to the problem of developing a sense of humor is the task of restraining it—and Clemens skipped that lesson.

We women have just as great sense of humor as men, but more highly developed. We should maintain it on that plane, too, and not endeavour to cultivate a taste for the kind they enjoy. Slapstick comedy is detestable.

Humor is the salt of life, but beware of too much seasoning!

Yours truly,
Aunty Burlesque."

I'm sure, "Aunty," that all the neighbors will say "Amen" to your letter. I read, a few days ago, an article on "Humor" by Dare, a feature writer, in which she expresses much the same opinion not so concisely. Your remarks on sarcasm are particularly apt, because we all fail in this way. I know I have blushed for myself on occasions when I have dropped some sarcastic remark in a voice like dripping icicles—it's so utterly foolish, afterward.

"Dear Marion,

It is a long time since I wrote to you but nevertheless I read your column with interest every night and I find some very useful hints in it. There is always something new in it. To-night's column, I had to smile about the man forgetting this and that—it is just like them. Well, dear Marion, could you oblige me and tell me of something that I could get rid of, a wart on my hand, it is very unsightly. I have tried several things, but were no good. Also I would like some of your patterns which I have marked on the coupon.

Well, dear, here's success to your column, I am, etc.,
A. M. P."
City.

I'm pleased to know you like our page, "A.M.P." I have replied privately to your inquiry regarding removing the wart, as I am not allowed to name particular brands of articles in news items. I have used this cure myself, and know it is really good.

"Dear Marion;

I would like if you would send me this week's help. I have had other helps from you and they were so good and easy to follow. May I take this opportunity to thank you for them? The recipes I have tried from your page have all been good, so I thought I would pass one along.

Yours truly,
J. M."
City.

That graham nut bread for which you send the recipe should be delicious, "J. M." Thanks very much. I'm glad you like the helps.

"Dear Marion:

Thanks so much for previous helps sent me. I would like the four-page folder now, and thank you in advance for it.

About those fruit stains, if boiling water is poured through the table cloth where the new stain is made, it disappears as a rule.

Potato water is an excellent thing for removing new stains of tea and coffee. Hoping this advice will help someone.

Yours sincerely,
YEA."
City.

Thanks very much, "YEA," for the hint about removing stains, which I'm sure the neighbors will tuck away in their scrap books for future use.

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy your page very much. Please send helps marked, thank you.
Mrs. F. M. R."

I'm glad that you enjoy our page, "Mrs. F. M. R." and shall be glad to receive a contribution from you of some recipe or hint.

"Dear Marion:

This is my first letter but I have thought of writing you several times. I think your page is wonderful and the recipes are all good. I read every item on your page and have been very thankful for the recipes, suggestions, etc., derived from the same.

I am enclosing a recipe for 1-2-3-4 cake which is delicious, also a recipe for pickling silver-skin onions. I am sending the coupon for this week's help—Christmas gifts to make at home. Thanking you in anticipation, for I know they will be good, I am,

Yours truly,
Mrs. Mt. Julian."
Mt. Julian.

Your cake recipe surely looks good, "Mrs. Mt. Julian," and I remember that someone asked about pickling the onions. Thanks for both recipes.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

BUNS
(Contributed by Bonny.)

3 cups scalded milk
½ cup sugar
½ cup lard
1 yeast cake
salt

Scald the milk at night and as it is cooling put in the lard (or butter) and sugar and let dissolve. Roll yeast cake with rolling pin and put in when it is lukewarm and let dissolve. Mix in batter in the evening. Mix stiff (not too stiff) in the morning and let rise three hours. Then make out in buns and let rise until good and light (usually nearly three hours). Bake in hot oven.

GRAHAM GEMS
(Contributed by Bonny.)

½ cup sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon lard or butter
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
salt
1½ cups bran.
1½ cups flour
This makes 20 in little patty tins.

1 small onion
1 teaspoon of parsley
Salt and pepper to taste.

Fry spare-ribs until over half done, then cut up onion, fry till brown, add tomatoes and cook until thick; add cup of water, parsley, pepper and salt. Cook for about ten minutes. Serve with potatoes.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

It is one hundred and forty-four years to-day since the birth of Allan Cunningham, who wrote "A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea." He was born in Dumfriesshire, and among his writings are noted, "Paul Jones," "The Lives of British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects," and a memoir of Robert Burns. He died in London two days after completing the biography of his friend, Sir. D. Wilkie, 1842.

DECEMBER 7, 1928

A wet sheet and a flowing sea
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail
And bends the gallant mast;
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While, like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies and leaves
Old England on the lea

O for a soft and gentle wind,
I heard a fair one cry,
But give to me the snoring breeze
And white waves heaving high
And white waves heaving high, my boys,
The good ship tight and free,
The world of waters is our home
And merry men are we.

There's tempest in yon horned moon
And lightning in yon cloud
And hark, the music mariners
The wind is piping loud,
The wind is piping loud, my boys,
The lightning flashes free
While the hollow oak our palace is
Our heritage the sea.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

English cooks often serve the Christmas turkey with sausages. One sausage for each person to be served is enough to allow, and they should be the best you can buy.

They should be put into the roasting pan with the turkey about forty minutes before you plan to dish up dinner. They really do add a delicious flavor to the turkey, which you will like whether or not you care about the sausages themselves.

The drumsticks of the turkey usually dry out during the roasting so that they are not especially desirable. Many cooks remove this part of the leg before roasting the chicken and prepare them separately. The butcher will do this for you, and it is a good plan to have these legs also boned.

To do this yourself, separate the flesh from the bone at the upper end, press down the flesh with the blunt edge of a large knife and cut it away from the lower part so that the bone can be entirely removed. When stuffing the turkey, stuff these legs with a little of the dressing, sew up, and an hour and a half before serving the turkey put these stuffed drumsticks in the pan and let them cook in the bottom of the pan where they will not dry out.

A small turkey or a chicken makes a delicious dish when stewed. To do this prepare the bird precisely as if it were to be roasted, omitting the stuffing. Put butter in a large frying pan and fry the entire surface of the bird until well browned. Put in a kettle, add water to the drippings in the frying pan and pour over the bird. Add an onion or two sliced, also one sliced carrot, chopped parsley and thyme, with salt and pepper to taste. Add water nearly to cover, cover the kettle closely and let simmer gently until quite tender. Serve on a platter as you would a roasted bird and thicken the gravy.

Mrs. Tom Smith

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Tom Smith's brain seemed to be in a state of complete vacuity on that Sunday afternoon in September. Otherwise he most certainly would not have been reading the advertisements in a weekly magazine and more especially would he have failed even to see the pictures which proclaimed beauty rejuvenated by one of the leading New York specialists.

He found himself looking at the photograph of a woman so lined and harassed and toil worn that she must assuredly have been awaiting the hangman's rope; but in the companion picture the same lady was looking radiantly lovely, with no lines, no cares and only a brilliant, youthful beauty. This marvellous renewal of youth and beauty had been accomplished in the beauty parlor of the famous Doctor Eyedoit.

The two lovely children whose photographs appeared with their mother required no rejuvenating and were like the one toil-worn parent who in the second picture might well be a twin sister of her own child.

Tom Smith laughed and read the details regarding the wonderful treatment and it was only then that his eye caught sight of the name at the foot of the testimonial. That name stimulated his brain to its normal activity.

"Mrs. Tom Smith, Weebunkum, Illinois." That was the name Tom Smith of Weebunkum read. "Well of all the cast-iron nerve," he thought. "I'm the only Tom Smith in Weebunkum and there is no Mrs. Tom that I know of. These darned quacks would have the nerve to use the President's picture and say he uses their insect powder."

Tom took a second closer look at the girl who had thus taken his name in vain and knew that if she hadn't been so extraordinarily good looking, in the rejuvenated picture at least, he would have been somewhat annoyed.

He decided, since the testimonial informed him that all those who wished to interview Mrs. Smith about her wonderful treatment could do so at Doctor Eyedoit's beauty parlor to go there himself.

He had many months ago decided to pack bag and baggage and go East for a job. So he went to New York with his luggage and in his vest pocket, against the time he should feel in the mood to interview Mrs. Tom Smith, he carried the advertisement for Doctor Eyedoit's beauty parlor.

Tom intended to go to the beauty parlor on the pretense of getting the doctor's opinion of the scar which lingered on his temple from the effects of a bit of shrapnel that almost put him out of the ken of all doctors, during that awful drive at Mons.

He had not expected to use that scar as a pretext for entering a beauty doctor's office but none the less he was going to do that very thing. Somehow the wistful eyes of Mrs. Tom Smith had got themselves all mixed up with Tom's ideals, and whether she was maid, wife or widow—grass or otherwise —was the thing he was going to find out.

Thus it happened that before long he found himself at Doctor Eyedoit's and a few minutes later was gazing straight into the wistful eyes of Mrs. Tom Smith and being asked if he wanted an interview with the doctor.

"No," said Tom, "I want an interview with you." And he showed her the advertisement from his vest pocket and at the same time held out his card to her.

When she read the name on his card the girl flushed a swift and lovely color and her heavy lashes swept down over eyes in which there might have been the hint of a twinkle.

"How curious," she said softly. "And I didn't know there was such a place as Weebunkum on the map."

"It pretty near is off the map, but still—there's a post office and a few residents. But—there's no Mrs. Tom Smith. At least—not yet."

The girl seemed somewhat relieved at that information, for she smiled at Tom. "I thought I was safe in using the name of Mrs. Tom Smith as it's so common and I thought I had concocted the city of Weebunkum. My name is actually Tomasina Smith so there wasn't much fake about it."

Then Tom asked a bold question and waited anxiously for the answer. "How much fake is there about the Mrs. part of it and—the two lovely children?"

Tomasina Smith cast a swift look up into Tom's eyes and a second lovely blush entered the scene.

"The Mrs. is pure fake and the children are my little sisters. Doctor Eyedoit offered me a big check and a good salary if I would pose for those pictures and then be here to interview people for him. I needed the money badly as I have my sisters to take care of—so I accepted."

"Well," said Tom, and there was much relief and a lot of hope for his dreams of the future in his face and voice, "all I can say is, that you're a pretty plucky girl to take care of two sisters and yourself at the same time—and also that if you hadn't chosen the name of Weebunkum as an address—well—I suppose I wouldn't have had the pleasure of meeting you. You're going to be nice and let me get better acquainted, aren't you?"

"I should like very much to—to know you—better," faltered Tomasina.

"Then that's settled," said Tom and smiled joyfully.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

HOW WATER HELPS

One of the first things you have noticed in an illness in yourself or some one else, is that constipation is present practically from the beginning.

As you know, most ailments are accompanied by a rise in temperature, fever as it is called, because this heat is needed to fight the invader. This heat must be removed from the body and this is done by the blood carrying it to the surface of the body, to the skin, where it is removed in the form of perspiration.

Naturally the blood needs a lot of water in order to remove this heat, and takes it from every part of the body.

And as most of the waste matter in intestine is made up of water, therefore it takes most of this, leaving this waste in a dry hard condition.

This in turn makes it hard for the intestinal muscles to move it along, and hence there is constipation.

You can readily see therefore that more water is needed in the system, and these feverish individuals want and need plenty of water.

Your physician will likely prescribe Epsom salts for these conditions because the salts are of such composition that the system cannot extract the water from them, and they thus make the waste matter more fluid, so that it can be expelled down the intestine and out of the body by the muscular action of the intestinal walls.

Further, Epsom salts has the power to draw liquids from the blood, and thus in addition to supplying moisture to the waste matter, made dry by the fever, it takes some of the poisonous matter that is causing the fever, out of the blood.

So that the idea of drinking plenty of water daily is based upon good sense. It will help to prevent constipation.

I have spoken before about how the diluting of the blood with plenty of water enabled the kidneys to separate the poisons from the blood more readily. Therefore most of us, even when well, would be wise to drink one or two glasses of water between meals, in addition to that taken at mealtime.

ENJOY a good night's rest each night by drinking OVALTINE before retiring. You will prove—as many thousands have done—that OVALTINE is the world's best "night-cap".

Sleep induced by drugs or sedatives is neither natural nor refreshing. But OVALTINE brings sound, restful sleep in a perfectly natural way.

OVALTINE induces sleep by soothing and calming frayed nerves, the principal cause of sleeplessness. It does more, for while you sleep, the food elements so richly supplied by OVALTINE are busily restoring and rebuilding the nerves and creating new stores of energy. You wake refreshed and invigorated for the activities of the coming day.

Mrs. R. R. Hall, Reid Street, was hostess yesterday afternoon at a very successful tea and sale of gifts, held at her home under the auspices of the King's Daughters Society. This was one of the most largely-attended of the teas held by this organization, as a great many ladies took advantage of the opportunity to come in at the tea hour and patronize a sale of pretty things tied up in Christmas paper. Mrs. Hall, who is president of the society, received the guests. Tea was poured by Mrs. L. D. W. Magie, assisted by Mr. A. H. Stratton and Mrs. E. H. Wood. The table was charming with long crossed linen runners of bright yellow centred by silver candelabra with yellow candles and silver baskets of feathery single 'mums in the same cheerful shade of bright yellow. At the nome-made cooking table were Mrs. G. H. Thompson, Mrs. J. W. Fraser, Miss E. Scott, and Miss M. English, and the sale of Christmas gifts at a surprise package table was looked after by Mrs. Everett Taylor and Mrs. W. J. Kent.

In giving The Examiner an account of the tea and sale held by the Young Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Church at the home of Miss Mabel Brown, Park street, inadvertent omission was made of the musical program, which consisted of piano selections by Miss O. Pratt and Miss Elva Nugent and songs by Mrs. B. Cutmore, Miss Eleanor Brown and Miss Margaret Wolstenholme.

The following notice from a Toronto paper is of interest locally, as it refers to the marriage of J. Pogue, son of the Rev. Robert and Mrs. Pogue of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough. The bridegroom, as well as his parents, is well known locally: "On Nov. 24, at 4.30 p.m., an interesting double wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Elsley, Campbellville. The contracting parties were Nelson Bonsfield and Marjory Maud Elsley, and J .A. Pogue and Anna Elsley. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue, father of one of the grooms, assisted by Rev. C. Graham Jones, pastor of St. David's Presbyterian Church, Campbellville. Mrs. C. A. Elsley, mother of the bride, wore black transparent velvet, trimmed with gold lace. Mrs. Pogue, mother of the groom, was dressed in wine-colored taffeta silk. Miss Isabel Pogue was charming in yellow georgette, touched with brilliants. The wedding breakfast was served in the dining-room of the Campbellville Inn. Mrs. Bonsfield was dressed in beige taffeta silk, trimmed with silver, with silver-grey hose and slippers to match, and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mrs Pogue wore blue taffeta silk, trimmed with silver, and with silver-grey hose and slippers, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Bonsfield's travelling dress was fraille beige, with hat, shoes and hose to harmonize, and brown fox fur. Mrs. Pogue's going-away dress was a navy blue poiret twill suit, with red fox fur and French hat in black and gold. Mr. and Mrs. Pogue will reside in Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Bonsfield will reside in Campbellville."

Ridley, Mr. Thomas Crouch and Mr. William Stead. Mr. and Mrs. Sucee were presented with many beautiful gifts of silver which were acknowledged in a few words of appreciation by the host. After the dainty buffet supper the guests enjoyed dancing, the music was supplied by Messrs. Sample and Wright. Each gentleman present received a useful key chain, a souvenior of the business which the host represents, the presentation being made by Mr. Sucee in a most unique fashion, before dispersing Alderman Clements extended the appreciation of the guests to Mr. and Mrs. Sucee for the very enjoyable evening and expressed the hope that the host and hostess would enjoy many years of health and happiness and would celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

Houses may be THINGS, but don't you think they have personality?

* * *

I wish, if I can, to bring out to-day the difference between houses; the difference that strikes the visitor.

* * *

Last summer, for instance, I was a week-end guest at a house many miles from Peterborough where everything was so stiff I felt stiff, too.

* * *

It was lovely, there's no denying that. A rambling bungalow, with big windows and furnishings that fully lived up, in the inside, to the lovely pictures conjured up by the outside.

* * *

But it didn't welcome guests, no matter how much handshaking the host and hostess bestowed at the front door, or how comfortable the bedrooms; or how eager the entertainers were to please.

* * *

Probably it was too perfect—at any rate, there was an air of restraint pervading every corner. There was restraint of feeling in the hall; of thought in the drawing room; of appetite in the dining room, and of freedom everywhere.

* * *

In 1927, on the other hand, I recall visiting at a house that made me feel altogether too much at home; it was the kind of house with which one cannot help taking liberties.

* * *

The host and hostess were not more cordial than in the former case, but the hall verily hailed one to come in, whether there was anybody to meet or not. It fairly urged the visitor to drop impedimenta of travel anywhere (what a sacrilege in the other house!) and skip through a flirtatious drawing room on to a seductive, sleepy piazza.

* * *

Probably a house is nothing more, as some say, than a reflection of the tenants' personalities, but I don't know. It seems to me the people I visited this year were just as cordial as those on whom I afflicted my presence last year, but there was a difference in the FEEL of the HOUSE.

* * *

Right here in Peterborough I know two houses. I visit both, frequently. One is like the first I told of; staid, solemn, precise—but the owners are as happy-go-lucky a couple outside as one could well meet.

* * *

The other is not half so well (or, perhaps, "expensively" would be more correct) furnished, yet everyone who enters it is inclined to feel comfortable. An evidence is that people frequently DO say so in it, whereas the dignity of the well-appointed house discourages remark.

* * *

Maybe I'm all wrong, but it seems to me the kind of house to have is one where the furnishings, be they inexpensive or the highest-priced, feel homey.

The letters on the subject of "Thinker" are pertinent, and should show that gentleman he hasn't thrown the least little wee scare into readers of The xami r.

I know of lots nicer things to write about, and so . . .

* * *

How about that Christmas party? Have you it all planned—or do you want a little help? There's still time to take advantage of Laura's good work in preparing a help telling about games, decorations and so on.

* * *

There are games for children and grown-ups, and one for girls only. Then, Laura tells how to brighten up the rooms inexpensively, how to make taffy apples and a Santa Claus salad, and many other things that will help make Christmas enjoyable.

* * *

And have you decided ALL your gifts? Maybe there's someone who would appreciate a bed jacket made by your own hands. If so, send for this week's help—you can do the work in an hour, and you'll be pleased with the result.

* * *

If there's no friend to send it to, why keep the jacket for yourself!

* * *

A man told me the other day about a case in which he made a mistake, and the party injured made him pay the last pound of flesh.

* * *

I'm no Portia; I wouldn't for worlds enter into an argument between two people; but I just wish to remark upon the fine feeling one has over doing a generous act—and the "gone" sensation that follows hitting an opponent when he is down.

* * *

Charity, besides being so great a virtue, is SO satisfying to one's self.

* * *

It's well worth trying. When someone who has injured or hurt you makes amends and expresses sorrow, go more than half way. You will reap rich reward, not only in that person's mind, but in your own.

* * *

And here's a bit of philosophy for the one who makes a mistake. When you make a mistake, admit it right away. If someone comes to you and says, "Marion, you did . . ." so-and-so wrong, agree with it all—if, of course, you did.

* * *

That takes all the wind out of the sails of a critic, whereas if you start trying to justify your action you simply add fuel to the flames and make a reconcilation more difficult than ever—besides causing a difficult "scene."

* * *

All of which has nothing to do with recent events in Peterborough, but might well be applied to any case!

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

Here's an idea that might be used by farm neighbors to good advantage. It is for fire extinguishers, to be placed around the house and barn. Take 10 pounds of common salt, 5 pounds of sal ammoniac, and 3½ gialons of water. Mix well, bottle for use, and set on little shelves in handy places. In case of fire, throw the bottles so as to break them in the blaze, and the solution will extinguish the fire.

Yours truly,
Mrs. F. C."

RADIATOR TOPS

If you cannot afford one of the enclosed radiator cases, a nice top that is usable for a magazine rack can be made by using a board the size of the radiator, painting it the color of the woodwork and fastening it to the radiator with cleats. Curtains like your drapes or those made of pongee can entirely cover the radiator.

FRESH FLOWERS

Roses, chrysanthemums or practically any flowers can be kept fresh much longer if you clip off the ends of their stems under water. A couple of aspirin tablets added to the water preserves their freshness also.

Too Many Questions Lost Her a Husband

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—The preliminaries to marriage, when aired in discussion the other day before the provincial registrar (together with the fickleness of women) proved too upsetting to a certain bridegroom-to-be, aged 53, and he disappareade for good. His inamorata was 64. They had known each other just a few weeks and the lady craved more information. She spoke no English but an interpreter asked questions: "If you marry her, she says you must promise not to beat her." He woved his vow. But then she wanted to know how much money he had! "What does an old woman like her want to know ofr," he said. And this rather broke up the party, for when late in the afternoon of the same day the bride-to-be arrived again and said, "Give me the license, I have decided to marry," she could not produce her one-time affianced. he had departed for parts unknown.

WASHABLE PAINT

If you mix varnish with the paint used on your walls, when you do the woodwork, it will be the desirable non-glossy surface and still be washable.

SOUR PASTE

If you add some cloves or a few drops of carbolic acid to paste when it is opened, it will keep it from souring.

LEAGUE FIGHTS WHITE SLAVERY

Dr. Snow Advocates Organization of Women Police as in England.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Dr. William Snow, president of the National Health Council of the United States and chairman of the special body of experts of the League of Nations which deals with the problems of the "white slave" traffic in women and children, speaking recently under the auspices of the League of Nations Society here gave specific facts on what had been accomplished in various countries to prevent the traffic. He discussed the necessity of abolishing licensed houses and commended the introduction of womsn police which was working out successful in England. Italy and France were both waking up to the necessity of coping with the problem, he said, and the Japanese government had asked that the investigations be carried further by the commission appointed to look into the matter.

Immigration and migration laws weer being tightened up to prevent the importation of women from one country to another and in some countries the ports were so well pliced that no woman could leave ship without an escort. Many practices were resorted to in an effort to entice young girls away but the supervision was being gradually increased and it was thought that it was only a matter of time before licensed houses would be abolished.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

For school wear in cold weather short wool sports socks may be worn over long stockings. The tan tweed coat with brown felt collar is worn with matching felt beret.

The easiest way to solve the stocking problem for your little girl is to contrive somehow to pass the cold months where the weather is so mild that no question can arise as to the entire suitability of allowing her to go with bare knees all winter.

Little school girls in Paris go bare kneed all winter and their skirts are certainly short enough. And many American children even in northern cities contrive to do the same without apparent injury.

Still many mothers I know feel that at least for the colder weeks of winter long stockings should be substituted for the shorter socks.

This question of socks or stockings is really a rather trying one. And now that high shoes are out of favor the question becomes even more perplexing. Woolen stockings are all very well if you are willing to wash them carefully yourself to keep them from shrinking. But you may prefer the heavier sort of cotton stockings which do not shrink.

One mother of my acquaintance has hit upon the plan of providing her little daughters with long cotton stockings which may be fastened securely above the knees with properly adjusted hose supporters and then, because fashion favors low shoes, she adds a pair of wool and silk or wool and cotton sports socks for outdoor wear.

The advantage of this arrangement is that since these little outside socks do not touch the skin they do not have to be washed so often and that they may easily be taken off indoors when their warmth proves uncomfortable.

I have seen a number of well-dressed little girls wearing these short-cuffed woolen socks over long stockings, and the plan seemed to have so many advantages that I thought it was worth passing on to you.

A nozzle containing a chamber for soap has been invented for washing autos. The hose it attached to the nozzle and the water applied in the usual way.

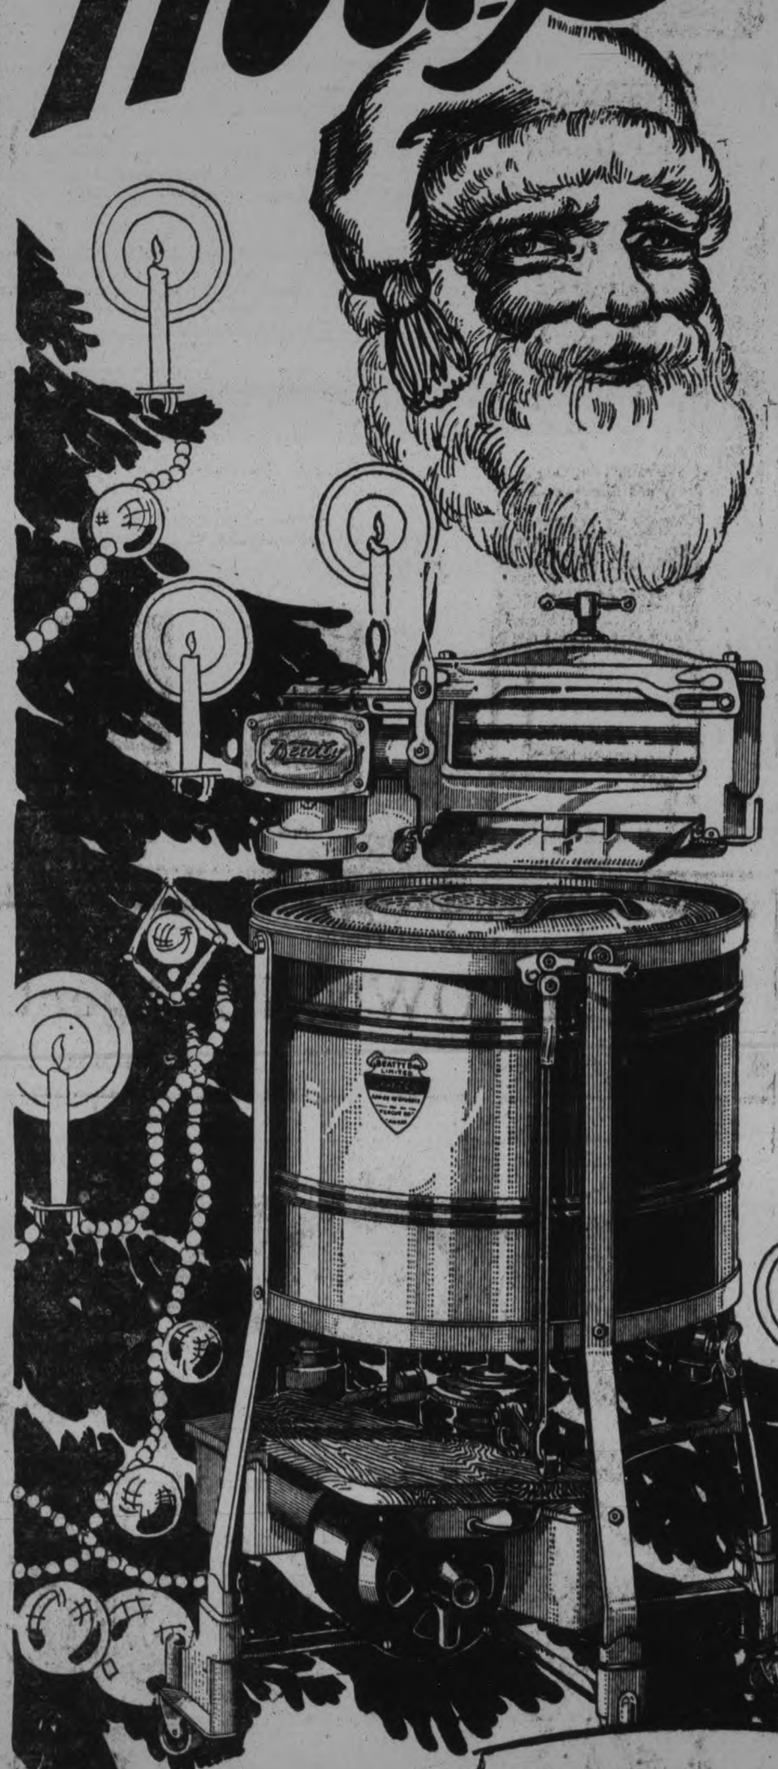
Mr. Santa how would this look beside the XMAS TREE?



You'll have to look a long time to find anything that will look as fine under the Xmas tree as a Beatty Electric Washer, Mr. Santa Claus. And if it's mother you want to make happy, you don't need to look any farther. Mother likes to do the washing herself, because she knows the importance of each piece of apparel and how carefully it must be done. She will slave away over tub and washboard, or kill herself pushing a heavy lever and cranking an old hand wringer, just to keep the rest of the family looking their best. But you know she shouldn't do it, Santa Claus. A Beatty Electric Washer will do the whole work in an hour, without rubbing and without effort.

Beatty ELECTRIC WASHER and FOUR FREE GIFTS TO BOOT

There are two lists to choose from—the electrical list on the right, or the wash-day extras below. Four gifts accompany each machine, and you can take some from both lists if you wish. Any one of these extra gifts would make a hit with mother. With four of them you can fairly shower her with happiness.

Electric Gift Sale

We're running this special sale just for your benefit, Santa Claus, because we know you appreciate a real bargain. Here you have FIVE electrical gifts for the price of one. If mother didn't want them all, you could give one or two to the connection, and that might help out a bit. The string of electric lights for the Xmas tree is a beauty, because even if one goes out the rest stay lit, and they are all such fine large colored lights. But they are all good.

ONLY $1.00 DOWN NOTHING MORE TO PAY THIS YEAR

Only $1.00 down—$2.15 a week or less and no interest. Payments start in January. This is just to help out your financial department, Santa Claus, because we appreciate there is an extra strain on it just at this time. We'll co-operate with you in most every way to help make this a grand Xmas for mother.

Trade in the Old Washer

If there's an old washer or wringer around the place, so much the better. We'll allow a very reasonable amount for it on the new machine. Slip it out to the back door and we'll take it away when we bring the Beatty.

COME DOWN TO THE STORE, SANTA CLAUS, AND LET'S GET THIS ALL FIXED UP.

A Decorative Gift Package and Well-Chosen Card

by Marjorie Howe Dixon

(By Marjorie Howe Dixon)

AT CHRISTMAS time, an artist in the family is quite an asset, and is ever so handy at suggesting little new ways to wrap the packages and may even be induced to design an individual card. Then again the artist may be more of a nuisance than a help with his original ideas.

For instance, stringing gum drops on the ends of pieces of yarn may make a package look quite different when it starts. But if the post office department lets it lie too close to a radiator somewhere in transit, so that the gum drops melt and make the nice bright red paper run,—on that lovely hand-embroidered chemise you were sending Aunt Evelyn, why then—you see—Aunt Evelyn wouldn't care so much about your artist and his ideas, would she? I think it more than likely that the artist would neglect to replace the chemise, too.

Doing It Properly

If you find a department in a store where wrappings and ribbons are all set awaiting your choice, you really will be safer. Because the people who plan these things for you do not dare make mistakes or experiment in the lovely free way common to artists. (It is permitted that one poke a little fun at his own avocation, is it not?).

There at the store you may find gay new colors and designs in the papers offered. Some firms are showing folded sheets in separate transparent envelopes. The sheet is ready any time to use and is dust-proof.

A thoughful gift to a friend would be a number of kinds of paper, sent well before Christmas—or would the friend think you were suggesting he had not wrapped his packages attractively in the past? It is a delicate matter to decide.

Tinsel Cord of Colors

With the wrapping paper you will find many suggestions for tying packages. Raffia is used. Tinsel cord of many colors, tinsel ribbons, red, green and white, silken ribbons, holly ribbons are there. Seals, stickers and pretty cards are all spread out too, making any sort of selection from them positively difficult.

Besides all these practical "aids to an attractive gift package" there are tricky methods of tying them shown you. There is the double diagonal tie, across the box twice, and not so easy to do. Then there is the usual around once lengthways, around once the narrow way, ending with a pretty bow in the centre of the package.

An unusual effect may be achieved with two colors of paper arranging the folds so that the inner color is shown prettily. This can be done diagonally, too, but just between you and me, it looks just a trifle too professional for us to attempt.

Home-made Holiday Cards

To return to that artist in the family. The individual Christmas card designed by him may not be original, but it is sure to be "different." This is not always as desirable as it might be, as in the case of the lady who ordered two dozen cards from her artist friend—printed from hand-cut linoleum blocks. When they arrived, both she and her husband decided they were "different," undoubtedly, but they could not be mailed out.

You see, the artist had wanted to be "different" and had chosen to present three ladies—in what might be called "comparative anatomy"—the artist of course, declining to be held down by generally accepted notions of what is true or beautiful.

Perhaps it is for this reason that engravers and printers have taken pity on the innocent old public and have prepared special cards that can be adjusted to the family needs without calling in an artist.

How more appropriately could we end than:

Our best wishes to you all for the happiest of holidays!

During a ceremony at Sarcee reserve in Alberta, Chief Joe Big Plume offered a prayer that the "Great White Spirit watch over our Father and speed him safely through his illness." At the gathering Henry A. Lytton, of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, delivered a message from the King to the Indians. The photograph ABOVE shows Chief Joe receiving the message from Mr. Lytton.

LEGION PRESENTS PLEASING CONCERT

Proceeds of Program Given at Campbellford To Be Used For Relief.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 7 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Memories of the days of 1914-1818 were revived for ex-service men when the Canadian Legion, Campbellford Branch, presented the program at the Regent Theatre Wednesday night. The entire proceeds of the evening will be used for relief purposes.

The first part of the program was an eight reel feature picture, "Roses of Picardy." This is a British production and its reproduction of trench life as well as the scenes behind the lines, were most realistic. From the rain and mud of the front line trenches in winter, through the happy, care-free days at rest in the back areas, right up to the last days of the war when every man was called upon to play a superhuman part in stemming the great enemy advance, and the final reverse to the gray hordes and the advance of the Allied troops, the picture met with the approval of everyone who saw it. Of particular interest was the contrast of modern methods of warfare to the days when the troops rode to battle garbed in burnished steel and with plumed helmets.

"Fragments of France," a play by the Havelock War Veterans, formed the second part of the program and was received with much applause, the mark of approval. The play was in four scenes: Billets in England; Sentry Duty Behind the Lines in France, and Estaminet Scene, and a glimpse of the trenches just before an attack. The cast consisted of ten players assisted by several extras from the Campbellford Legion. Madamoiselle from Armentiers, Fred Platt; Captain Chamberlain, Barney Quinn; Sergeant Gruff, Jack Evans; Orderly Corporal, Percy Yuill; Private Trouble, Joe Falkner; Crown and Anchor, Harold Mathison; Shorty Sloan, Fred Bacchus; Just Diaper, Diaper; More Trouble, Carmen Coon and Danny Shorter.

"Fragments of France" is a short play, written by members of the Havelock War eVterans and presented in Havelock to packed houses. It will be played there again in the near future.

"ONE AT A TIME"

London, Dec. 7.—Enemies or thieves are held responsible for the death of William Parton, 53, here recently. He was found in a semi-conscious condition crying "One at a time, one at a time." Police failed to get a clue to his assailants prior to his death.

NEW CLASS LEADER.

Stillwater, Okla., Dec. 7.—Harry Miller, sophomore at Oklahoma A. & M. College leads his class in mileage. Each day he drives 54 miles from Norfolk to school and back again. To get to his classes on time he must rise at 5:30 a.m.

Fine Old Christmas

—with Snowy Hair and Ruddy Face

(By Marjorie Howe Dixon)

WALDEN had been standing at the window for fully five minutes watching the drops slide down the window pane. Horrid old rain! Why did it have to rain? The snow was so lovely the day before and now it was rapidly turning to slush, under the steady downpour.

Christmas was over. His heart's desire, a new sled and hockey skates, had been fulfilled. But, shucks, what good were they in the rain! It just spoiled everything. Mother saw, as she always did, just what a state he was in. Drops were going to slide down his cheeks instead of the glass in another moment, if something weren't done immediately.

"Walden, dear—please come over by the fire! It's been such a happy week, hasn't it? We aren't going to spoil it with gloom now, are we? You and Lum-dum draw up your little chairs and I'll read a little further. I think it will suggest a game to you. You listen hard and see if it doesn't?"

Objected to Baby Name

Lum Dum having arrived at the age of six, sometimes objected to her baby name, and insisted on her own "Ruth Ann" with dignity. This time she didn't care. She had dressed her favorite doll at least fourteen times that morning and undressed her and put her to bed as many times. She felt quite willing that Vivian Rose Violet Lily should sleep awhile in peace, now that other amusement was offered.

Mother had read them a bit about Maggie and Tom in "The Mill on Floss," before. The morning of the snow she had read to them the beginning of the chapter "The Christmas Holidays" because it was just that kind of a day she said." Fine old Christmas with snowy hair and ruddy face." She began again and went on:

"Snow lay on the croft and river bank in undulations softer than the limbs of infancy,—Old Christmas smiled—for he meant to light up home with new brightness, to deepen all the riches of indoor color and give a keener edge of delight to the warm fragrance of food."

Passes Box of Candy

Walden bega to brighten up when Mother read this last part, and glanced around at the firelight and the pleasant room as if seeing them for the first time. He went over very quietly, so as not to disturb the reading to get his box of candy and pass it around. The two children nibbled in silence as Mother read on.

It was Ruth Ann who interrupted suddenly, "Mother! We can play we are them,—He'll be Tom and I'll be Maggie. And we'll trim my doll house with holly like it says they did. What does it say,—Windows and mantelpieces and picture frames? Tom, you drag out the Doll house. And I'll cut some little holly from some of the Christmas wrapping. And we'll have the dolls be Aunt and Uncle Moss and the seven children. And they can all go to church and everything."

Walden had been studying the next paragraph at his mother's shoulder. "Tom and Maggie must have been in bed when they heard 'Singing under the windows at midnight,' so we'll be the singers and you pick out some more dolls to be Tom and Maggie."

Wants to Be Maggie

Lum Dum bustled over to the doll's bed in her most important manner. "Well, I declare! Vivian Rose Violet Lily has just waked up and she wants to be Maggie, she says."

"She's much too big," said Walden, absently, trying to decide which doll would be Tom, and reconcile in his somewhat practical mind the fact that the toy village was much smaller than the dolls' house; and how were the miscellaneous assortment of dolls ever to get in the church which was about two inches high?

Mother had gone over to her desk to write thank you letters to her friends and New Year cards to the people she had forgotten to send Christmas cards to. She listened to see how this difficulty would be straightened out.

"There's just two boy dolls to choose from, for Tom, and they both are crazy," said Walden. "Tom was a big boy." Walden was holding out a fat smiling infant in rompers and a doll made of gum drops and tooth picks.

Poor Gum Drop!

Lum Dum looked over. "You've eaten one arm and one foot off the gum drop boy, so he won't do," she said. "My darling Patrick Henry—give-me-liberty-or-death will have to be Tom. Come here, Patrick, if you are going to church you must put your hood on. And shame on you for a big boy wearing a hood!" She giggled.

Walden laughed, too, and Mother returned to her letters peacefully knowing that things were starting well.

She looked up again. "Mother, how did Tom get home from school?" Walden was asking. "I'd like to have him come on my railroad train. Did they have trains those days?"

Mother opened to the previous chapter. "Oh here it is, 'The happiness of seeing the bright light in the parlor at home, as the gig passed noselessly over the snow covered bridge'."

"What is a gig?"

"It's a carriage, dear."

Must Go Around Switch

"Well, we'll play it is short for engine. I haven't any bridge, so it will have to go around by the switch."

Mother watched them with interest as the chubby doll, larger than the car itself, was trundled about the tracks and received with many kisses and much enthusiasm by Ruth Ann, who was Mrs. Tulliver for the time being.

"Oh mush!" said Walden, "Tom was twelve or thirteen years old, Ruth Ann. He'd hate being kissed like that!"

"Him's my darling boy, come home to his dear mother," cooed Ruth Ann who wanted to see that justice was done to a scene, in which she could properly shine.

"I was glad I had remembered that chapter on Christmas in 'The Mill on the Floss,' because it gave them something new to think about. I'll have to write and tell grandmother all about it. I must go and do it right away, too, before I forget that remarkable sermon. Dear, if you only could have seen him, looking so solemn and (mischievously glancing at her husband) so exactly like his D..d."

At this point Mother fled and turning to the doorway wrinkled her nose at him. Then she went on upstairs to write Grandmother.

TRADE GROWS RAPIDLY WITH SOUTH AFRICA

C. R. Stevens, Dominion Trade Commissioner, is Visiting Local Industries.

CANADA RANKS FOURTH

Many Peterborough - Made Products Are to be Found in That Country.

"Canadian trade with South Africa is growing very rapidly," said C. R. Stevens, Canadian Trade Commissioner to that Dominion, in an interview with The Examiner to-day.

Mr. Stevens was in the city to make a tour of the factories here that trade with South Africa. This is in connection with a tour of Canada in which Mr. Stevens will call upon four hundred manufacturers, who are selling to South Arfica. After completing the tour he will go to Peru to open a new Canadian office in that country, and then return to his post in South Africa. He is accompanied by J. M. Mewtter, who will go to South Africa with him.

"Canada is fourth among the nations supplying the Union of South Arfica, being preceded only by Great Britain, United States, and Germany in the order named. The Canadian business is very rapidly growing. The products received from Canada are chiefly newsprint, motor cars, wheat and flour, agriculture implements and hardware. Four years ago half our trade was in motor cars, but on account of British preference we lost all that trade. Since then we have replaced the motor cars with other items.

"So far I have seen about 120 manufacturers in Canada, and all are in first-class condition. They are all expanding their export trade very rapidly, and many now are in a position that they compete with anyone in the world in their same lines.

Two Good Years.

"Africa has had two very satisfactory years, and the political situation is much less critical. Probably the general elections to take place next year will be the quietest in South African history. The principal development has been of late years the rapid opening up of Northern and Southern Rhodesia and the other territories of Central Africa. The Belgian Congo and various British colonies are progressing almost at a boom rate.

Mr. Stevens visited the Quaker Oats Company, the Peterborough Canoe Company, and Canadian Nashua Company while in the city. When asked if these firms send products to Africa, Mr .Stevens replied, "Yes, Peterborough canoes are used in Africa, not so much in South Africa as on the many rivers of Central and East Africa. The flour and other products of the Quaker Oats are used to a great extent, and nearly every housewife in Africa is familiar with the Quaker man on their flour packages. The Nashua Company is new in the field, and as yet we are only trying out their products, but I feel sure that they will prove first-class."

Mr. Stevens will speak on the subject, "Africa and African Problems," at the Chamber of Commerce banquet to be held in the Empress Hotel to-night.

FIRE DAMAGES EATING HOUSE

Brigade Receives Call To Fish and Chip Shop of S. Whatley.

GREASE BOILS OVER.

Friday is Fish Day in many Peterborough homes—ordinarily, but today many a dinner table was fishless. Perhaps it was the extra demand, and perhaps it just had to be; at any rate, a bowl of hot grease boiled over and started a blaze which ultimately did $300 damage to the fish and chip shop of S. Whatley, 193 Charlotte street, shortly before the noon hour to-day. Confined, for the most part to the kitchen, the blaze proved a difficult one to conquer, while a heavy smoke screen not only hampered the work of the firemen but caused considerable discomfiture to the crowd that soon gathered. Chemicals were used.

Owing to the fact that the fire was in the main business section of the city, the entire fire brigade turned out and one truck driver will eventually face a charge under the fire by-law, he having left his truck parked too close to a fire hydrant.

MRS. E. OLIVER HAS VALUABLE COSTUME

Has Seen Service in Performances of "Mikado" in Many Cities.

While on a visit to England twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey brought back with them several valuable Japanese costumes, one of which used as the costume for the "Mikado," was made from a curtain of Japanese make, presented by Bullard and Company, curio collectors and first worn by Mr. Bullard at an amateur performance of the "Mikado" over thirty years ago.

Following this a series of performances were given in Buckingham Town Hall, when the same costume attracted considerable notice. An English country paper dated November 2nd, 1928, says in part:—

"The costumes used were almost historical, being lent by Major and Miss Hooker of Buckingham, and used in "Mikado" amateur performances bring back such well known names as R. J. Devey (musical director), Mrs. R. J. Devy and Miss E. Devey, with Mrs. E. E. Oliver (sister of Mr. Devey) to whom Mr. Bullard presented the "Mikado" costume. Since then it has been to Canada and used in productions of the "Mikado": "Greek Slave", "San Toy" and "Geisha" conducted by Mr. Devey only to return again for this weeks production of Princess Ju-Ju."

When used in the Earl Grey competition at the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto many years ago, His Excellency Earl Grey asked Mr. Devey particulars of that "Mikado" costume, which after having given service in Peterborogh, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, and Windsor, the costume was returned to Mrs. Oliver some months ago, offers for its purchase by costumiers in Canada being informed that it was not for sale.—Wolverton Express, Buckinghamshire, England.

BIBLE CLASS HOLDS BANQUET

Officers Elected at Annual Meeting of St. John's Church Society.

TABLES DECORATED.

The Women's Friendly Bible Class of St. John's Church held their annual banquet and election of officers last evening in the Parish Hall with thirty-seven members of the class present, with their teacher, Mrs. F. M. Dela Fosse. The guests included Dr. and Mrs. Blagrave and W. J. Kent.

The tables were tastefully decorated in the class colors of blue and white, adorned with blue and white ribbons, tall blue candles in silver candle holders and silver vases of narcissus, and the class shield. There were nine waitresses, composed of some of the members of the class. During the dinner a flashlight of the class and visitors was taken.

W. J. Kent made a few remarks, thanking the class for his invitation. Dr. Blagrave also spoke a few words, praising the class for their excellent work, and asked them to rise and sing the National Anthem with expression, owing to the illness of the King.

The ladies then adjourned to the ladies' drawing room, where the annual business was transacted.

The election of officers was held, and most of last year's officers were re-elected. The following are the officers for 1929:

President: Mrs. J. Vollans.
Vice-president: Mrs. P. Groombridge.
Secretary: Mrs. C. Barton.
Treasurer: Mrs. J. Bacon.

KIWANIS CLUB

During the year, the club added 8, and deleted 4.

The board of directors held 12 regular meetings and 4 emergent, and the committee of chairmen met 11 times, making a total of 27 meetings during the year.

Our worthy President, Jospeh John, has made a record for the Peterborough club; he has 100 per cent attendance at executive meetings, committee of chairmen meetings, and regular club luncheons, thus making a perfect score not only in attendance but in everything he has undertaken for the club in the past year.

In our activities at Jackson Park Camp, 235 children passed through during its 46 days of operation, and a total of $1,154.10 was expended; made up as follows:

1,525 quarts of milk	$138.25
179 lbs. butter	74.18
984 lbs. bread	60.55
Meat and eggs	61.19
Groceries	127.93
Bathing suits, 72	34.50
Repairs to playground equipment	19.00
Medical Supplies	14.95
Transportation, 46 days @6; $276—donated $25	251.00
Professional nurse, cook, and other help	375.50
Ice	10.40
Hardware	4.65
	$1,154.10

The members of the club displayed a great deal of interest in the camp during its operations, 75 per cent. of the members with their wives visited the camp.

The report was adopted on motion of John Allen and Jack McKone.

The toast to the King took on a special significance at the meeting to-day, President John referring to the serious condition of His Majesty. Accordingly, the National anthem was sung in softer tone more efective than in he usual proud manner.

The Election of Officers

As stated the main business of the meeting was the election of officers and once opened by President Joe John, the nominations were not long in forthcoming. Richard Hicks-Lyne was appointed Returning officer with Tom Mark and Art. Moffat assisting him as scrutineers.

Proposed by Jack Marshall, whose motion was seconded immediately by Jack MacNabb the name of Vice President John Turner was not opposed and Doug Paterson moved that nominations be closed. Accordingly, John Turner was officially named President for the year 1929. The president-elect did not speak at any great length, but in a well-worded response, invited the co-operation of the entire club which had so honored him.

The question of whether or not a member should be allowed to withdraw his name was raised by John Heron and spoken to by Dr. Jack Craig and Isaac McNabb, but there was no new ruling any more than that the withdrawing of names seemed to be frowned upon.

District Trustee

The names of Joe Wearing and Jack Craig were proposed along with that of Joe John, as candidates for the district trustee's office, but on explanation by Jack Craig, it was decided to abide by the practice of having the immediate Past President John was appointed.

Jack Nelson received a good majority for the treasurer's office, having been proposed by John Allen and Charlie Cook, and then followed nominations for the directorate. In all, eighteen names were proposed and the scrutineers had a busy time completing their count. During this time, Nelson Turner, Carl Brown and Jack Nelson won themselves a place in the hearts of "the boys" by ordering cigars, and Ernie Smith started his auctioneering that terminated so successfuly. The new trustee, in order to off-stand a surfeiting on cigars, promised to privide more of them—but at next week's luncheon.

Announcements

During the meeting several announcements were made, including that by Carl Browne regarding the Peterborough delegation that will attend the charter night of Oshawa's new Kiwanis club, on January 16. The president also announced the signal honor, recently conferred upon Kiwanian Jack Heron, being his appointment as associate editor of the K-Ray magazine.

The business concluded, O Canada was sung and the meeting dismissed.

Varsity Seniors Win S. P. A. Championship

TORONTO CREW DEFEATS PORT COLBORNE 4-1 IN FINAL TILT FOR PRE-SEASON HOCKEY CUP

Mel Harley Again Responsible For Students' Victory Over Ports.

PLAY GOOD GAME.

S. P. A. Senior Series the Poorest in History This Year.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.— One hockey championship has been decided, Varsity taking the Sportsmen's Patriotic trophy, emblematic of the pre-season senior honors, with a 4 to 1 win over Port Colborne Intermediate O. H. A. title holders, at the Arena Gardens last night. The Students did not have to show a great deal to capture the laurels this year as they only opposed two teams, first beating Argonauts in overtime and then they disposed of the Ports in the final last night. The S.P.A. senior series was the poorest in history this year, only two games being played, with a few friends of the players to witness them.

Mel Harley, the man who put the Students in the final by beating Argonauts, was mainly responsible for the victory last night, scoring two of the goals, while he made the play for another. In the game with the Scullers Harley scored three times in succession in the last period of play to make it possible for the Collegians to win, while last night he again set the pace. Harley played smart hockey, but he was not alone, for the Students all displayed an improvement over their last effort.

Port Colborne, with exactly the same team that won the Intermediate championship last year, made a strong bid for the Senior trophy, but they lacked the finish, Varsity being much better in the last period. The Ports did not have the condition of the locals and they could not get their team-play working while they found the Varsity defence difficult to beat on solo efforts. The Ports did not bore in after the first period, their scoring efforts being limited to long shots, while the Students carried most of their plays into the mouth of the Colborne cage before firing.

The teams:

Port Colborne— Goal, Moore; defence, A. Cross and Horne; centre, Cuthbert; wings, Mountain and Nixon; alternatives, Morrill, Near, Cameron, Pettie, Harris and C. Cross.

Varsity— Goal, Snyder; defence, Whitehead and Paul; centre, Stewart; wings, Murray and Harley; alternatives, Statham, Marshall, McMullen and McMillan.

Referee—H. Watson.

MAROONS REGAIN LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

Montreal Scores Decisive Victory Over Former Pace Setters 4-1.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—The Montreal Maroons regained first place in the standing of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League last night by scoring a decisive 4 to 1 win over the New York Americans, at the Forum. Such was the brand of hockey displayed by the Montreal sextette that the result was never in doubt. The Americans, with the exception of the final period, when they flashed a spasmodically dangerous attack, showed nothing, and five minutes after the start of the game, were two goals behind.

Nels Stewart scored the first two Montreal goals, both on lone efforts. In the second period, Lamb made it 3 to 0 on a pass from Phillips, while early in the third, Smith took Stewart's pass to give the locals a commfortable 4 to 0 advantage. The Yanks then went into action, and Burch finally beat Benedict on Sheppard's pass-out.

Worters, the much-discussed goal tender, was between the American posts, and although beaten on four occasions, gave a good account of himself.

Americans—Goal, Worters; defence Conacher and Reise; centre, Burch; wings, Dye and Sheppard; subs, Simpson, Connor Broadbent, Himes, McVeigh and Spring.

Maroons—Goal, Benedict; defence, Dutton and Sliebert; centre, Smith; wings, Ward and Stewart; subs, Hicks, Phillips, Lamb, Trottier and Oatman.

Hoppe To Play In Cue Competitions

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.— Willie Hoppe will make a bid for the world three-cushion billiard title here December 17, 18 and 19 at the tournament. Rumors that Hoppe would not play for the only billiard title he has not held were set at rest when he sent in his entry Thursday.

Financial difficulties with the National Billiard Association had been reported as keeping Hoppe out. He qualified last fall for the tournament by finishing second. The other three who will compete are Johnny Laston, Otto Reiselt and Gus Copulos.

Ralph Greenleaf, champion Frank Taberski, Erwin Rudolph and Pasquale Natalie will play for the world pocket billiard crown at a tournament in conjunction with the three-cushion competition.

SENATORS BLANK CHICAGO HAWKS

Nighbor and Touhey Score in Overtime After Scoreless Three Periods.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press).—Frank Nighbor, peerless centre ice player of the Ottawa Senators, broke up last night's intersectional National Hockey League game with the Chicago Black Hawks by climaxing three periods of scoreless hockey with a brilliant goal all by himself after five minutes and five seconds of the overtime period had been played. That tally was the death-dealing blow to the Chicago puckmen, and a minute after Nighbor's goal, Bill Touhey whipped in another counter on a pass from Nighbor.

The game itself was a tame affair up to the overtime session, with neither teams showing much in the way of fast hockey and clever combination. Ottawas had an edge in every period, but Gardner's superb goal-tending held them at bay until the extra period of play, when the Senators broke through to settle the issue.

About 2,500 fans, making up the smallest crowd of the season to date witnessed the contest.

Ottawa—Goal, Connell; defence, Boucher and Clancy; centre, Nighbor, wings Touhey and Finnegan, subs Shields, Halliday, Kilrea, Grosvenor, Elliott, Smith.

Chicago—Goal, Gardner; defence, Wentworth and Loughlin; centre, McKinnon; wings, Irvin and Gottselig; subs, Hoffinger, Ripley, Arbour, Couture, March.

DOUBLE SCHEDULE FOR HOCKEY TEAM

Campbellford Expects To Have Strong Team in Trent Valley League.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 7. — Keen interest is expected in the local entry in the Trent Valley Hockey League this season. Wilbert Rogers of Campbellford, was elected to the office of the first vice-president at the organization meeting held in Madoc recently, and local fans have expressed the opinion that their town is well represented in that respect. All that remains now is to put a strong team in the running and to have consistent weather of the proper temperature for keen ice.

Last year Campbellford played in the Trent Valley League on a single schedule basis. This season they will play a double schedule with the exception of the games with Marmora and Madoc. These towns have not yet managed to build covered rinks, and the single schedule is the result. At the executive meeting it was expected that another season would see covered rinks in both Madoc and Marmora before another season arrived.

The schedule as at present drawn up calls for forty-two games to be played in fifty-five days. In four instances, there will be three games, involving the whole six teams of the league, played on the same dates. January 2 is the first of these dates, and the official opening of the play for the season. On this date Campbellford will play the Madoc sextette in Campbellford. There will also be games in Stirling and Marmora. The schedule is timed to finish on February 25, and the play-offs will probably take an additional week.

BANDIT ARRESTED AFTER LONG CHASE

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Following the theft of two cars, an exchange of shots, between a police officer and a robber in a hardware store at Caledonia where a posse of citizens scoured the town and made chase along the highway, police early yesterday arrested Robert Smith, alias Wilkinson.

Constable Fraser in the early morning saw a man enter the store in Caledonia. He fired into the store and the marauder replied with a rifle he found there and escaped in a stolen car. Running out of water he filled the radiator from roadside milk can. Officers to-day stopped Smith in his car with milk running from the radiator. It was later found that another car, stolen from Niagara Falls had been abandoned near the hardware store.

WORTERS TO PLAY WITH AMERICANS

Sale From Pittsburgh To New York Club Ratified By President.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7. — Roy Worters, formerly goalkeeper of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was in the nets for the New York Americans in their National League match with the Montreal Maroons last night.

A statement issued here yesterday by President Frank Calder read as follows:

"The principle that players under suspension may not be transferred from one club to another having been sustained by the board of governors of the National Hockey League no further good purpose can be served by barring Player Worters from the game. Having now signed his contract his suspension is lifted and the way is paved for the transfer of his services from Pittsburgh to the New York Americans. Such transfer now being ratified the player is eligible for the latter club."

RANGERS HOLD PIRATES TO TIE

Leonard's Squad Checks Division Leading Club in Hard Game.

MAJOR PENALTIES.

PITTSBURG, December 7.—Benny Leonard's Pirate skaters last night checked the division-leading New York Rangers after 70 minutes of hockey by a scoreless tie. An extra period failed to produce a score, and accordingly each team added a point to its total.

Two major penalties were meted out, Cotton and Bill Cook having turned an otherwise mediocre hockey game into a pugilistic endeavor.

Keeling, Ranger sub., was the best man on the ice, repeatedly pressing toward the Pirate goal. For the Pirates, Herb Drury, veteran of a score of years, proved an offensive star.

The line-up:

Penalties — First period, Abel; second period, W. Cook major, Cotton major, White; third period, Milks; overtime period, none.

BASEBALL DRAFT QUESTION WILL REMAIN UNSETTLED FOR PRESENT

Matter Postponed To Indefinite Date After Little Discussion By Delegates.

AMENDMENTS APPROVED.

Propose To Seek Compromise Between Majors and Unrestricted Draft Leagues.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—(Associated Press).—The vexing matter of the draft or selection of baseball players by the majors from the minor leagues will not be decided at the 1928 convention of the National Association. The question, which has long plagued the owners of baseball, finally reached the floor of the convention late yesterday and with comparatively little discussion was postponed to an indefinite date.

A committee from the AA and A leagues will try to arrange a meeting with a committee from the majors at West Baden, Ind. early in January to seek a compromise by which the leagues now operating under only a restricted draft, may be brought under the full force of unlimited selection.

If an agreement is reached at the Indian resort it can be submitted to the National Association of Baseball Clubs at a special convention or handled by a mail vote of the leagues. Any broadening of the scope of the draft will be agreeable to the Class B, C and D league and a majority of the A. classes.

The Pacific Coast, International and American Association, the three AA or "big minors" and the Western Class A. now have a draft rule limiting selection of players by the majors to those athletes who have been sent to these clubs by the American and National leagues.

Favor Amendment

In connection with the passage of a resolution yesterday calling for the West Baden conference and holding the draft matter in abeyance until then, the smaller leagues, through their spokesman, W. G. Bramhan, president of the South Atlantic Piedmont and Eastern Carolina, went on record as favoring the amendments to the major-minor league agreements which up for action. The AA leagues could not be brought to approve the amendments and the whole draft issue went over on a motion by John Conway Toole, president of the International league and outspoken foe of the draft, for the appointment of committees to go into a further conference.

If there are changes to be made in the operation of the draft they will have to be approved by mail or at special convention as the next convention will not be held until the first Wednesday in December, 1929, at Chattanooga, Tenn, selected as the next convention city.

Other amenoments submitted by the major-minor advisory council, dealing with baseball affairs other than the draft, will be taken up at a meeting to-day. Most of these proposed changes deal with technical administration.

At yesterday's session the convention ruled that the existing territorial rights of ten miles from cities in leagues in the National Association should be maintained regardless of intervening state lines. The subject came up in connection with a suggestion that the Western League might place a club at Kansas City, Kans. if the law permitted. This would be a violation of the rights of Kansas City, Mo., a member of the American Association, unless a stipulation could have been passed that the ten mile limit should not prevail when a state line was passed.

Chattanooga's invitation to hold the 1929 convention in Tennessee was accepted by a vote of 15 to 8, in a contest with West Baden, Ind. To have accepted the Indiana invitation it would have been necessary to amend the National Association agreement providing that the convention must be held in a city represented in minor league baseball.

The baseball men were guests of the Toronto baseball club at dinner last night with Sam McBride, mayor of Toronto, acting as toastmaster and Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis delivering the principal address.

Rink Softball Teams Have Successful Season

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, December 7. — The softball season is now a memory, and a pleasant one to both players and fans. While the crowds were not quite up to last year's record, nevertheless, in the main the attendance was good and never since the softball league was organized was there better feeling amon gthe teams and enthusiasm never went beyond its proper bounds. Three new teams entered the league, and all made friends during the season and while there are regrets that Selwyn and Douro dropped out this year, it is hoped that it is a temporary absence, and that next season will see them back, stronger than ever.

The one serious accident was the injury to Reg Dyer's finger on November 23, and which resulted in blood poisoning. This was a matter of the deepest regret to one and all who followed the games or played in any of the teams.

Windsor Bulldogs Seek New Goalie—Mitchell Won't Rest Until He Can Conquer Olympics

WINDSOR, December 7. — Windsor Bulldogs are having a lay-off for one full week and will not be called into action again until they face the Kitchener Flying Dutchmen here next Monday night. The club is taking advantage of the intervening time by making efforts to bolster up the squad.

"We will make whatever changes are necessary to get a winning team," Manager Herb Mitchell declared this morning. "Regardless of how many changes we must make, or what it will cost, we won't be satisfied until we have a club that can whip the Detroit Olympics. The fans can rest assured that our ambition is to beat the Detroiters, and that we will leave no stone unturned in the effort."

To-day the Bulldog skipper is burning up the wires in an attempt to land a goal-tender of major league calibre. He is just as disappointed as any fan that Abby Cox has failed to show the class that made him a star with Springfield. Mitchell hopes to have an internationally-famous net-minder between the posts for Monday's game.

STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE

You'd be FIRED

If you were a barber and used an unstropped blade

IN every barber shop in the world, since shaving first began, every barber has stropped his blades before each shave he gave. That is because after the first shave no blade that has not been properly stropped is in fit condition to touch your face. It is absolutely essential that the rough, jagged needle points of the cutting edge be smoothed out and realigned.

You can do this in a jiffy with the improved Valet AutoStrop Razor—the only razor with an automatic stropping device which quickly sharpens the blade without removing from the holder.

But that's not its only advantage. Twenty-one years of research and the expenditure of over $1,000,000 have resulted in many distinctive improvements which make this really different razor even better than before.

With the new Valetite-processed blades it is a marvel of shaving ease. Try the new Valet AutoStrop Razor. You'll quickly learn to like it. And never again, as long as you live, will you shave with an unstropped blade.

HIGH SCHOOL HOLDS BANQUET

Athletic Activities for Fall Term Are Brought to Close in Omemee.

"BLUE" WINS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, December 7. — The annual banquet of the Omemee High School was held in the school on Friday evening. This feast marked the close of athletic activities for the Fall term. There has been competition between the "Gold" and "Blue," but the "Blue" won out by a small margin.

Sharp at six o'clock, the guests, Reeve Southworth and Mrs. Southworth, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sherin, Dr. G. N. and Mrs. Earle, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kells, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lamb, Miss M. Faulkner, and Mrs. Stalter, were invited by Miss Ross, the Principal, and Mr. Stalter, the assistant Principal, to be seated with the pupils at a well laden banquet table. The tables were prettily decorated with flowers, and the place cards were artistically drawn by the art class, while a unique favor was placed at each plate. When full justice had been done of the many good things, the following program was placed in the hands of the chairman, H. Lamb: Community singing, chairman's remarks, solo, Eleanor Sherin; O.H.S. quartette; instrumental, Audrey Weir; community singing; presentation of Shield, by Dr. Earle to Ruth Jones and Russell Williamson, who won the highest honor on field day; presentation of medals by Milton Sherin to Maggie McQuade and Bill Stephenson who obtained second honors on Field day; reading, Arthur Williamson; contest explained by Miss Ross; speeches by Reeve L. A. Southworth, Mr. Stalter and Mr. Kells; instrumental, Vedra Endicott; contest explained by Eleanor Kells; O.H.S. Quartette; Community singing; solo, Eleanor Sherin; contest explained by Christina Connell; contest explained by Gordon Marshall.

Each speaker congratulated Miss Ross and Mr. Stalter on the excellent showing the school had made in the past year. At the conclusion of the program an hour was spent in lively games and all went home voting the banquet of 1928 as the best yet.

CALLAHAN TO ENTER BUSINESS IN HOME TOWN

Sears, His Manager, Advises Champion To Abdicate For Health's Sake.

NEEDS LONG REST.

Callahan Abandons Good Title.

Matches in Giving Up

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—Mushy Callahan, world's junior welterweight champion, has retired from the ring, and will take up a business career in his home of Los Angeles, Cal.

This announcement was authorized to be made by Eddie Sears, who has acted as manager of the clever Jewish lad since his first professional appearance.

Behind Callahan's abdication is the story of a prize fight manager who thought more of his man than he did of money. Sears persuaded Callahan to hang up his gloves because he was convinced that the fighter had passed his peak and that he would risk physical and mental injury if he continued.

In giving up his title, Callahan abandons matches with Jimmy McLarnin and Ruby Goldstein, both of which have been sought by officials of Madison Square Garden in this city. Callahan was offered 30 per cent. to defend his championship against McLarnin here, and it was believed the bout would draw $70,000.

Were to Discuss Bout To-day

Tom McArdle, matchmaker of the Garden, expected to discuss the match with "Pop" Foster, manager of McLarnin, who is due here from Detroit to-day.

It meant $7,000 to Sears to have Callahan go through with the McLarnin match, but the manager felt that no amount of money was worth the risk that Callahan would take. In a message to New York received last night, Sears wrote:

"I have a story I would like you to have. Callahan is through.

"I made him quit. He just can't get going. I have nursed him along in the gymnasiums, and given him plenty of chance to show me something, but it is no go. He's not the boy he used to be, and I made up my mind it would be dangerous for him to continue.

"It is better for him to give it up while he is all together. He is not punch drunk, and he hasn't any more marks than he had when you saw him last.

"The kid has nothing to regret. He has $50,000 and a couple of nice homes in Los Angeles, and he's pretty smart. He will open up a cigar stand or something out there and he'll be O.K.

Hockey is no mollycoddle game and those at meeting were wise when they considered the subject of seeing that players injured in the games did not suffer financially. Almost every day reports come in of injuries suffered by players in professional hockey and although amateur hockey is not played in the same spirit as the "pro" variety and injuries are never frequent, yet there is no reason why a player injured in a game should be inconvenienced.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Yesterday the gallant struggle by which the Peterborough Seniors of 1899 reached the semi-finals by taking the round from Grindy Forrester and his Waterloo team was recorded.

We will take a retrospective glance to-day at the next round which saw Peterborough eliminated after a gruelling series with the University of Toronto. The Collegians invaded Peterborough for the first game and won by 12 goals to 9, the overconfidence of the home team being given as the chief reason for the defeat.

Loafing offside meant nothing in those days for it is explained that the Petes' forwards instead of checking back to help out their defence, loitered in Varsity territory to be ready when Hollingshead got one of his long lifts away. Unfortunately, however, for this strategy the University forwards kept the Peterborough captain so busy that he had no chance to do his specialty and Varsity ran in five goals in quick order and remained in front throughout.

There was a different story in the return game at Toronto on February 9, 1899, when the Petes defeated Varsity by 5 goals to 3 and every Peterborough player and supporter maintained that if the visitors had been given an even break in the matter of refereeing and goal umpiring the round would have been snatched from the Collegians. It is declared to this day by those who remember the game that Varsity were allowed one goal on an obvious offside and awarded another on a shot that did not go between the posts.

In addition the Peterborough team got a rough passage for The Examiner of the following day complained that "when Peterborough went on the ice and scored the first two goals Varsity began to "rough it" in earnest, adopting a mean style of play which resulted in a number of the Peterboroughs being hurt. Belleghem had his head gashed and Roger Davidson's nose was broken and his shoulder dislocated. If Wasson were not laid out cold it wasn't the fault of Varsity as every time the puck came near the goal they took advantage of the opportunity to knock him out."

Peterborough led at half time by 3 goals to 2 and battling fiercely in the second half ran in two goals tieing the score on the round. Then with two minutes to play there was a fierce scrimmage in front of the Peterborough goal during which the Toronto goal umpire's hand went up to signal a score. The Examiner's report says: "Fully 50 Toronto people who were in the vicinity are prepared to make affidavit that the puck never went through" but anyway the goal was counted and it put Peterborough out of the running, even although the Toronto Globe declared: "The visitors won on their merits and it was only by the hardest kind of luck that they did not win out in the round."

It is recorded that Secretary F. D. Kerr remained over in Toronto to secure affidavits in regard to the disputed goal but the protest was eventually thrown out and the Petes retired for the season.

The line up:

Peterborough — Goal, Wasson; point, Reynolds; cover, Hollingshead; forwards, King, Crossley, Davidson, Belleghem.

Varsity—Goal, Waldie; point, Mackenzie; cover, Darling; forwards, Small, Broder, Shepherd, Wright.

Referee—Gauthier, Osgoode Hall.

An interesting feature of the game in Toronto was the fact that Hollingshead twice lost the puck in lifting it into the bunting with which the roof of the rink was draped.

DUNDEE BEATEN IN LEGAL FIGHT

Loses Appeal in Suit For $10,000 Purse For Boxing "Pinkie" Mitchell.

CHICAGO, December 7. — Joe Dundee, of Baltimore, Maryland, the world's welterweight champion yesterday lost a year old fight to collect $10,000 for boxing Pinkie Mitchell in Milwaukee on August 11, 1927.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the findings of Federal Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger of Milwaukee, who dismissed the suit which Dundee filed in the United States District Court in Milwaukee.

Dundee was guaranteed $10,000 for meeting Mitchell, but he and the challenger were tossed out of the ring by the referee on the grounds that neither was trying. Max Waxman, Dundee's manager, sued the Wisconsin Boxing Club, promoter of the contest, when it refused to pay the guarantee.

Judge Evan A. Evans wrote an opinion dissenting from that of the majority, Judges George T. Page and A. B. Anderson. Judge Evans held that there was cause for action in the allegations in the bill that Victor Manhart, secretary of the organization staging the fight, and also a member of the State Boxing Commission, had "wrongfully influenced and induced the referee to call off the bout."

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"KIT CARSON" IS FILM EPIC.

Fred Thomas Does Two Chapters in Life Book of Scout.

Spectacular backgrounds, mass movements of whites and Indians, struggles between trappers and the red men, with Fred Thomson and his white horse, Silver King, at their best, combine to make "Kit Carson" one of the outstanding pictures of the season. Carson's life was a series of thrills and Mr. Thompson has skilfully chosen many of them in building up a remarkably dramatic story for his Paramount special which opened last night at the Regent Theatre.

Two pleasing love stories are threaded into the drama—one with a pretty Indian girl, and the other with a Spanish woman. This latter role is played by Nora Lane, who first leaped into prominence in "Jesse James," and later added to her laurels in "The Pioneer Scout." The Indian girl (a newcomer) is Dorothy Janis.

Old William Courtright, who portrays his now famous lovable character, takes care of the sombre moments of the film. And Raymond Turner as "Smoky" furnishes plenty of comedy relief. Raoul Paoli as the French-Canadian trapper and rival of Kit Carson, does an admirable piece of work.

The film version of the two romantic episodes in the life of this country's famous Indian scout and military leader is authentically done, the intensive research work undergone by Mr. Thompson in setting it to the screen, being manifested realistically. It compares favorably with any of the big Western specials produced by any film company in recent years. It's a Paramount picture.

COMING MONDAY.

DANGER TO GIRLS IS SUBJECT OF NEW FILM.

With the growing independence of the modern girl, the number of girls reported missing has increased to an alarming extent. More than 75,000 girls were reported missing during the past year.

In "The Port of Missing Girls," an eight-reel sensational film production coming on Monday to the Regent Theatre, the dangers that beset young girls who run away from home, are graphically depicted. Barbara Bedford has the leading role as the rich young college girl who runs away from home, and the principal male role is interpreted by Malcolm McGregor. The picture was directed by Irving Cummings.

AT THE CAPITOL.

CLARA BOW IN "THE FLEET'S IN."

The girl who made such a name for herself in the "It" picture, is the heroine of "The Fleet's In," a picture with a decidedly different flavor to the ordinary run of features. It is seldom that producers consider the potentialities for romance and fun that are waiting on every hand, in the lives of ordinary, humdrum people. Mary Pickford is one of the stars who has taken such characters and made them famous, and it is interesting to note that when she essayed a leap into high life, her pictures fell flat. Many of the major productions of the silver sheet have centred about incidents in the careers of extremely prosaic folk.

So "The Fleet's In," deals with the love affairs of a very ordinary sailor and his girl, and it is a very entertaining picture. Much of the fun lies in the sub-titles, which have an amusing flavor, and seem to chime in beautifully with the action and atmosphere of the play.

Clara Bow is Peachy Deane, hostess at a sailors' dance hall on the Pacific Coast. When the fleet comes in at San Francisco, Peachy reaps much hard-won money by dancing with the flat-footed gobs. Two of the sailors fall hard for the peppy red-head. Eddie Briggs and "Searchlight" Doyle are a great pair, played by James Hall and Jack Oakes, and they have a series of whirlwind adventures with the zippy young lady who has great scope in this picture for her characteristic mannerisms.

Peachy makes the mistake of attributing very high ideals to Eddie Briggs, when he interferes in a fight at the dance hall, after he has paid another sailor to insult her, so that he may appear very gallant in the ensuing rescue. Peachy thinks him a "regular" fellow, and lets him walk home with her. One of the funniest bits is the scene where her mother awakens from sleep, and comes out to entertain him with pictures from the family album.

After Peachy has discovered that Eddie isn't quite so "regular" as she imagined, and after they have parted in anger, and he has dodged in time the heavy statue she flings down the stairs to speed his going, he has a change of heart, and sends her a repentant note. Then comes another swift-moving episode in the dance hall, and a police court case in which Eddie stands the risk of being court-martialled. However, Peachy, who loves him very madly, appears, and blackens her own character in order to save him. The production ends with the usual romantic and satisfactory finals.

A re-issue of one of Charlie Chaplin's comedies, "The Rink," shows the comedian in his usual line of fun-making, and gets plenty of laughs.

STRUCK The Right Note

It was a happy thought, our Christmas Club plan to aid buyers of small musical instruments for Christmas. It certainly appears to have struck the right note, judging by the immediate inquiry which followed our announcement.

GREENE'S CHRISTMAS CLUB

The suggestion of giving the young person who is interested in music a correct start with an instrument that will produce real music, is certainly opportune. At our Store, which specializes in string, reed and brass instruments, there is a splendid choice, and unquestionably of highest grade.

The easy terms to Club members constitute the principal attraction for immediate buying. Quality and price are absolutely right on every instrument, and as a Christmas aid to our Club members, we make it so easy to purchase that the payments will scarcely be felt. LUXURIES OF ANCIENT GREECE ARE BEING DUG UP AT OLYNTHUS

Bath Tubs and Vanity Boxes Found in City, Sacked in 348 B.C.

RICH HOMES UNEARTHED.

Art Formerly Classed as Roman Was Grecian By Hundreds of Years.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The discovery and excavation of the site of Olynthers, a once powerful Greek city including the unearthing of the ruins of once palatial homes and showing a high degree of material culture, with bathtubs and dorines, or vanity boxes, was described recently by Dr. David Moore Robinson of Johns Hopkins University, at the newly formed Brooklyn Chapter of the Archaeological Institute of America in Brooklyn Museum.

Dr. Robinson said that the excavations of his party among the ruins of Olynthus had already been acclaimed by scientists and classical students for several unusual contributions. These included, he declared, large vases in which grain was kept, as tall as fifteen feet, fine busts in marble and terra cotta of the period of Phidias; magnificent plates, bowls and other objects ornamented with highly-wrought art work; coins of many periods, cities and countries accumulated by the merchants of Olynthus; weapons, objects of personal and family usage; and a pair of bronze epaulets worn by some Greek general, now estimated to be worth $200,000 because of their fine workmanship.

City Captured in 348 B. C.

But the most important discovery, according to Dr. Robinson, is the city of Olynthus itself, situated on the Macedonian plains in Northern Greece. With once a population of 50,000, it was the leader of the famed Chalcidic League of surrounding towns which precipitated the Pelonesian War. A century later its strong walls and warlike inhabitants were a barrier to the plans of Philip of Mecedon, father of Alexander the Great, to conquer all Greece. He captured Olynthus finally in 348 B. C., destroyed the city and dispersed its people. Broken columns and scattered personal objects indicated to the excavators the haste and fear in which the population had fled.

The unearthing of the remnants of the city's walls, Dr. Robinson said, now not more than 10 per cent complete, give a perfect plan view of one of the few complete Greek cities discovered. Besides the splendid homes, having as many as a dozen rooms on each floor, there was a large civic centre flanked by pits in which grain was stored, a barracks for troops, shops, a mint and a terra cotta factory, the molds of which are still usable.

"As the result of these discoveries," Dr. Robinson said, "we've got to change our opinions regarding some of the developments credited to the Romans. We've learned at last that the Greeks lived in as high a degree of splendor within their luxurious homes in the fourth and fifth centuries B. C. as the Romans did under their emperors after the Christian era. We found forms of art that were formerly classed as Roman to have existed in Greece hundreds of years earlier. Then the bathtub, always regarded as a Roman innovation of comfort and civilization, is now shown to have been merely borrowed from the Greeks, whom they subjugated."

Tubs Finely Decorated.

Bathtubs, finely made and ornamented, were numerous in Olynthus and the expedition dug up several wholly intact. They are shaped like the present American model, though with one sloping end cut off. A man could sit in one comfortably while his slaves doused him from buckets, shower-fashion.

RUSSELL HOTEL IS DEMOLISHED

Last Vestige of Historic Hostelry Disappears at Ottawa.

CENTRE OF CHIVALRY

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 6 (By The Canadian Press).—The plans for an impressive approach to the Parliament buildings called for the razing of the Russell Hotel. The other day after the falling of its great chimney had erased the last vestige of the famous old building from the landscape, a local newspaper published an editorial in part as follows:

"No building in Ottawa, and few in all of Canada, saw more of the making of our history. Under its roof the Fathers of Confederation held many of the conferences and secret discussions that helped bring about Union. It was from the Russell that George Brown, astounded and dismayed by the sight of the vast buildings being erected on the Hill, wrote to John A. Macdonald in a fine frenzy:

'Never mind expense. Go ahead. Ruin the country. Stop at nothing. Why not fountains and parks and gardens?'

'And the day upon which Canada was born, that was a great day for the Russell! All the statesmanship and the chivalry and beauty of old Canada were centred here on that historic date. It is recorded in old newspapers of Ottawa how all the leading actors in the great drama 'reached the Capital and registered at the Russell on Sunday, June 30, a hot and sultry day.' Viscount Monck, who was to be sworn in as Governor-General; John A. Macdonald and Cartier; all the men who were to be sworn in as Cabinet Ministers or Lieutenant Governors of the provinces; all the great and near-great from all over the land who had come to see the pageantry of Confederation, slept that night at the Russell.

Cabinets Made.

"And in after years, during all the stirring and memorable times that followed Confederation, the Russell roof sheltered most of the leading actors in our history. Cabinets were made and unmade within its walls political reputations heightened or blasted, decisions taken that affected the course of the whole nation. Sir John A. Macdonald lived there off and on, and so did Sir John Thompson. It was in a room of the Russell that Goldwin wrote of Sir John A., with whom he was on fairly good terms:

'He decidedly does not love Spartans, and he is credited with saying that the perfection of ministry is twelve men, each of whom, if you liked, you could put into the penitentiary.'

"It was in the Russell, too, that Mowat is said to have penned some of the pages of his book on Job, which he destroyed in his later years because he thought it unworthy of publication; in the Russell that D'Arcy McGee wrote some of his last poems.

"And celebrities other than politicians came there. It was from the Russell that the captains of the C. P. R. carried on their last desperate negotiations with Sir John A. Macdonald, and the failure of which might have changed the course of Canada for at least half a century. For days on end, while Sir John hesitated, and while Parliament was rife with intrigue and suspicion, the lobbies of the Russell were the real centre of the battle that was being waged; and it was in a room of the Russell that the victory was finally celebrated with champagne galore, after the fashion of those spacious days.

"In later years, in what somebody has called the 'mauve nineties' the Russell became the centre of Ottawa's social as well as of its political life. There the beauty and grace of the Capital met to dine and sup and dance; there stayed great actors, politicians, churchmen, financiers; and, on one occasion, the Russell even housed the mighty John L. Sullivan. They were brave and mellow years."

CHEESE BOX

ion in a field adjoining the Maple Leaf factory. A number of men interested in nthe new cheese making industry happened to meet at this picnic and after a discussion, proposed to organize a public meeting with a view of promoting the interests of the cheese business. This meeting was held in Ingersoll on the 31st of July and the first of August of that year, 1867, and it was, so far as I know, the first public meeting ever held in Canada to promote the dairying industry in any of its branches, and out of that meeting grew the dairymen's associations of Ontario. I may be permitted to state that my personal interest in this matter arises from the fact that I was present at the picnic and have some very distinct pictures in my mind of what I saw on that occasion.

Grading System

"I think," said the speaker, "that the most important event in the cheese industry was the inauguration of the grading system. I do believe that the grading system has done a great deal more than some of you realize. The good of grading is exemplified in Empire trade, when our gradings are received without question by our importers. The progress during the past year in the cheese industry has been truly remarkable."

"I would like to say something about the outlook for the cheese industry. Although Canadian cheese tops the market, the average price of our cheese has been about 1½ per cent. above that of our chief competitor, New Zealand. I don't think that the New Zealand cheese can compete with the best Canadian cheese. There is something lacking in their product. There is a demand in the Old Country for good, full bodied and full flavored cheese, and there is our opportunity to make a few more cents a pound, as quality, not quantity, counts. No cheese can drive the Canadian cheese out of the market as long as you make a better cheese than that of other countries. We needn't be afraid of any competition under the sun if we continue the quality we have so far had."

Able to Compete

"It is often said that it is difficult for Canada to compete with New Zealand, as it is easier to produce milk over there. I take exception to this. In the first place New Zealand land costs about two or three times as much as the land here does, and the milk is produced under difficult conditions in the winter time. I question very much if the New Zealand farmer gets more in eleven months' growth than you do in your few months of growth, on account of the rapid growth in this country. The cost of manufacturing and marketing is a great deal more in New Zealand than in Canada.

"In closing, the Canadian farmer gets about three cents more per pound for his product in the Old Country than does the New Zealand farmer. I believe that the market is expanding. It is going on. The Canadian cheese comes nearer to meeting the standard of English and Scotch needs than any other cheese in the world."

Concluding Speeches

The two concluding speeches were short. Mr. Elliott stated that the cheesemakers could never produce first-class cheese unless they could get first-class milk. "I think that the patrons realize this," he said. "I think that the time has come in Canada when the farmers are going to take their proper place. The farm is coming into its own. The cheesemakers deserve the thanks of this district."

"We can follow the example of the cheesemakers' patron, King David of Israel, the best way that we can, and what cannot you do in your districts by trying to instill into the minds of your patrons the thought that you and they will get more remuneration from milk, proper milk."

"Production is falling off in cheese. But Canada is progressing rapidly. Never has there been more business done than now. The population of the country in 1867 was 3,500,000; in 1891, 4,800,000; in 1921, 8,800,000, and 1928, 9,700,000. Nevertheless we are not progressing in the making of cheese. We have purchased enough commodities from the United States in the last ten years to pay off the national debt! Get out and ask your farmers to keep more cows. Let us unitedly raise our voices and influence them in doing this."

"My experience," stated J. P. Newman, "is that the cheesemakers in any district are closer to the patrons and able to put more truth of the difficulties besetting them into their minds than anybody."

SECURITY

He does not change, though centuries have crushed
Kings and their mighty kingdoms into dust,
The Holy Child that gentle Mary hushed
Remains the deathless Symbol of our trust.

He does not change, though prophets false arise
Acclaiming idols in each passing age,
That Child who slept to Mary's lullabies
Remains the God of peasant and of sage.

He does not change, though from our days depart
High dreams and laughter; even love may go.
He is a sweetness nestled in each heart,
The only changeless beauty that we know.

Harvey Johnson Receives Serious Injuries in Accident Near Brantford.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—Harvey Johnson, Peterborough, is lying in Brantford General Hospital, suffering from serious injuries received while walking on the Hamilton and Brantford highway yesterday afternoon, near Alberton. Hamilton officers and provincial police are investigating the accident. The report is that Johnson was walking on the highway when a truck following east and a car going west met just as they passed Johnson, who was walking with another man at the time. The truck driver claimed that he crowded over towards the oncoming as much as he dared but failed to clear the pedestrian, who was struck by the stake body. The Brantford ambulance was called and the injured man was removed to the local hospital suffering, it is feared, from a fractured skull. At noon today he was still unconscious.

COUNTY BRIDGES ARE INSPECTED

NO IMMEDIATE REPAIRS ARE NECESSARY AT YOUNG'S POINT FINDING OF COUNTY ENGINEER

A. C. Connor Is Instructed To Obtain Prices For January Session of Council.

SIDEWALK ON BRIDGE.

Reeve Rye Criticized Legislation Admitting Indigent Patients Into Hospitals.

The county bridge at Young's Point did not present to A. C. Connor, the county's engineer, any evidence of immediate need of repair when he examined it on Friday morning.

"I didn't see anything immediately wrong with it," he said. "The centre pier may have spread a little, but I don't consider it dangerous. It should be watched to see that nothing does materialize, and at low water the stones be pointed up."

Mr Connor made his report to the County Council after an inspection visit accompanied by Reeve Parker, chairman of the Roads and Bridges committee, and several other members of the council.

They also examined the Buckhorn bridge along one side of which Mr. Parker urged the council to lay a sidewalk and hand rail for pedestrians. The piers of the bridge are two feet wider than the present vehicular deck, and Mr. Parker suggested that the sidewalk might be laid on these projections for the safety of people walking across the bridge. It would also protect them from mud splashed by passing automobiles.

Cost Estimated at $1,000

Mr. Connor found the projecting part of the piers two narrow for a sidewalk, but he proposed that bolt brackets be used providing for a walk slightly more than three feet wide. It would be supported by the abutments and the brackets. A rough estimate of the most was $1,000 covering brackets, railing, flooring. The bridge is 382 feet long.

The engineer was instructed to obtain prices for the proposed work and report at the January session. The motion was made by Reeve Middleton, seconded by Reeve Clark. Mr. Connor returned to Toronto last night.

The council gave to Harvey township $50, half the extra cost of the repairing of the boundary road between Harvey and Verulam townships. It had cost more than $400, contributed in four equal sums by Peterborough and Victoria counties and Harvey and Verulam townships

"I am sorry to say that the Department did not send one dollar on the boundary road this year," Reeve Parker added.

"They made a good job of that road," John Clark remarked. "It looks to be almost permanent."

Reeve Leahy of Douro was granted $100 to be spent on the Lakefield road on the east side of the river between Nassau and Lakefield.

"When the deputation waits upon the Minister of Railways and Canals we might remind them of the need of widening the bridges over the Trent Canal," Reeve Tanner, of Lakefield, suggested

Mr. Rye's Proposal

The legislation relating to the admission of indigent patients into hospitals was criticized by Mr. Raye. "We should ask the Legislature to give us the same privilege as that which Hamilton and Toronto obtained whereby an indigent patient is admitted to a public hospital only upon the order of the municipality's indigent officer. Every municipality in the province should have the same course. Persons should not be admitted to hospitals as indigents without some authority. We should get something in the Act that defines an indigent patient. As it is now with municipalities it is a case of "heads I win, tails, you lose."

Warden Smithson—"An indigent patient is one who can stick the county."

"Duke of Henley" Wins Honors At Hamilton

"Duke of Henley" pround aristocrat of the Persian (cat) race, returned to his owner, Mrs. J. J. Craig of this city, having covered himself with glory at the Hamilton Persian Society show, held on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Various ribbons and a neat little silver trophy totalled his winnings. Being decidedly democratic in his views, the royal fellow is content to call a crate a crate—the one in which he made the trip to Hamliton and return, and he is feeling quite himself again after the visit. His prizes include a first in the Blue male, open class; a first among the winners and the silver cup together with a large rosette for Best Opposite.

CONDITION IS SATISFACTORY

His Majesty Had Several Hours of Refreshing Sleep After Disturbed Day.

PRINCE AT CAIRO.

LONDON, December 8 (Canadian Press). — Despite the fact that King George's temperature was stated to be up this morning, there were indications in the official bulletin that might be regarded as satisfactory.

The physicians' report indicated that the King had several hours of refreshing sleep after a disturbed day which he passed yesterday, and apparently held the ground which he had previously gained.

This morning was the coldest of winter so far, but the nip in the air seemed only to have the effect of stimulating the gathering of one of the largest weekday crowds which has yet assembled outside Buckingham Palace to await the official bulletin.

Among the spectators were many groups of ex-service men who had come to London for the birthday anniversary of "Toc H," the famous ex-service men's organization.

Important Feature.

Palace circles were said to regard the physicians' statement that the King's general condition remained unchanged as the most important feature of the bulletin. The King's temperature, it was understood, had not gone higher, the doctors' phrase being interpreted as indicating that it was still subject to variation.

Further Consultation

All five physicians who have been attending King George returned to Buckingham Palace this afternoon and held a further consultation on His Majesty's condition.

It was understood the purpose of the consultation was to make a further review of the entire case. Those present were, Sir Stanley Hewett, Lord Dawson of Penn, Sir Humphery Rolleston, Sir E. Farquhar Buzzard, and Dr. H. Graham Hodgson, X-ray specialist.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 8 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales, en route to the bedside of his father, arrived in Cairo early this morning accompanied by Lord Lloyd, British High Commissioner for Egypt, who had travelled with the Prince from Suez, where he left the cruiser Enterprise.

At the station there was an atmosphere of sympathy for the bronzed but tired-looking young heir to the British throne. It was an unusually cold and cheerless day, with rain threatening.

Wanderer Expulsed From Old Peoples' Homes, Takes Lives Of Three Persons In Revenge

VANBUREN, Arkansas, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Posses and bloodhounds searched to-day for an aged wanderer who police believed took three lives in payment for his expulsion from the Crawford County Infirmary.

Clifford Deffenbaugh, 44, superintendent of the Infirmary; Mrs. Deffenbaugh, 24; and John Nicholson, 60, inmate, were shot to death last night as they sat in their living room with two children.

Before Mrs. Deffenbaugh died she said to officers, "I believe Howell did the shooting."

Two posses obtained bloodhounds and set out on a trail they hoped would lead to a man known as "Bill" Howell, who Deffenbaugh discharged from the Infirmary this week following reports that he refused to do work required of all able inmates.

DAILY PROGRAM IS OUTLINED TO INSURANCE MEN

A. D. Anderson, of Toronto, Addresses Life Underwriters' Association at Annual Meeting.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

John I. Allan, of Prudential Life Company, Is New Head of Local Organization.

Outlining to the assembled insurance men a program for their daily work that might well fit into the everyday life of any business man, A. D. Anderson, of Toronto, spoke at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Underwriters' Association, held last night in the Empress Hotel, following a most heartily approved banquet. The reception of Secretary J. W. Kenmure's report, and the election of officers to carry on the work of the association for another year, filled with interest, two hours or more, and from it all, the fifty or more insurance men from many parts of the district could not but have gained.

Presiding over last night's meeting was the retiring president, H. B. Matthews, of Peterborough, who spoke briefly to welcome the large turn-out of men and to express his appreciation of the co-operation and support accorded him during his tenure of office. The election of officers, held at the conclusion of the meeting resulted as follows:

President, John I. Allen, Prudential Life Company; vice-president, D. M. Bissell, Canada Life; secretary-treasurer, J. R.McGerrigle, London Life; executive committee—J. F. H. Wallace, Sun Life Compang; E. Sackville, Manufacturers' Life Co.; F. L. Wray, Metropalitan Life; I. P. McNabb, Dominion Life; H. Gillespie, Confederation Life; and J. W. Kenmure, Imperial Life.

Speaking from a wealth of personal experience in the many phases of insurance underwriting, Mr. Anderson chose as his subject, "The Budgeting of a Program," and after expressing his pleasure at this, his first visit to the city, said:

"Every man should have some kind of a program or a charter and obligation in his life, and that objective should be reasonably attainable.

"Many of us, at times, are given to castle building, but a wish that has no planning for its realization is heldom helpful. A dozen ideas never come to anything unless we do something about them.

"Every insurance man should organize his life on a success basis, for permanent success is not due to luck. He must follow a consecutive line of action. All insurance men do not describe their successes according to the same formula, but everyone of them has organized and has worked 'like a nigger' to obtain his objective.

"The first essential for an insurance man, is that he become a member of his local underwriters' association.

"In this way he becomes known to life insurance men and gets far more out of this active association with others. He should attend the association meetings if he is to gain by it, and retain his membership from year to year."

"A second plank in a man's platform should be the reading of a reasonable amount of literature on life insurance in its various phases, so that he may keep abreast of what is going on in his field.

"A third plank is that a man should organize his time on a basis of work, not on a basis of loafing, and I cannot understand a man making ten calls a day, five days a week and not getting his share of the business."

The speaker went on to discuss the plans of eminently successful insurance men, showing that an early start, with a proper mental attitude, ready to follow a schedule worked out before closing time the day before, counts far more than working at random. One man had also found that he could get results from meeting his prospects in their own homes, during the evening.

Mr. Anderson also dwelt on the

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSIONER TO SOUTH AFRICA BANQUETED BY LOCAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

C. R. Stevens Describes Africa and African Problems To Members.

TOURING CANADA.

"Process of Wakening Up Africa Came By Overcoming Tsetse Fly."

His immense and brooding spirit
Shall quicken and control,
Living, he was the land,
Dead, he was its soul."

So Cecil Rhodes and his relation to Africa was described by C. R. Stevens, Canadian Trade Commissioner to South Africa, in his speech "Africa and African Problems" to the Chamber of Commerce at the Empress Hotel last evening. Mr. Stevens spoke with an eloquence and lucidity of speech on a subject that he so thoroughly knew and was so sympathetic with as to make it a revelation in entertainment and new knowledge to his audience.

Mr. Stevens, who is back in Canada in an official capacity, that of discussing means of improving the trade of some 400 Canadian manufacturers now doing business said in beginning that he desired to give his listeners some idea of the background of present conditions in Africa.

"A man describing Africa after a six months' visit would say that it was a very dry country with insufficient rainfall and too many politicians, the number of politicians being inversely proportionate to the amount of rainfall. He would say further that it contained two charming but obstinate races, the English and the Dutch, which were always aggressive and always rubbing each other the wrong way; and that diamonds are found in such unlimited quantities that the diamond market is flooded. But he could not tell much of the actual background and history of the country.

"Africa was settled by Dutch and the French Hugenots leaving their native land in much the same manner as the Pilgrim Fathers first settled in America The Dutch first settled on the Island of Java and then retired to the Cape with their numerous Malay slaves. The British followed and the cape became known as the Tavern of the Seas, and the Tavern of the Seas it still remains, being on the cross roads of boats plying the two oceans.

Trouble Started in 1866.

"The real history of the squabbles between the white and black races began about 1866 and lasted until the end of the century. On almost every occasion when the black menace arose the two nations of whites immediately forgot their differences and fought shoulder to shoulder against the common black enemy. White civilization was saved by the unselfish aid of British soldiers who were sent out by the British Government merely to protect the handful of hardy white settlers from massacre. Africa owes much to Britain.

"From 1875 the modern history of Africa began with the appearance of Cecil Rhodes. No country and no continent embraces the chaarcter and works of one man so much as Africa does Cecil Rhodes. The imprint of his hand is left everywhere and he bestrode the continent like a colossus. He won control of the mineral wealth and began its gigantic production; he cemented the numerous warring factions into two political camps of a constructive nature; he, I must say, often used unscrupulous methods to gain his ends, but they all worked out for the benefit of the country.

Presence Felt Everywhere.

"Rhodes still looms over South Africa and his presence still felt everywhere. The history of South Africa is the life of Rhodes and he even marked out a great course of procedure for transactions between the whites and the blacks. There is only one Canadian, Sir William Van Horne, who can in any way be compared to him, in intense vigor and foresight. Both were Empire builders, but Rhodes had immeasurably bigger problems to face and he has left his mark on Africa.

"There is a statue in Cape Town showing Rhodes waving his hat to the north, and beneath is written this 'Your hinterland is there.' It must be remembered that South Africa is a peninsula and the rivers are necessarily short and the rainfall sparse. To the north lie the great rich plains of Rhodesia, with rich red soil, the Congo basin, one of the rich-

NO PRAYERS FOR KING'S HEALTH

Laws of Manitoba Limit Religious Observances in Public Schools.

PLAN NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 8.—(Special to The Examiner).—Prayers for the recovery of the king will not be offered in Winnipeg public schools.

The school laws of Manitoba limit religious observances in the public schools to certain prescribed Biblical passages, one set prayer and the Lord's Prayer. In the opinion of school board officials this law it not elastic enough to permit the holding of formal prayers for the sovereign's health and new arrangements are being made for observances similar to those which have taken place in schools in the eastern provinces. The practice as to religious exercises in the public schools is covered by the following sections of the Public Schools Act.

247—"Religious exercises in the public schools shall be conducted according to the regulations of the Advisory Board. The time for such religious exercises shall be just before the closing hour in the afternoon. In case the parent or guardian of any pupil notifies the teacher that he does not wish such pupil to attend such religious exercises, then such pupil shall be dismissed before such religious exercises take place."

The one set prayer referred to does not contain any reference to the Royal family.

DEPUTATION WILL GO TO CAPITAL CITY

Councils To Wait On Department Relative to Reconstruction of Chemong Lake Bridge.

The Peterborough County Council having decided to send a deputation to Ottawa relative to the reconstruction of the Chemong Lake bridge, waited on a special meeting of the City Council called at 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The County Councillors requested that the City Council and Chamber of Commerce co-operate in the matter, and Ald. Greene and Stocker moved that the request be acquiesced in, and that the council go with the county deputation to Ottawa. This was approved.

The county councillors present yesterday included Warden M. Smithson, Councillors H. B. Rye, C. S. Tanner, F. McIntyre, Middleton, Leahy, Hawthorne, Cavanagh and Breckenridge.

WELL BABIES' CLINIC RECEIVES GRANT

Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. at Meeting Makes Several Donations.

Donations of $100 to the Well Babies' Clinic and $50 to the Peterborough Health Association were made by the Otonabee Chapter I. O. D. E. at the meeting of the Chapter, held in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association, on Wednesday afternoon. The regent, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, presided.

Mention was made of the society's endeavors to further the cause of education, especially among children of ex-soldiers, by making monthly payments to families of four children, who are attending Commercial classes in order that these children may proceed with their education along these lines.

Two Burglars Shoot Doctor and His Wife

EATON, Ohio, Dec. 8 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Lora Silver, 58, was killed and her husband, Dr. Horation Silver, 55, was fatally wounded by two burglars who entered their home early to-day. Mrs. Silver was killed instantly when a bullet pierced her heart. Dr. Silver died five hours later in Dayton Hospital.

COUNTY COUNCIL BRINGS TO END FINAL SESSION

Warden Smithson Thanks the Members For Their Expressions of Sympathy.

REQUEST LEGISLATION.

Resolution Is Passed Opposing Daylight Saving Being Established in Province.

At the conclusion of the business of the County Council at noon to-day Warden Smithson thanked the members for their many kind expressions of sympathy and appreciation, not only during the sessions, but also during the months of his illness. He also gratefully acknowledged the obliging assistance of E. M. Elliott, county clerk and treasurer. The affairs of the county had received careful attention, a public service which was recognized by the ratepayers.

Mr. Elliott said that the December sessions were usually a time of parting as the year ended the councillors' work. If it were the wish of the ratepayers he hoped all the members would be returned next year. Since his illness last year he had more than ever appreciated the goodwill and association of the County Council.

Reeve W. H. Montgomery intimated that he might not be back next year, and he thanked his colleagues for their courtesy to him.

Request Legislation.

In accordance with Reeve Rye's contentions that the Hospital Act should be amended in regard to the admission of indigent patients into hospitals, a resolution was adopted embodying his proposals. — It was moved by Reeve John Scott and seconded by Deputy-Reeve Coons of Smith. It requests that the legislation should apply to all townships, and not simply those bordering on a "city or separated town."

The present clause of the Act reads: "Except in cases of emergency, as to which the superintendent of the hospital shall be the sole judge, no indigent person residing in a township bordering on a city or separated town shall be admitted to a hospital in such city or separated town except on an order in writing signed by the medical officer of such township."

Oppose Daylight Saving.

A resolution by Reeve Middleton, seconded by Reeve Cavanagh, petitions the Ontario Government to refuse to establish "daylight saving" as a law in this province.

"Make it as strong as you can," Fred McIntyre remarked.

Mr. Middleton explained that the movement for daylight saving legislation had been started by Chambers of Commerce.

County Council Notes.

The members of the Council who inspected the Buckhorn Bridge visited Robert Shaw, the Warden in 1914 and 0fr years the Reeve of Harvey. Mr. Shaw heartily welcomed the councillors, and recalled some of the old days when he was one of the leading men in the County Council.

W. E. Packenham, of Norwood, was appointed to the Norwood High School Board, succeeding Fred Fry.

A grant of $100 was made to Galway and Cavendish Townships to be spent on the boundary between Somerville and Galway.

The Council received a gift of a box of Havanas on Friday afternoon from A. J. Reynolds, manager of the Bank of Commerce.

Applications for the position of turnkey of the jail, which by the way is not vacant, were received by the Council this week. Whenever a turnkey is appointed the appointment is made by the Sheriff and not by the County Council.

Reeve Curtis was authorized to arrange for the rental or sale of the house in Havelock which J. I. Young has given the county.

Booze Sellers Invent Way To Loose Evidence

SUPERIOR, Wis., Dec. 8.—A new device for destroying evidence in the event of a recent raid was discovered at Carter, Wis., recently by United States agents. Concealed behind the bar of a saloon was a trap door.

Attached to the door a string ran along the full length of the bar so that it was accessible to the barkeeper at any point. A few feet directly under the trap door was a pile of scrap iron. The bottles of liquor could be placed on the floor and, by means of the string, dropped instantly on the iron below.

ROY SCLATER WINS ACTION

Damages Were Claimed As Result of Accident From Gerald Graham.

OTHER CASES HEARD.

Two King's Counsellors, F. D. Kerr and Hon. G. N. Gordon, battled all yesterday morning in the Division Court before Judge O'Connor over the case of Roy Sclater vs. Gerald Graham in which Sclater was claiming damages to the sum of $28 from Graham for expenses suffered as a result of an accident on the Lakefield road on the night of July 14th. Mr. Gordon, for the plaintiff, finally won his cases after a verbal barrage of great length had been delivered by both sides. The Judge allowed Sclater damages to the full amount.

Geraghty Case Adjourned.

The case of James Geraghty vs. the firm of Lillico and Hughes was adjourned for the purpose of consulting further the point of law that arose. James Geraghty was suing his tenants, the firm of Lillico and Hughes, for the amount of a bill for cleaning the trap in the pipe that drained the yard and the building.

It was brought out in the evidence that part of the floor of the basement was muddy owing to the water backing up from the plugged trap and these conditions existed previous to the tenancy of Lillico and Hughes. The trap was outside of the building and beneath the sidewalk. According to an agreement drawn between the tenants and the owner there were clauses stating that the tenants accepted the building as it was and agreed to keep it in first-class condition and pay for all repairs and expenses to plumbing and fixtures. But the point that arose was whether the tenant could be forced to pay for the repair of this pipe which was outside of their jurisdiction in spite of the agreement.

V. J. McElderry, K.C. appeared for the plaintiff and D. Stevenson for the defendants.

Awarded Judgment.

Thomas Flannery was given judgment for $34.95 against William H. Lytle for wages. This case was a very complicated affair and it took a great deal of cross examination by the lawyers before the facts were laid bare from the mass of evidence.

The evidence showed that Flannery was employed by Lytle to draw gravel from the pit and because Flannery was short a driver for one of his teams on several occasions a man was secured at the pit by the name of Gerald Kirn. When the work was finished Lytle paid Kirn and docked the sum from Flannery's pay. Also, Flannery was docked an hour for being late fifteen minutes in the morning at various times and the rent of a scraper which belonged to Edward Cooney and which Flannery had been using.

One Time Alcohol King of Niagara District Dies in Hamilton Hospital.

FOUR MEN HELD.

Slaying Is Said To Be Culmination of a Feud Between Rivals.

(Special to The Examiner.)

HAMILTON, Ont., December 8. — Nick Bombach, 382 Hughson street North, one time recognized as the "Alcohol King" of this district, was the victim of an assault last night, and died at two o'clock this morning in the general hospital. His skull was cracked in three places by blows from an iron automobile tire lever, and he lapsed into a coma at midnight, from which he did not rally.

Joe Boychuk, the alleged assailant of Bombach, was arrested at 5.30 o'clock to-day on Hamilton avenue. Detective Sharp received information that Boychuk was in hiding there. The slaying took place in an alley across from 208 Catherine street north. It is said to be the culmination of a feud. Both men had been involved in several court actions. Bombach was a Roumanian, 33 years old, and had lived here for many years. He was charged a few weeks ago with having illegal possesion of fire arms and was to appear before Judge Evan next Thursday.

Three men are held as material witnesses after several hours investigation. They are Peter Cole, 335 McNab street north, John Owen, 249 Bay Street north, and Mike Sarcuta, 347 Hughson street north.

The quarrel was the culmination of a card party and drinking bout lasting several hours at the home of Wm. Paskariuk, Catherine street north.

Canadian Bank Of Commerce Lays All the Facts Concerning Raid Before President Of Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 8.—(Special to Examiner).—All the facts in the case of the Mexico City branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce when ten armed policemen forcibly extracted thirteen thousand pesos from the bank's vaults on Wednesday, have been laid before President Portes Gil, it was announced by the bank's management last evening. The money was taken as a result of litigation over an account carried by the bank although no court order authorizing delivery of the funds was furnished, the bank's statement read:

"Through its management the bank has referred all the facts to President of the Republic asking him if he considers it expedient to open through proper channels a thorough investigation of the case. The facts of the case have also been reported to the Minister of Finance. The bank has full confidence in the justice of the President of the Republic and his Government.

LIVE STOCK JUDGING TEAM WINS SEVENTH PLACE IN COMPETITION AT OTTAWA FAIR

Harry Blewett Won First Place in Dairy Cattle Grading.

COMPETITION KEEN.

Winning Team Scored 2,505 Points Out of a Possible 3,000.

In the live stock judging at the Ottawa Winter Fair this week the Peterborough team won seventh place in the competition with fourteen county teams from Eastern Ontario. The personnel of the Peterborough team was: Elwood Dunford, R. R. 2, Lakefield; H. Blewett, Peterborough, and Maitland Forsyth, of Indian River. The individual marks of the team members were as follows: Harry Blewett, third place in dairy cattle; E. Dunford, fifth place in dairy cattle; M. Forsythe, tied for third place in swine judging.

The competition at the Fair was keener than ever. The winning team scored 2,505 marks out of 3,000. Peterborough's aggregate was 2,376.

In the grain judging competition the same team won seventh place, and the individual honors were as follows: H. Blewett, first in red clover; E. Dunford, sixth in wheat; M. Forsythe, fifth in potatoes.

The winning team in grain was Carleton County's, and Prince Edward was the winner in the live stock judging.

Mr. J. B. Nelson, local representative of the Department of Agriculture, accompanied the team, which also included Edgar Clark, of Norwood, who carried off second prize in oats in the field crop competition of thirty-five entries from all over Ontario. Mr. Clark won the same distinction last year, and the coincidence was further accentuated by the fact that the same man was the first prize winner both years.

The competition in live stock judging was confined to the fourteen counties east of and including Peterborough, all of which were represented for the first time. Thus, the fourteen teams, each of three men, brought a total of forty-two men into the contest. This large group indicates the ability and knowledge demanded of the winners. The Peterborough party returned from Ottawa on Thursday night. In addition to attending the Winter Fair this week, the young men from this county were also taken by Mr. Nelson to the Experimental Farm at Ottawa and the Ontario Government School at Kemptville. They also visited the Parliament Buildings, and thoroughly enjoyed the various features of their educational trip.

Overalls For Women Workers Gains Favor

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 7.—A few years ago it was smocks. Now it's overalls for women.

Overalls as a working costume for women in cotton mills not only are approved but suggested by one of the cotton mills of this textile city and Fall River. It is a safety measure, intended to obviate the danger of dresses catching in moving machinery. The woman workers have reacted favorably and many already have donned this working costume of denim.

FARMER PLANS AUCTION SALE

C. H. Curtis Will Sell Fifty High Grade Holstein and Jersey Cows.

FIRST IN 110 YEARS.

The first sale in 110 years on the Curtis farm between Warkworth and Norham, will be held on Wednesday, December 12th, beginning at 1.30 p.m. when fifty high grade Holstein cows and good Jerseys will be offered to the public by C. H. Curtis. The herd which is being dispersed includes twenty mature Holstein cows, six Jerseys, twenty large three year old heifers, all freshening within the next three months. A number of pure bred calves will also be auctioned.

C. H. Curtis is one of the best known farmers in Central Ontario. He has shown live stock, poultry, grain and other farm produce at the Peterborough exhibition for thirty years, and has always been a big prize winner. This long record should be a guarantee to the public of the quality of the cows which he is selling next Wednesday. J. R. Battisby is the auctioneer.

The Curtis farm was received by royal patent by the grandfather of C. H. Curtis, who as a pioneer, began its development. And the family has retained possession of it for more than a century. Few homesteads have an equal record for continuity of ownership.

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT PLAY

"Little Clod Hopper" Is Received By a Crowded House in Campbellford.

MUSICAL NUMBERS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 8 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The young people of St. John's United Church scored another success last night when they presented for the second time, "The Little Clod Hopper," to a packed house and a most appreciative audience. The play is a three-act comedy with a strong moral running through it. Last night's cast did not include the same names as the former list, but the play was equally well staged. It was the outstanding success of the first performance several months ago, that was largely responsible for the repetition of the play in the Sunday school rooms last night.

Other numbers on the program were: a piano duet by Miss Dorothy Henson and Miss Nellie Haig; a vocal solo by A. Hazell; a violin duet by Ronald and Billie Richardson, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Frank DeCarroll. As chairman for the evening, the Rev. R. C. Tait, minister of the church, expressed the appreciation of the young people to those who had assisted so willingly with the extra numbers between the acts, and for the splendid way in which the play had been patronized.

NO IMMEDIATE REPAIRS NECESSARY

Reeve Rye—"If a doctor finds a case hard to collect from, he sends the person to the hospital, and the first notice we get is from the hospital. Once such a person is in the hospital you couldn't say 'throw him out.' So the municipality has to pay, and afterward try to collect the bill from the person who was treated. Of course the doctors like to have as many patients as possible all in one place. They don't have to drive all over town making calls. And they can collect the same fees for calls in the hospital as if they had to drive here and there in the city. ..orth Monaghan gets more hospital bills than any other township, but if I asked for a charity grant here I would be laughed at. Let us draw up a resolution and send copies to the other municipalities asking them to support it."

Emergency Calls

Reeve Hawthorne of Dummer said that referring indigent patients to a special officer in cases of emergency might have serious consequences because of delay.

"Of course in urgent cases you have to act at once" Mr. Rye answered but they are so few and far between you can get over that objection."

Messrs. Hawthorne, McIntyre and Rye were appointed to prepare the resolution embodying the North Monaghan reeve's proposal.

Reeve Clark recalled the experience of a township not far from Galway which had paid a hospital bill of $700 for a young man who was supposed to be an indigent, but after he had been out of the hospital some time his friends bought him an $800 car. And many of the people who had paid the hospital bill hadn't money enough to buy even a tire of that automobile. This was a true example of abuses of the Hospital Act as applying to indigents, Mr. Clark added.

IN POLICE COURT

HAVELOCK, Dec. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—Bruce Post of Oak Lake was fined $5.00 and costs, which amounted in all to about $15.00, in police court on Friday afternoon when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, charged with assaulting James Wood of town on the 15th of November last. The assault took place in the woods in Methuen Township where Mr. Post had traps set on the Armstrong property. Mr. Wood, who is a fire ranger, lifted the traps, claiming that Post had no right to trap there. A quarrel resulted and Post struck Wood over the head with the barrel of his gun.

Alex. Elliott conducted the case for Mr. Post and Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton represented the Crown.

SHORT COURSE BEING PLANNED

Fifty Young People Gather in Millbrook Town Hall To Make Plans.

OPENS JANUARY 7.

(Examiner Correspondence).

MILLBROOK, Dec. 8.—More than fifty young people gathered in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, thus manifesting an encouraging interest in the short course in agriculture and home economics which is to be put on in Millbrook for one month, beginning January 7, 1929, under the Department of Agriculture, the agricultural representative for Durham County, J. Y. Kellough, having the matter in charge, and the meeting being called to emphasize the benefits arising from the instruction to be given when the month's school is held.

Mr. Kellough occupied the chair, and Reeve G. H. Hootan, of Cavan, was the first speaker. After some reference to the very successful short course held here when R. S. Duncan was the local representative, Mr. Hootan spoke emphatically of his personal belief in the increased efficiency certain to result from taking the lectures, and mentioned the fact that he had been one of a deputation waiting upon Premier Ferguson the previous week, at Toronto, when the assurance was given that Cavan holds a premier place among the townships of Ontario to-day. (Applause). He also considered that Durham County's exhibit at the Royal Winter Fair this season was of outstanding excellence.

Reeve Hootan closed his remarks by promising a willingness to help, and urging that the young men and women take hold with enthusiasm of this fine opportunity to advance knowledge and efficiency; regular attendance at the lectures, and the benefits of the social intercourse which the classes would make possible were points stressed before he sat down.

Deputy-Reeve R. J. McKnight was next called upon, and stated he believed the short course would be decidedly helpful. He had been a member of the initial venture of this kind, put on here in 1914, under R. S. Duncan's leadership, andu had reaped material benefit from it ever since. The co-operation of the local branch of the Women's Institute was suggested as a good means of securing a large class of girls, and Mr. Kellough gave assurance that the Institutes within ten miles of Millbrook had all been written to asking their help in this matter.

PAPER MILL MAY RE-OPEN

Campbellford Factory Was One of Best Company Had, Declares Manager.

POWER PLANT NOT SOLD.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 8. — That there is some hope of the local paper mill being in operation again during the next few months, was held out by D. F. Robertson, general manager of the Canadian Paper Box Company, of which the Campbellford mill forms a part. Mr. Robertson was a visitor to the town yesterday, and attended the Rotary dinner in the St. Lawrence Hotel. Later, in the hotel lobby, he said that he had always had a very warm spot in his heart for Campbellford, and said that it had been anything but pleasure to him to write the order to close the mill here. He said that it had been one of the best paying mills operated by the company, and he fully realised what its closing would mean to a number of families in the town, and to the community in general. In the event of its re-opening, Mr. Robertson said that the product would be somewhat different, since the Toronto mill would be able to handle the output of the grade which was formerly made here. Asked, regarding the rumor that the company had disposed of their private power plant, his denial was most emphatic. There was absolutely no truth in the statement. "You can make that as strong as you like," he told the reporter. Regarding the probable time for re-opening the mill, Mr. Robertson would not say definitely. There was too much in connection with the affair to permit him to answer definitely at the present time, he claimed.

KING GEORGE'S TEMPERATURE STILL RAISED

Early Morning Report Says His Majesty's Condition is Unchanged.

HAD SOME SLEEP.

Physicians Consult After X-ray Examination On Question of Performing An Operation.

LONDON, Dec. 8.— (Canadian Press).—King George's physicians this morning issued this bulletin on his condition:—

"The king has had some hours of sleep, the temperature is still raised on account of the local lung condition; the general condition is the same."

The Express this morning says that it understands that, after yesterday's radiological examination, the physicians of King George and H. Graham Hodgson held a long consultation on the question of performing an operation on His Majesty.

The newspaper says that it was feared that the length of the illness had so taxed the strength of the Sovereign that it was doubtful whether the patient had sufficient vitality to sustain such an ordeal. It was said that a further consultation will be held to-day to decide the future course of treatment.

The Express further stated that it understands that a sedative was administered late last night, and that the physicians hoped that after some hours of restful sleep the heart would regain strength.

Had Restless Day

The king had a restless day in his struggle against the illness which he has been combating for a fortnight or more. Last night's bulletin from his physicians made that statement, and it was brought out that the patient had undergone a radiological examination this afternoon.

The examination corroborated previous exploration of the pleural cavity by needle, which showed that there was no appreciable effusion.

Fairly Favorable

Yet on the whole, the day and evening bulletins together, gave evidence of fairly favorable development in the King's condition. The morning report announced that his general strength had been maintained and the evening bulletin said that the general condition remained unchanged.

From these facts it was inferred that the King's heart action was for the moment at least not giving any added anxiety to his attendants.

The evening bulletin was timed 8.15, which was about an hour after the physicians had arrived at the palace. It was signed by the regular doctors, Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, and also by H. Graham Hodgson, who made yesterday's X-ray examination.

He had also conducted the first radiological test of the royal patient. The bulletin said:

"The King has not had a restful day. A radiological examination was carried out yesterday afternoon. Neither this nor the exploration by needle previously carried out has disclosed any appreciable amount of pleural effusion. The general condition remains unchanged."

THE WEATHER

The temperature was down to six degrees above the zero mark this Saturday morning, and contsitutes the lowest point reached this season. The zero days are now within sight.—W.P.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—A depression is centred off the South Atlantic coast, moving northeastward, and pressure is also low over the Western Provinces, where the weather is milder. Except for a few local snowfalls in Eastern Canada, the weather has been fair in all Provinces. It is very cold in Northern Ontario, and high pressure extends from James Bay to the Southwest States.

Georgian Bay—Moderate northerly winds; mostly fair and decidedly cold; local snow flurries.

Northern Ontario — Moderate to fresh winds; mostly fair and very cold, but becoming milder on Sunday.

Lake Superior— Strong southwest winds or moderate gales; partly cloudy and becoming milder at night, with local snow falls.

Western Provinces—Fresh to strong south-west and west winds; mostly fair and mild; probably some local rain or snow by Sunday.

"I Had Backache Almost Continually"

"... I had lost weight and after the least exertion was subject to dizzy spells," writes Mrs. Louisa Pike, West Hamilton, Ontario..."I could not straighten up after bending without putting my hands on my hips to help myself, or walk upstairs without collapsing on the first bed."

Then, after two years' terrible suffering, Mrs. Pike tried Gin Pills... and continues gratefully, "I now feel better than I ever felt in my life." Surely it is worth 50c to get the same wonderful relief ... that's all Gin Pills cost, at any drug store.

WARSAW PATRONS GET $21,754 FOR MILK DURING PAST SEASON

Factory Manufactures 110,208 Pounds of Cheese in 1928.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Canadian Packing Company Officials Prophesy Better Times in Future.

WARSAW, Dec. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—The annual meeting of the Warsaw Cheese Factory patrons was held in the factory on Tuesday afternoon. During the season of 1928, Charles Foster was manager of the factory, and Ralph Wasson the actual cheese maker, most of the time. The total number of pounds of milk was 1,238,881; number of pounds of cheese, 110,208; value of cheese, $24,439; value to patrons, $21,754.

The patrons and their families gathered in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening. E. Hawthorne was appointed chairman for the evening, and Fred Crowe read the factory statement.

C.P.C. Buyer Present

During the evening, Mr. Matthews, buyers for the C.P.C., gave a very interesting talk. In the course of his address, Mr. Matthews pointed out that the Canadian Packing Company buys Warsaw cheese because it is of a good quality; they have never bought a second-grade cheese from Warsaw. He said: "The manager is a good salesman, the Canadian Packing Company are good buyers, who are trying to build up a good trade in Canada. England has been and is at the present time, a big buyer of Canadian cheese. The Canadian Packing Company has several side lines, among them, butter and eggs. For some reason this year, eggs put in cold storage as extras are coming out seconds, and it is a fairly general condition in the province. They have been buying butter for five years, but this year they bought the cream and made the butter, in an endeavor to get a uniform quality, and increased their output one hundred per cent, making 15,000 pounds of butter a week.

"This year the cheese factory paid more per pound for butter fat than did the creameries. Butter prices are lowered somewhat because there are large importations of butter, on which the duty is only one cent a pound from New Zealand. They make fresh butter in their summer and ship to Canada during the Canadian winter. The C.P.C. now handles canned goods, fish, and groceries, and this year, for the first time, they bought calves and lambs." Mr. Matthews said he thought hog prices are now at their lowest, but are too low for the good for the farmer. "We pay two cents more for hogs than any other country. Hoover's election will likely have an effect on our sales. It will effect the sales of dressed hogs greatly, but the duty on live hogs will not likely be changed, being now at one-half cent a pound. The American market will control the prices here to a large extent, but we can build up an export trade with Great Britain. Cattle prices are likely to stay up, and veal is very high. Freezing lambs keeps the prices more nearly uniform.

The Canadian Packing Company pays the farmers for their produce when they bring it in, but it is at least two months before they get their returns, and they handle so much stuff, they are quite satisfied with a profit of one-quarter of a cent a pound."

Expects Better Prices.

Winner!

The artist friend who advised lovely Dorothy Cray, 254 West 12th St., New York City, to enter two recent beauty contests, is probably saying, "I told you so." She won both of them and a movie engagement into the bargain! Too bad, pictures can't show the loveliness of her skin and the gleaming beauty of her dark brown hair, points which, the judges say, swayed their decisions.

"When I consider how people admire my hair now and how different it was not long ago," says Miss Cray, "I can't help telling about it. Dandruff had nearly ruined my hair. It had gotten stringy, dull, and was falling out. My scalp was terribly uncomfortable. Then a friend got me started on this method of caring for the hair which is all the rage among New York girls. Now, I just put a little Danderine on my brush each time I use it. Since I have been doing this regularly, all dandruff has disappeared; my scalp has become perfectly comfortable and healthy; my hair has stopped falling out and has become soft, gleamy and pretty."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair, restores its natural color, gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It makes the hair easy to dress and keeps it in place. It stops dandruff. It isn't oily and doesn't show. At all drug stores, 35c. A delicately fragranced toilet necessity for the well-groomed girl.

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS OF CANADA, LIMITED

IT was from the window of John Plain's workshop that I saw him going along the street in the discharge of his pastoral duties. He is a Presbyterian minister well known to me. Like many of his brethren, he is finding that it is not getting any easier to be a pastor. As he trudged along he was turning over certain problems in his mind and looking for solutions which seemed elusive. He was conscious of entanglements and difficulties. Something of the dreariness of the leaden skies and the dripping trees had gotten into his thoughts. He was recalled to another world by the voice of a little girl speaking his name. He looked around and she was running toward him with arms outstretched. He picked her up, a little fairy not yet four years old, and she whispered a message in his ear that changed his outlook for the day. Her wet hands and gossamer spoiled a perfectly fresh collar, but the day's laundry bill was a small price to pay for her ministry.

BE YOURSELF.

It was not possible for her to know what she had done for him; he could no more tell her than she could understand. But it was a gracious ministry. She was just herself, and she recalled him to himself. The ministry she exercised was not exceptional; it is constant. It comes to us all.

In thinking of this incident afterwards he said: "My life would be dreary enough on these streets were it not for the cheery words and the happy greetings of the children."

He remembered the rebuke the Saviour administered to the disciples. "Forbid them not." And in speaking of the ministry of this little girl in the light of the Master's rebuke, he said, "I cannot understand how anyone who has a spark of affection would want to forbid them. They represent what is clean and pure. They have no ulterior motives. They have nothing to conceal. They harbor no enmity or suspicion. They, in their innocency, belong to Christ. There are no pagan children, no heathen little folks."

DEBTORS ALL.

As this preacher friend of mine went on his way he carried on a sort of a silent conversation with himself. And it went something like this:

"Paul said he was debtor to the Greek and to the Barbarian, to the wise and unwise. For myself, I want to add that I am debtor also to the children. And when I turn this fact over and look on the other side I discover a great thing: it is the fact of a responsibility that fills life with meaning. What possibilities in the little girl that soiled my collar with her wet hands! What of her future? For her there is splendid womanhood and grace and beauty! Or it is wreckage of the saddest sort the world has? Her home must answer first of all! But the rest of us are not without responsibility."

* * *

THIS minister friend of mine is very fond of dogs. He talks of dogs on all occasions if there is the least opoprtunity. It is not a bad trait, provided it is not greatly out of proportion to weightier matters; for a man who likes a dog and knows how to treat and use one is usually a good man to be with. It seems he had arranged with a friend for an afternoon's tramp along hedgerows and through the brush with him and his dog, in search of game. The dog manifested remarkable powers in trailing game and a fine afternoon was in prospect. But at the first discharge of the gun the dog disappeared. After a time they saw him going across the field to the house. Coaxing and petting brought him back, but only for a while. He was nowhere to be found. After a fruitless afternoon, so far as game was concerned, they returned to the house and there found the dog asleep in a box behind the stove. My friend waxed eloquent in telling the story and moralized on the dog's failure: "What a pity," he said, 'that a dog like that should be endowed with such a good nose."

A DOG'S NOSE

Along with my friends I have been thinking of that dog and his nose ever since I heard the story. And I agree with him in the thought that it seems a pity that a dog with such a spirit should have such a nose! But neither of us could agree with the conclusion that the dog ought to be shot. That seemed like a hasty judgment on the dog when you stop to consider; for we both think we ought not to ask more of dogs and their talents than we do of people. We who have such higher endowment than a dog's nose ought to be patient with a recreant dog.

Does this story not set us all wondering about the talents and opportunities and responsibilities of men? The Master seems to be depending on us. He has asked us to go before Him into the places where He Himself would come. The parable says: "For the Son of Man.... gave to every man his work." And the work is indicated by the talent! What a wonderful equipment is the voice of song, and Christ claims it for Himself and His service. Or the ability to teach; or to plan for the ongoing of the Church; or to lead in events as the need may be! If we ignore the call of Christ to service, are we not, however well we may please ourselves, really curled up in a box behind the stove?

IT was in reply to a remark of John Plain's that the minister said: "The financial problem of a church is not the simplest when its details are seen. There are so many people to think about; so many angles to consider. Most members of the church have opinions on this subject on which they put a great deal of stress. They wonder why things are not done this way or that. But the officials are faced with very definite and concrete responsibility. The problem has been discussed all the way down from the beginning; and an inspection of the "good old days" is not at all convincing. Just how to meet the needs of the church fully and equitably, in the spirit of brotherhood and observing the laws of stewardship, is the problem the church is trying to solve. Any plan requires cooperation, fully and heartily, of the members of the church family. A poor plan works pretty well with cooperation. A good plan works poorly without it.

THE EVERY MEMBER PLAN

"The Every Member Plan is the method the whole Church has reached with practical unanimity. It aims to reach every member with the fact of responsibility. It makes an appeal to every one according to his ability. It seeks to provide for every cause according to the need. Because the Church has a weekly expense account it plans for a weekly income. Because giving to wrong, and turns all our desires towards that which is good. God is an act of worship, the offering is presented during the services. Because order and system are everywhere taught, the attempt is made to have it on a sound business basis."

Having listened to all this, John Plain agreed with me that there was much sound sense and good scriptural teaching running through it all. And I am very grateful to my friend for giving me something stimulating for this column. May the little girl with the wet hands and the secret which she confided to the minister; and the dog with a nose keenly adjusted to the sense of smell, but fonder of comfort than of the chase; and the question of money for church purposes, receive a gracious welcome from every reader of this page. I hope the little lass will grow to a beautiful womanhood, as she gives promise of doing, carrying on her unconscious ministry as she journeys through this world. For the dog I can wish nothing better than that it will be wise enough to mend its ways without scolding or the use of the lash. And I hope that some folks I know who have some of the dog's characteristics will show that they are not going to be behind a dog in devotion to what is their chief business in life. Moreover it is my sincere wish that every church will increase its sacrificial giving of time and strength and money to the service of Christ and mankind. —Allan Fairbairn

The Minister Remarks—

—Give some people sufficient earth and they will dig their own grave.

—Justification is by Faith and not by Fortune.

—Salvation is secured by the Cross and not by Cash.

—The Grace of God is unmerited and is not to be bought by the gold of any sinner.

—Some folks would rather have the minister preach pleasant things that may not be true than plains things that are true.

The Best Investment

IF we starve the inner life we must inevitably suffer sooner or later from shallowness and disillusionment. The best investment in the world is not war loan—it is to be found in a serviceable, awakening, stimulating education, the development of a keen, lively, exploring mind and a disinterested curiosity about life, and in cleanliness and rectitude of character. A popular and very prosperous novelist once told me that his supreme ambition was to write one good hymn, and he explained why. A successful novel soon dies, but a good hymn is immortal.

Don't Dodge It

AS a rule a difficulty is only a difficulty so long as you try to dodge it. Face it squarely and deal with it drastically and it disappears One day you are called to a task which you think you will loathe. You indulge in a good deal of ingenious manoeuvring in order to dodge it, and naturally you become increasingly apprehensive. If you are wise, you sit down and do it, and discover to your surprise and relief that you have thoroughly enjoyed the job. —F. A. A.

A Pen Picture

IN the crowd that is running away you may observe a little group of men who are keeping together. Judging by their appearance they ought to be influential men, and as such should try to encourage the fugitives; but they do not seem to think of this, and are desirous only of their own safety Here is a place that seems to afford a refuge; it is large and dark besides—just the place where none can see them; they will wait until night falls and then they can go elsewhere. Vain hope! Someone has seen them, and soon their refuge is darker than when they entered—the entrance is closed, and escape impossible.

Again you see these men—this time not alone—they are the centre of a large assembly, but why do they lie upon the ground? and why do so many men in armour come one by one and stand beside them?

Once more we see the same men; they are alone again, and in the same place where we saw them first. I do not think that anyone will disturb them now.

The key to the previous Pen Picture will be found in Job 42:8-11. The present picture has been taken from the Book of Joshua. I hope someone will find it during the week.

A VOICE FROM RUSSIA

RUSSIA has not always been as she is said to be now. There was a time when one of her emperors used to go among his people in disguise. This he did to test their real character. One wintry night he was moved to go out on such an errand. He wandered through the streets of Moscow dressed as a tramp begging for shelter and food, only to find himself repulsed with harsh neglect. Coming at last to an open door, a humble peasant offered him a pallet of straw, a crust of bread, a cup of water and a heartfelt welcome. Expressing his regret that this was all he was able to do for the poorly clad visitor, he said, "My wife is sick. A babe has just been born, and my attention must be given to her."

The supposed tramp slept on that pallet of straw with the joy of knowing that he had found a man, and at dawn he took his leave with many thanks for the humble hospitality so sincerely extended to him.

That afternoon a royal cavalcade swept up to that door, and as the pleasant hurried to the narrow street, the emperor was standing before him with all his retinue. The man fell on his face with terror and asked what he had done to bring such a visitation. The emperor raised him up and said, "Nothing, my good man, but entertain your emperor. It was I that slept on that pallet of straw and enjoyed your hospitality. You thought I was a tramp, but it was your emperor you entertained, and he has come to reward you. Take this bag of gold for the wants of your wife and home, and when your new born child is old enough, bring him to me; and I will give him a place of honor in my service; and if you ever need a friend, call on the poor tramp that slept in that corner last night."

Reader, a lowly Stranger is passing up and down your streets, and often knocking at your door and giving you a chance to entertain Him. A day will come when He will sweep down from the skies with all His holy angels. At that time you would give the universe, were it in your power to do so, for one smile of recognition from His face. Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation. Give Him right-of-way into every part of your being and He will enrich you beyond all human thought. —A. F.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

EMERSON tells us that when Michael Angelo was forced to paint the Sistine Chapel in fresco, of which art he knew nothing, he went down into the Pope's gardens behind the Vatican, and with a shovel dug out ochres, red and yellow, mixed them with glue and water with his own hands, and having, after many trials, at last suited himself, climbed his ladders and painted away, week after week, month after month, the sibyls and prophets. He surpassed his successors in rough vigour as much as in purity of intellect and refinement. He was not crushed by his one picture left unfinished at last. Michael was wont to draw his figures first in skeleton, then to clothe them with flesh, and lastly to drape them. "Ah!" said a brave painter to me, thinking on these things, "if a man has failed, you will find he has dreamed instead of working. There is no way to success in our art but to take off your coat, grind paint, and work like a digger on the railroad, all day and every day."

The deeper our faith becomes that we have the Spirit, the more continuous will be our prayer that the Father grant us His mighty workings.

Unshakeable Validities

ONLY as the Church of Christ can say with absolute assurance, "I know whom I have believed," will it be able to accomplish its supernatural mission. Without this sevenfold affirmation the church is as powerless to stem the tides of sin and crime that threaten to engulf the world as is the bit of kelp driven by the ocean winds and tide to turn the course of the Gulf Stream. The real dynamic of the Church of God is the Holy Spirit, who is the author of God's Book, giving to it an authority which no man can wrest from it. To these unshakeable validities let us hold unyieldingly and uncompromisingly because in them is humanity's salvation.—"The Seven Finalities of Faith," by Dr. A. Z. Conrad.

THE NEW KIWANIS LEADER.

After serving his fellow-citizens as alderman and mayor and in other capacities, John J. Turner now lends his ability and energy to another field of public service, the Kiwanis Club.

Mr. Turner has been elected president of that organization, and the choice will undoubtedly prove a happy one, not only for Kiwanis, but for the community, which receives so much help in various ways from the Kiwanis every year.

Presiding over such a body should not be regarded as a sinecure, for it is worthy of note that Joseph Johns, the retiring president, who has contributed splendid service during his term of office, did not miss a single club luncheon and attended every one of the 27 business meetings held this year.

The office, in fact, makes exacting demands upon the time of the incumbent, and its only reward is that afforded by a knowledge that it offers a very useful field of community service.

Mr. Turner's record in that respect justifies the prediction that the Kiwanis Club will complete a year of progress and valuable activity under his command.

LIGHTING THE PARK.

If it is not the intention of the Parks Committee of the City Council to keep Victoria Park lighted during the winter nights, The Examiner would like to suggest to the authorities that the lighting of the park might be continued throughout the winter, not only for the benefit of citizens who have occasion to cross it, but more particularly for the children who find here the only safe coasting facilities in the city.

The expense involved in keeping the park lighted would be small compared with the amount of pleasure the youngsters would obtain from being able to sleigh ride under conditions of comparative safety.

Without lights the trees in the park offer an element of danger, and again many parents hesitate to allow their children to frequent the park after dark, an objection that would be eliminated were the present splendid illumination to be made possible during the winter.

Considering the advantages to be gained, The Examiner believes that the cost of lighting this block the year round would be amply justified.

THAT FLAT RATE ANNUAL.

The hardy annual, a flat rate for all consumers of power in Ontario, has again been embodied in a resolution passed by the United Farmers of Ontario.

The organization is wasting time that might much more profitably be employed in discussing this proposal, which is impracticable and unreasonable.

It would be a splendid thing for Ontario if all the farmers in the Province were supplied with power at reasonable rates, but arriving at that happy condition is another and quite different matter.

The Ontario Government and the Hydro Commission have probably gone farther in that direction than is consistent with good business methods; certainly any wisely directed private power company would have refused to order some of the rural extensions that have been made.

The flat rate idea is an utopian dream that will only be heard of when such bodies as the U.F.O. get together; it is so impossible of realization that it could occupy no place in the policy of any Government that attempted to function according to recognized business principles.

THE MAYOR HAS DONE WELL.

Many nice things were said at Mayor Denne's dinner the other night about the amount of work accomplished by the City Council this year and the spirit of co-operation between the Mayor and the aldermen and city officials.

While such compliments are customary on occasions of this nature, the tributes paid to Mayor Denne were genuine and merited and express perhaps the general opinion of the citizens.

It seems to be the feeling throughout the city that Mr. Denne's first term as chief magistrate has been distinguished by such consistent and successful efforts to make this a year of progress that the courtesy that has usually been accorded local mayors of an election by acclamation for a second term is more than ordinarily justified.

There is no sign of any opposition, and The Examiner feels that it is but making vocal the sentiments of the people of Peterborough in offering the suggestion that Mayor Denne should be returned without a contest as chief magistrate for 1929.

It has been a pleasure to make such proposals on other occasions when we felt that good work had been done, and we have no hesitation now in declaring that His Worship has earned such an honor by his day-in-and-day-out endeavor to make this a better and more progressive city.

SPORT AND PEACE.

Every time fans at a hockey match, a baseball game or a six-day bicycle race toss their hats in the air, slap one another on the shoulder and whoop, the world is that much nearer the goal of peace.

A nation that plays, that goes ga-ga over sport, is not the nation that rushes into war.

The opinion, expressed perhaps more sedately, is that of the former King George of Greece who, as Constantine's son and heir, can surely be credited with a certain amount of knowledge as to whereof he speaks.

"The world," declares the former monarch, "is already too full of bookworms and blue-stockings, long-haired men and short-haired women. There might have been no great war in Europe if the nations had learned to play with leather instead of lead."

It sounds reasonable. Sportsmanship is brewed on the athletic field and nothing serves more to foster a spirit of understanding, between persons, teams, cities and nations, than the healthy rivalry of the rink, the diamond, the gridiron or the cinder path.

The man who teaches his son to throw an out-curve or to haul down a forward pass may not look beyond the immediate circumstance but, in reality, he is dealing Old Man Mars a minute though telling blow. As the Grecian ex-king pointed out during recent proceedings of the Oxford Union, the English university's famous debating society, the growth of games on the Continent is a happy angury for peace. How petty would the differences of the Macedonians, the Bulgarians, the Croates and the rest of 'em seem if they were able to crowd into rush seats and throw programs at the referee!—Border Cities Star.

A NEW TYPE OF LIFEBOAT.

"Obsolete, unworkable and unsafe." These are the words used to describe lifeboat equipment on even the best steamers in an article by Capt. Felix Riesenberg, engineer and master mariner, which appears in the current issue of The Nation. Capt. Riesenberg points out that here is an engineering problem which must be solved and radical changes made before passengers can embark with any assurance that their fate will differ from that of the passengers on the ill-fated Vestris.

"Hazards have increased ten thousand fold with the vast increase in size, speed and number of ships afloat," says Captain Riesenberg.

"Fog is as thick as when the world began, ice as frequent in high latitudes, and far more dangerous in the case of large fast vessels built of steel; and derelicts, often of great tonnage, are added to the unseen but ever possible obstacles in the path of ships racing over seas at night. The hazard of collision, one vessel with another, is a constant source of danger. Only the utmost vigilance of faithful men alert and experienced, stands between these dangers and their consummation in some terrific catastrophe."

When the catastrophe occurs and the terrible moment comes to abandon ship, to clear away the boats, what have our seamen to work with?

"Open boats—open boats often stowed, one on top of the other.

"These boats, to hold, on paper, the total number of persons on board, must be bulky, heavy barges, carried high above the hull, and hung under a great forest of clumsy davits, suspended by complicated tackle, operated by screws and winches. Under the conditions assumed for the purpose of illustration, conditions not at all impossible, no crew of to-day, or even of the day before yesterday when sailors were real sailormen trained in handling rope falls, could launch them safely, let alone fill them to their rated capacity, lower them slowly into the sea, and release them.

"The whole matter of boats, their equipment, their launching from tall topsides of steamers, upright or listed, needs a radical overhauling. To-day the boat equipment on the best steamers built is obsolete, unworkable, unsafe. Open lifeboats can be launched safely only under favorable conditions. Most disasters happen amid the most unfavorable circumstances."

Capt. Riesenberg here proposes several suggestions for consideration at the coming international conference for the safety of life at sea to be held in London next spring.

"1. Place a definite limit on the overall length of ocean passenger liners. They are again growing too big for safety.

"2. Consider the financial incentive now offered to carry boys of the highest type into the sea service, and to keep them there up to the important position of command.

"3. Carry light, open boats under davits, for rescue work only, not for the purpose of abandoning ship with passengers. Boats for the purpose of abandoning ship should be of a radically different design and construction. Such boats should be of steel, shaped somewhat like short, blunt-end spindles. They should be constructed of two thicknesses of metal, separated by tough water-resistant material, capable of swelling if punctured, and strong enough to be filled with passengers and dropped into the sea from launching ways on the boat deck. These boats would stow, side by side, ends outboard. In this way, by stowing at right angles to the keel of the ship, the lifeboats could be carried in a single tier. The launching ways should be so arranged that the boats could be dropped on either side, depending on the list. The boats would have a large hatch, always unlocked, on their upper turtle deck. In a great emergency the passengers would be put into these boats, the hatch clamped down, with dogs operating both from the outside and inside. The clamping down could light the interior by storage battery. Proper handholds, kapock cushions, and other necessities would be fitted, and the under side of the boat would be ballasted by a tank containing fresh water. Then the boat would be easily slid into the sea. It would take a dive, right itself some distance from the foundering ship, and could not be swamped by heavy seas or sucked under. The people in the boat could open the hatch, and other hatches as provided, ship oars, or a mast, or just stand by in comparative comfort and safety.

"Dare-devils have gone over Niagara Falls in barrels; the short drop of a life boat as suggested is not half as bad as the clumsy practice now followed with open boats hung from swaying and tangled falls. A few motor-boats, as now carried, could be launched by the crew to round up the safety spindles.

"The art of engineering must supersede the tangled mess of rope and gear now provided by law for launching boats. Safety, speed, dryness, warmth, and the protection of the contents of the boats from weather during the long time they rest in the cradles can all be accomplished by a system such as this. At one stroke this does away with scores of expensive davits, tons of costly rope, and all of the assorted junk now provided and utterly unmanageable under extreme conditions. Such boats could be released, and if the emergency was so sudden that launching was impossible they would bob up free from the ship when she went down. At the first sign of real danger people could be put into such boats and kept there while the mast made up his mind as to the course of action. Under our present system boats have been lowered and lives lost while the ship remained afloat.

"Most suggestions entail added expense on the shipowner."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

At least, you can shop early in the day.

Mr. Ferguson's Township School Board proposal is just as popular as ever with the United Farmers of Ontario, who see no merit in the plan and do not hesitate to say so.

Ontario's United Farmers think that $4,000 is enough remuneration for members of Parliament, and most electors will agree with the U.F.O. on that point.

It is claimed by the Attorney-General that no more liquor was consumed each month this year than there was each month of last year. The figures show there was a lot consumed in both years.

A Thought

INTERRUPTIONS

So long as there is work to do there will be interruptions—breaks in its progress. The minister at work on his sermon, the merchant at his desk, the woman in her household duties—all must expect these calls to turn aside from the work in hand.

And it is a part of one's character growth to bear these timely or untimely interruptions without any break in good temper or courtesy.

A young student who was privileged to call upon Phillips Brooks in his study, told the writer that he could never have learned from the Bishop's manner or words, that the big-hearted, busy man was ever too busy to receive him. To bear interruptions thus serenely is an opportunity for self-control not to be overlooked by any one who wants to do God's work in the right spirit.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.
—Luke 6: 37.

Our Heavenly Father, we turn for a little while at the threshold of this new day to be with Thee. Refresh us with a new vision of Thy face. Speak to us Thy will that we may do it. Make all the day cheerful by Thy presence and fellowship.

We thank Thee for life and work in such a beautiful world. Give us, we beseech Thee, that due sense of all Thy mercies that our hearts may be thankful, and that we show forth Thy praise not only with our lips but in our lives. Perfect us in love, that we may conquer all selfishness and learn how to pardon as we pray for forgiveness.

May our nome life be sanctified today, and all the days, by the presence of the divine Guest. As we go out among men to do our work, touching the hands and lives of our fellows, make us friends of all—true representatives of Thine. Ballast our activities for the day with high purposes. Show us how to fill it with enriching service, that night may bring a peaceful pillow. Bless the home life of our nations, and all the nations. Let every palace, mansion and cottage in the whole earth become the House of God and the gate of Heaven. Amen.

THE TRAFFIC BY-LAW.

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 5, '28.
The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The police and the city council have framed a very satisfactory set of regulations concerning motor traffic in this city, and have gone to considerable expense and trouble erecting signs as to parking, etc., and if any effort were made to enforce these regulations, a great good would be done for the public. But is any attention paid to these signs and regulations either by the police or the public? Water street is the street nearest the police station, and the west side of that street, in spite of signs prohibiting parking, is blocked all day long by parked cars. George street is nearly as bad. I do not believe in bothering a man who leaves his car on the wrong side for a few minutes, but some leave theirs for hours at a time. A week or so ago I noticed a car between Charlotte and Simcoe on the west side of George street parked at least 18 inches from the curb, a few inches from a hydrant, and it was there all day. I noticed the same car there to-day, apparently parked the whole day in the same spot.

Are the regulations so carefully worked out to be considered a joke, or are the public supposed to at least make a bluff at obeying them? Most of us make a slip now and again in disobeying some of the rules, but evidently some are deliberately breaking them continually, and getting away with it. Is this fair to those of us who are trying to assist the authorities by keeping the spirit of the law if not always the letter?

Yours truly,
MOTORIST.

HATE

Well, all there is
To hate is this:
Give hate a smile,
A frown a kiss.
Do right to those
Who do you wrong,
And none who hates
Can hate you long.

Let not a word
Of anger start
An angry word
In your own heart.
For quiet peace
Will have its way
Long after hate
Has had its day.

And yet if hate
Should not forgive,
Still not without,
Within we live,
If you have calm,
You have a joy
Words cannot change
Nor hate destroy.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1928

Astrology finds this a rather unimportant day in planetary direction, and for that reason a time for rest and relaxation.

There is an aspect favoring religious observance and for this reason the churches should benefit.

The sway is favorable to plans for charitable or philanthropic work. Collections should be unusually large, for the rule encourages generosity.

There is an adverse sign for meetings with persons of opposite sex, for they may be inclined to see each other's faults.

It is not a lucky date for entering into marriage engagements. Words spoken today may cause repentance and even future troubles.

The stars presage many libel suits and other cases that are founded on love's young dream or whatever is the modern substitute.

In the home all should be happy today which gives the eyes power to see the best in one's relatives—even in life partners that have been more or less trying to the temper.

Late this evening the aged should benefit from vibrations supposed to increase vitality and stimulate energy.

This aspect that affects old persons may even cause the young to listen respectfully to the widom of the aged.

There is a good sign for planning social entertainments and especially Christmas celebrations.

College girls and boys should benefit at this time when parents should be generous in the matter of spending money.

Universities are subject to a planetary government that is read as presaging marked changes in educational policies and a trend toward the practical that will be later much criticized.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year that brings prosperity. Both men and women should benefit through employment. They should be wary of strangers.

Children born on this day probably will enjoy prosperity. These subjects of Sagittarius usually have fine brains as well as splendid bodies. They may be too hasty in temper for their own good.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1928

Good aspects alternate with adverse while this configuration prevails, according to astrology.

Both men and women may be sensitive to vibrations that incline them to moodiness and irritability. Self control is important under this direction of the stars.

The hours before noon are read as best for business or professional work which should be pushed while the sway continues.

Women may be inclined to much activity, but they should be careful lest they be conscious of haste and develop the sort of nervousness that defeats effort.

There is a sign indicating a tendency toward romance and love-making, but it is well to be cautious in choosing a life partner under this rule of the stars.

Weddings should be fairly fortunate on this day which seems to promise happiness to those who use logic as well as love in making life plans.

This should be a favorable date for openings of new plays and should benefit all who are connected with them.

Many new business projects of international scope again are foretold for the coming year. One of these will be attended with grave difficulties involving the United States, it is predicted.

Sensations in military circles here and abroad are prognosticated and discovery will be made that peace pacts have their drawbacks, astrologers declare.

The stars presage for department stores and other places dealing in women's attire a season of much profit, for changes in modes will benefit them.

Boston may suffer from a severe storm that causes great property damage, but the city is to profit greatly in commercial activities.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year. Romance and lovemaking will be a part of the experiences of the young and even of those past middle life.

Children born on this day probably will have a strong bent toward religious investigation and psychic research. Poets are born under this sign which assures popularity for both sexes.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SPOOL OF THREAD

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

"Did you sew up the hole in my coat?" asked Uncle Wiggily of his wife one day, just after he got ready to hop out of his hollow stump bungalow to have a race with some dried leaves that the North Wind was blowing along the path.

"Oh, dear me!" exclaimed the rabbit lady. "I quite forgot all about sewing your torn coat, Wiggy, dear. I know I promised to do it, but I have been so busy. Ask Nurse Jane to do it, please."

So Uncle Wiggily asked the muskrat lady housekeeper to sew up the hole in his coat as he did not like to go out looking ragged. Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy said she would but she had to give the dishes their morning bath and she forgot. So next morning, when Uncle Wiggily once more started out to see how sharp Jack Frost had frozen the points of the icicles, the bunny asked again:

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily.

"Did you sew up the hole in my coat, Nurse Jane?"

"Oh, dear me! I quite forgot! Forgive me!" squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper. "I'll sew it for you tomorrow."

"Tomorrow will be too late," said Uncle Wiggily. "I am tired of hopping about with a ragged coat. I will buy myself a spool of thread and sew up the hole. I can do it!"

"Ha! Ha! laughed Nurse Jane. "Very queer you would look sewing with a spool of thread! You need a thimble and a needle! Better leave your coat at home and I will mend it."

"No," and Uncle Wiggily shook his head. "For two days now you and my wife have been promising to mend it and haven't done so. I'll do it myself. I'll buy a spool of thread. I'll use a thorn from the locust tree for a needle and a stone for a thimble."

So Uncle Wiggily hopped off with the torn coat flapping in the wind to buy a spool of thread, stopping at the eleven and twelve-cent store where they sold very good spools of five-cent thread for three pennies.

Putting the spool of thread in his pocket, Uncle Wiggily went on through the woods looking for a log on which he might sit down to mend the hole in his coat. And as he was hopping along, all of a sudden a big Blue Jay Bird, yelling and shrieking, flew down out of a tree crying:

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily! You have a long thread raveling on your coat. Wait until I pick it off for it makes you look very untidy."

With that the Blue Jay picked at a long thread on the rabbit's coat, pulling it off in its beak and flying away with it. But it was not a real thread raveling such as dressmakers often leave behind them.

It was the end of the thread on the spool Uncle Wiggily had bought. The end of the thread, becoming loose from the spool, stuck dingling, dangling out of the rabbit's pocket and it was this the Jay was pulling on.

Off and off through the woods flew the blue bird, unwinding the spool of thread which spun around in the bunny's pocket until at last, after getting about half a mile away, the Jay pulled the last of the thread off the spool and, looking back and seeing it extending through the woods, draped over trees and bushes the Jay yelled:

"Well, of all the ravelings ever I did see, that is the longest! Just believe me!"

"Ha! Ha! laughed Uncle Wiggily when he saw what had happened. "Oh, Blue Jay! What a funny mistake you made! You unwound the spool of thread I bought to sew up the hole in my coat!"

"What!" shrieked the Jay. "Wasn't that a raveling on your coat?"

"It was a whole spool of thread!" chuckled the bunny. "But never mind! You didn't mean to unwind it. I'll wind it up again."

But this was easier said than done for the thread tangled on the bushes and branches of trees and though the Jay tried to help he only tangled it worse in his beak and legs until, after a while, Uncle Wiggily said:

"Oh, let it go. I only need a small piece of thread to mend my coat. I'll break that off and leave the rest of the thread here for the birds to weave into their nests next summer."

"Well," yelled the Jay who has a very loud voice, "since I made the trouble it is only fair that I help. If you will sit down I'll punch holes for the thread along the edges of the tear in your coat and you can sew it up."

"Fine!" cried Uncle Wiggily. With the Blue Jay's beak for a needle, the rabbit needed no thimble so as the bird made the holes the bunny stuck in the thread, pulling it tight and though he rather puckered the cloth the hole in the coat was soon closed.

So all was well.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER LII.

Giles went to the front door and looked out, followed by Adolf.

The snow was falling so thickly that one could hardly see a yard ahead; there was a deep menace in the unbroken silence.

Chittenham looked at the man beside him.

"Well?" he said sharply, struck by something in Adolf's eyes.

"It would be good now to look for Mademoiselle," Adolf said. "I have friends—good fellows all. If Monsieur wishes it—"

"Let us start at once," Giles broke in.

He was afraid of the fear in his heart; he was conscious of nothing but despair when an hour later he was stumbling along through the blinding, clogging snow, with Adolf and half a dozen other men.

The lanterns they carried shed weird, dancing shadows on the whiteness at their feet; the flakes whirled in their faces, half choking them. It was as if all the forces of nature had ranged themselves as enemies against them, he thought, as he bent to ask Adolf in which direction they were going.

His heart seemed to stand still when the answer came.

"It was to the St. Bernard that Mademoiselle wished to go. For days she has talked of nothing else. I told her she must take a guide; she was disappointed, but she said she would let me know."

"To the St. Bernard?" Chittenham stifled a groan.

He might have known—might have guessed. It seemed now to his despair that he had been a blind fool not to realize from the beginning that she would come to this place, that he had ever needed a chance photograph to guide him.

"But that is miles away," he said hoarsely, "and if she only left this evening how can she possibly have got so far?"

Adolf shrugged his shoulders.

"The snow was not thick when she started. A car would take her as far as Villeneuve, or even a sledge; the roads were not then impassable."

"You think she may have reached Villeneuve and is staying there?"

Adolf did not know. Did one ever know what was in the mind or heart of any woman? he asked cynically.

They tramped on in a silence, which Chittenham broke at last to ask curtly:

"Is it ever possible to find anyone who gets lost on such a night?"

"They have been found—often," Adolf answered evasively.

"Alive?"

Adolf did not answer this, and Giles dared not press the question. Supposing he never saw Julie again? He felt unreal, and as if he were looking on at a scene on a stage. It was only when he realized that they had been tramping for two hours and that it was past midnight that the sickness of despair seemed to fasten upon him like a vice.

He would never see her again—this horrible, impenetrable snow that was hemming them in on all sides like a suffocating, blinding blanket, was hiding her from him, wrapping her in death.

He thought of her as she had been that day on the lake steamer — he thought of her as she had been up on the heights, in the cold, bare hotel with the storm whistling about them, shutting them off from the world.

They had stood together then on the threshold of a great happiness and he had allowed life to close its door against them.

During the past weeks he had so often cursed himself for his foolhardiness. What had anything really mattered except that he had been one of the few fortunate ones in life who find their real mates? When he first kissed her lips it had been as if someone had set his whole being on fire; the touch of her hand in his had been a revelation, and yet he had not tried to keep her with him—he had let her go for a mere quixotism.

He stumbled and almost fell and Adolf turned quickly and stopped. He took a flask of brandy from his coat and made Chittenham drink.

"It is the cold," he said in his quiet voice. "It makes one numb and stupid."

The hours dragged by like an endless nightmare. They left the lights of the town far behind and were out on the flat stretch of open country that lies between Lausanne and Villeneuve. It was almost impossible to keep to the roadway; even Adolf often lost his way and was forced to halt and search for the right track.

It was not until early morning that the snow ceased falling.

Chittenham was nearly worn out, but he refused to go back, or to rest, although the others often urged him to do so.

"Farther on there is an inn where we can rest; the people who keep the inn are friends of mine," Adolf said.

But it was half an hour before they reached it—a small, unpretentious little building of wood, standing back from the roadway and half hidden by great drifts of snow.

Adolf tramped up to the door and knocked; there were lights in several of the windows, and the door was opened almost immediately, to admit the men into the warmth, stamping the caked snow and ice from their boots.

Chittenham dropped on to the nearest bench. It was not fatigue as much as despair that had beaten him.

Like a man in a dream he heard Adolf calling for brandy and hot coffee. He leaned back and closed his eyes. Everything seemed whirling about him; it was only the rough but kindly touch of Adolf's hand on his shoulder that roused him.

"Mademoiselle is here—with my friends," he said.

"Here!" Chittenham stared up at the man's kindly face with dazed, unbelieving eyes. "Here! Oh, for God's sake, if it is not true—"

"It is quite true. They found her along the road last night—in the snow. She was lost—the poor lady! They brought her here and put her to bed, but she is ill."

Chittenham staggered to his feet.

"Let me see her—let me be sure—"

But they would not let him go till he had drunk some brandy followed by a cup of steaming coffee.

"But I'm quite fit," he protested. "I've never felt better in my life."

He had already forgotten his despair and weariness. He felt twenty years younger when presently he followed the daughter of the house up the narrow, creaking, wooden stairs. She talked volubly all the way in French, but Giles did not hear a word she said; he still felt as if he moved in a dream till the moment when the bedroom door, which the girl had closed in his face, face, opened again and she beckoned to him.

"She is asleep; you will be foolish to waken her, but you may come in and see for yourself."

She looked up at him with an understanding smile, but Chittenham was no longer conscious of her presence as he passed her and went into the room. It was so small that his big figure seemed to fill it; its ceiling was so low that he had to stoop as he walked across the bare boards to the narrow bed with its thick red coverlet where Julie lay.

There was a shaded lamp burning on a bedside table, and its light fell full on her face which was half turned from him.

Chittenham gave one glance.

"Julie! Oh, thank God!"

He sat down on the little hard chair beside the bed and hid his face in his hands with an overwhelming sense of weakness. He was not dreaming now—he was awake, and the woman he loved lay there within reach of his hand—safe and sleeping.

They had wrapped her in a queer, old-fashioned dressing-gown of patchwork. Its sleeves were too long for her and came down over her hands, hiding them, but when presently Chittenham put out his own hand and touched hers he found it warm.

All through the terrible hours of the night he had been so sure that he would never see her again, or that if he did, it would be to find her still and cold like the snow which shut them out from one another, that the sudden relief was more than he could bear. He bent his head and pressed his lips to her hand again and again, kissing her fingers and wrist and soft, warm palm, till suddenly she stirred restlessly and turned.

For a moment she lay quite still, staring up at him with far-away, dreaming eyes, then suddenly the tears welled up into them, and her lips quivered as she said in a voice all broken with sobbing:

"Oh, you belong to me—you belong to me!"

"Always—always!"

He went down on his knees beside her and would have drawn her into his arms, but that suddenly she remembered and resisted.

"Why are you here—why have you come here? I don't want you, and you don't want me. You are going to be married, they said—the paper said . . ."

"So you saw that! It's not true. Some wretched reporter—I hardly know the girl. Julie, you can't really believe that any woman in the world but you—"

She began to cry weakly.

"You were so long coming to me, I thought you didn't care any more."

"Julie—" His voice broke; he slipped an arm beneath her head, drawing it to rest against him. "Oh, my dear, is there any need for explanations between us? Don't you know yet how much I love you? Can't you forgive me? Haven't I been punished enough? If you knew what these last months have been—"

She drew back a little, the tears wet on her face, her voice broken with pitiful sobbing as she asked once more:

"Oh, do you still belong to me?"

And Chittenham answered again as he bent to find her lips: "Always, always, always!"

THE LUCKIEST LADY, A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE LUCKIEST LADY
BY RUBY M. AYRES

I.—THE LITTLE FLAPPER

THE Little Flapper's first recollections of the Luckiest Lady were a bit vague and confused. For one thing, the Little Flapper, as George Paget nicknamed her, was only twelve years old at the time, and she had led a very trying and unnatural life, having been dragged round at the heels of a third-rate touring company ever since she was old enough to be able to stand, by an ill-tempered, much made-up woman whom she knew as "Mother."

This woman was quarrelsome and drank too much, and many bruises on the Little Flapper's arms and legs testified to the kind of treatment to which she was often subjected.

The Little Flapper's official name was Biddy Saunders, and she was a small, thin child with unkempt hair which would have been really beautiful with a little attention, and brown eyes that wore the expression of apologetic fear which one sees in the eyes of a lost dog. She knew what it was to be hungry and ill-used and insufficiently clad, and until she met the Luckiest Lady she had never known what it was to receive a kind word or to be really happy.

Fate threw her across the path—or, to be more correct, under the wheels of the Luckiest Lady's motor car one wet night in November in the crowded, muddy street just outside London.

It was a Saturday night, and the woman whom she knew as "Mother," being temporarily out of a "shop," as she called it, was worse-tempered than usual, and had had too much to drink, seeing that she had spent the entire evening in a public-house, until, following a violent argument with another woman she had been requested by the landlord to leave.

The sight of the Little Flapper, who for nearly two hours had waited patiently outside in the cold and rain, added fire to her anger and resentment, and after screaming abuse at the child and shaking her violently, she dragged her roughly across the road, regardless of the Saturday night traffic and the warning shouts of passersby.

The Luckiest Lady's car was coming along just at the moment when they dodged out from behind an omnibus—coming rather quickly, for the Luckiest Lady had been late dressing that night, and was already due at a dinner and dance fifteen miles out of town, and Harnigan, her dignified chauffeur, who prided himself on his punctuality upon all and every occasion, was grimly determined not to lose his reputation that night.

So when he saw the Little Flapper and the woman whom she knew as Mother dodge out from behind the omnibus, he put on his brakes so suddenly, in order to avoid running over them, that the big car skidded badly on the greasy road, swinging half-way round, and knocking them both down, after all, its back wheels passing right over the woman's body.

The Little Flapper's recollections were vague and unreal from that moment.

Afterwards, looking back upon it all, she could only remember a sensation of being dragged face downwards on the muddy road, of a shrill, agonized scream, and much shouting.

Then of a young woman who looked like a dream, or an angel in a dream, wrapped in a white fur coat, beneath which one caught glimpses of a rose-pink frock, bending down to her, and, regardless of her wet, draggled condition, lifting her up into her arms—such soft, white arms, with diamonds sparkling on them.

Then of a tall, good-looking man with a monocle who stared down at them both and said:

"Good God, Marna, you'll ruin your frock!"

Then of the dignified Harnigan, who came reluctantly forward to say:

"Allow me, madam. I don't think the little girl is hurt. I think she is merely frightened."

Harnigan was right there, for the Little Flapper had not even an extra bruise; but the woman whom she had known as Mother, after that first agonized scream, lay hideously huddled in the middle of the road, with the rain pouring down on her white face and dyed hair.

She was quite dead.

"Dead as a door-knocker," as the Little Flapper heard a stoic policeman say to the dignified Harnigan. In his way, Harnigan was more of an aristocrat than his master. He hated anything which he called "degradading," whatever he meant by that. He would far rather have run over a well-dressed woman than a badly dressed one, had he been given the choice, and there was a look of unconscious disdain upon his wooden features as with great self-possession he produced his license and delivered himself of the statement that he was in no wise to blame.

"The woman ran right out from behind the omnibus, gripping the little girl by the arm," he told the stoic policeman, who was thoroughly enjoying himself taking notes. "Gripping the little girl by the arm," Harnigan reiterated. "And in order to avoid knocking them down, I applied my brakes, the car skidded—owing to the disgraceful state of the roads, I may say—and there you are! Looks like deliberate suicide to me," he added gloomily.

The tall man in the monocle spoke again impatiently.

"That will do, Harnigan. The police officer has my name and address." He turned to the Luckiest Lady. "Get back into the car, Marna. You'll catch your death of cold. The police will see to the child."

The Little Flapper turned dazed eyes to the lovely face of the Luckiest Lady—at least, it looked a lovely face to her, in its sorrow and infinite compassion, although, as a matter of fact, Marna Paget was not, strictly speaking, beautiful at all.

She was tall and slim, and aged about twenty-eight, with auburn hair coiled in a thick plait round her head, and blue-grey eyes that looked dark by reason of her very long lashes, and a mouth that made the Little Flapper long to kiss it.

For the Little Flapper loved Marna Paget from that very first moment of their meeting, and she loved her with an unselfish love that never changed nor faltered, right down to the end of the chapter.

And Marna looked up at the tall man with the monocle, and her eyes were indignant as she answered:

"Leave her to the police! George, how can you suggest such a thing? I'm going to take her home with me, at any rate for tonight."

George Paget shrugged his shoulders good-humoredly.

"All right, my dear," he agreed calmly. "Only for God's sake get in out of this infernal rain. You'll catch your death of cold."

Then for the second time he looked at Biddy Saunders, as she clung to the Luckiest Lady.

"The poor Little Flapper's frozen to the bone, too," he added. "Look how she's shivering."

That was how Biddy Saunders first got her nickname of "The Little Flapper," and that was how she came to be adopted by Marna Paget—or, as Biddy always thought of her, "The Luckiest Lady," for at first sight it certainly would have seemed to the casual observer that George Paget's wife must have everything in the world which the heart of the most exacting woman could desire.

She had a lovely house in the most picturesque part of Regent's Park. The Little Flapper's feet sank into the carpets at every step she took, and the bed into which they tucked her that night was so soft and wonderful that she felt as if she were floating on clouds.

There was a pale-blue silk quilt drawn over her little body, so fine in texture that she was afraid to touch it with her thin hands, even though she had been given a gloriously hot bath with lovely smelly stuff in it. And there was a fire burning in the grate, bigger and more extravagant than any fire Biddy had ever seen, and there was a shade over the electric light that looked like a full-blown rose.

In fact, the whole room reminded the Little Flapper of the best and finest stage scene she had ever crept from behind the wings of a suburban theatre to marvel at, only it was all so much more beautiful, so much fresher-looking and more real.

And when presently Marna herself came in to say good night, and bent over the Little Flapper with the light shining on her auburn hair and on the diamonds on her arms, the Little Flapper caught her breath in a sob of ecstasy and whispered:

"Oh, you smell so lovely!" Marna laughed.

"Do I? You funny little child!"

The Little Flapper shivered as a memory of other nights flashed through her mind.

"Mother always smelt of brandy," she whispered.

When Marna went downstairs she found her husband standing in front of the fire in the big drawing-room.

"So we don't go to the Laycocks', after all, I suppose?" he submitted amusedly as his wife entered.

"We certainly do not," Marna answered. She shut the door and rossed the room to him with a little excited rush. "George! She's such a darling, now she's all washed and clean. I simply must keep her."

"Keep her!"

George Paget was a tolerant man, and he adored his wife, but for a moment he looked aghast as he stared at her flushed, eager face.

"Keep her!" he said again blankly. "Do you mean—for always?"

"Wel, why not?" Marna asked defensively. "I should love to have a child like that about the house, and we're rich enough to be able to afford to have half a dozen."

"But, dash it all, you're only a child yourself!" George Paget objected.

He was more than ten years older than his wife.

"We might even—it's not too late—we might even—some day, you know—have a kiddie ourselves, don'tcherknow!" he stammered, getting boyishly red.

Marna shook her head.

"No," she said positively, "I am sure that will never happen. But, of course, if you don't want me to keep her I won't."

It was an entirely unnecessary sop offered to his sense of authority, for in the six years of their married life George Paget had never once opposed his wife's wishes, and had no intention of doing so now, though for the sake of his dignity he raised yet another weak objection.

"But what about her people? She must have some people besides that poor devil who was with her."

Marna shook her head again.

"I don't believe she has. Something seems to tell me that she is quite alone. I don't know why I think so, but as soon as I saw her there in the mud and rain I seemed to know that she was meant for me to look after and be kind to."

George Paget let his monocle fall with an agitated click.

"Trying to make me jealous?" he asked with pretended fierceness. Marna laughed, and stood on tiptoe to kiss his chin.

"You're far too much of a dear ever to be jealous of anyone," she said affectionately.

II.—MARNA'S DESIRE

There was no better word with which she could have described George Paget. He was indeed a dear! A large-hearted schoolboy who looked like a man, he was the friend of the whole world, and he believed that the whole world was his friend. He suspected evil of none, and he never refused to help anyone in distress, nor turned a deaf ear to a tale of trouble.

So now he returned Marna's kiss happily enough and said:

"All right; keep your Little Flapper if you want to, and if nobody claims her it will make me happy if it makes you happy."

Marna's eyes filled with tears.

"You're too good to me," she whispered.

He caught her hand in a big grasp.

"Too good to you! I couldn't be! Here, what are you crying for?" He had seen the tears in her eyes. "What's the matter? Aren't you happy? Tell me; I'll do anything in the wide world."

"You do too much already. You spoil me." She tried to smile.

"Something is the matter," he insisted. "It's not like you to cry, Marna." He turned her gently round by the shoulders, so that she was forced to look at him. "Dash it all, you're fretting about something!" he stammered. "You're fretting because we haven't—because—" He broke off in embarassment, to rush on again. "I'm such a clumsy fool. I never dreamed—never guessed."

She laid a hand over his lips.

"You're guessing all wrong now, too. It isn't a bit what you think. It's only—" She hesitated, trying to find words with which to explain herself. "It's only that perhaps just lately my life has seemed rather empty and—useless! Oh, it's not your fault," she cried swiftly, as she saw the sudden shadow on his face. "It's only, if I had someone to look after, someone dependent on me, to spend my money on! Oh, you do understand, dear, don't you?"

"'Course I do!" George Paget declared stoutly.

He had never felt the loss of children himself, but he had sometimes wondered about his wife, dimly realizing, in his simple way, that women were different to men. So he said again with enthusiasm:

"Keep the Little Flapper, if you like. I only want you to be happy, don'tcherknow, darling!"

Marna flushed and looked away from him. In her heart she was guiltily conscious that she had not quite truthfully explained herself. No doubt children were wonderful. People who had them always said that they were, but there was something in her heart deeper than the mere longing for someone to look after and someone on whom she could spend her money—something which it was not possible to explain to her husband, for how could she say to him:

"What I really want is someone I can love—really love. Someone of my own who will love me and let me love them so much that nothing else in the world will matter. You see, I've never really loved anyone in all my life."

And yet that would not have been quite the truth, either. She had married George Paget because he was a rich man, and because everyone had said that only a fool would refuse him. She had married him three months before she met Hugh Hubbard, or else—but that was as far as Marna ever now allowed her thoughts to travel along that line. She was afraid to face the realization of all she had lost; afraid to even think what life might have been if only Hubbard had walked into her life in June instead of September. He had not told her that he loved her, but she knew it without words, and when suddenly he threw up a lucrative appointment in London and went away to China, with no hope of leave for at least five years, she knew why he had done that, too. He knew what danger lay for both of them in constant meetings, and he knew that as long as he stayed in London it would be hopeless to try and avoid one another, for he and George Paget were great friends. So he went away.

And now he was due home. After five years, during which she had heard nothing of him except from occasional short, business-like letters to her husband, he was on his way back to England, and Marna was afraid.

"I did not really love him. Directly I see him again I shall know that I never really loved him," she told herself; but she was afraid, all the same, for, besides being a lucky lady, she was also a very lonely lady. For it had only taken her a short while after her marriage to discover that the poorest woman in the world is the one who has only money. She had so soon grown tired of travelling, of Paris and of Rome, and of spending money.

Looking ahead, she often felt as if she had come up against a high wall in life, in which she could not find the door that would let her through into any sort of a future, always supposing there was one to be found.

She had tried to love her husband, and she had failed. Six years of married life had left her with nothing better than a grateful affection for him, but with a heart hungering for something more.

Sometimes she looked at him and wondered why she could not love him in the way she wanted to; why she could not find her complete happiness in being his wife; but she could get no answer, except that instinct told her that love is not an emotion to be controlled, and that it gives itself in places where it is sometimes least desired, and in spite of all resistance. With the advent of the Little Flapper, Marna Paget was rather like a child suffering from acute toothache which, for some unknown reason, for a time suddenly ceases.

"I shall be all right now," she told herself, when it was established beyond a doubt that Biddy Saunders was quite alone in the world save for the dead woman whom she had known as Mother, and whose funeral expenses George Paget paid without a murmur. "I shall be quite all right now I have got someone to be interested in—someone of my own to look after."

* * *

And so, for a little while, she was. The Little Flapper was like a new toy, and at first it proved to be infinite fun, choosing her clothes, and brushing her hair, and taking her about, and watching her wide-eyed gratitude and astonishment. But after a time the toothache started again, for the Little Flapper had not been a real cure, only just a narcotic, deceitfully lulling pain to sleep.

And then Hugh Hubbard came home.

It was typical of George that he brought him in to dinner one night without a word of warning to his wife, merely opening the drawing-room door and demanding, with a delighted grin on his face:

"Guess who is here with me!"

Marna stood up, the book she had been trying to read falling to the floor and all the blood in her body seemed to rush to her heart and then away again, leaving her feeling faint and a little sick. For, of course, it was Hugh Hubbard, and presently she found herself shaking hands with him, and telling him stupidly that he had not altered in the least, and asking stupidly if it could really be five years since they met, and was he pleased to be back, and how long was he going to stay?

And she supposed that he answered her, but she could never remember what he said, for in her heart was a torment of joy and fear, and of gladness and regret, for she knew that she loved him more than when he went away, five years ago, and that since then she had just been marking time, getting through life, waiting for this meeting. And George went on, still grinning delightedly:

"Thought you'd be surprised! The old bounder's been in town three days, and never let us know. Met him by accident, and dragged him home. Don't believe you wanted to come, you old rotter!" he said, thumping his friend on the back.

Hubbard made some sort of excuse.

"I didn't want to come tonight because I'm not dressed for decent company." He glanced at his tweed suit. "George wouldn't let me go back to the hotel to change. I hope you will excuse me, Mrs. Paget."

"You can apologize to Marna while I go and have a wash," Paget said, and she went off whistling light-heartedly delighted with himself for having given Marna what he fondly believed to be a pleasant surprise.

III.—HUGH HOME AGAIN

There was a little silence when George had gone, then Marna said tremulously:

"Won't you sit down?"

She hardly knew what she was saying; she felt almost lightheaded with happiness, and when Hubbard stooped to pick up the book she had dropped she said nervously: "Oh, never mind; don't trouble!" and at the same moment she stooped to recover it for herself, and their hands met.

Marna caught her breath with a sharp little sound, drawing away as if he had hurt her, and the hot blood surged into Hubbard's face, and for a moment he stood looking at her, as if not knowing what to do; then suddenly he put out both hands and caught hold of her desperately.

"Marna!"

There was no other word spoken, but they kissed as lovers kiss who have for long been parted, and it was only when George Paget's step and the sound of his cheery whistling was heard in the big hall outside that they fell apart, shaken to the very depths of their beings.

And that was the beginning of a month which was so near to heaven, and yet not heaven, that often Marna told herself it must be hell, and sometimes she wished with all her soul that Hubbard had never come home, and sometimes she was terrifyingly near to hating her husband, and sometimes she believed that the only way out of it for all of them would be for her to die, only death was such an unknown thing, and she knew she dared not take the risk of being separated from Hugh through all eternity.

But at any rate, the Little Flapper was quite happy. In her new life she blossomed and unfolded like a flower which for long has been planted in wretched soil, and is suddenly transplanted by tender hands into warmth and sunshine. She was eternally contented, eternally grateful.

Her whole life and love and desire began and ended with Marna. How to please her, how to do little things for her, how constantly to show her adoring love and gratitude, was the Little Flapper's only thought.

"But there is so little I can do for her!" she one day confided to the dignified Harnigan, when, as it was pouring with rain, he had been sent to fetch her from school.

Oddly enough, Biddy Saunders was not in the least afraid of Harnigan. His wooden features and great dignity had ceased to inspire her with awe. Quite in the early days she had discovered that he kept a heart beneath his immaculately fitting coat, and there, on a mutual plane of love and understanding for Marna Paget, he and the Little Flapper met.

"Are you married, Harnigan?" the Little Flapper asked him one day, and was dismayed at his very emphatic retort.

"No, thank you, miss. No wimmen for me."

She stared at him with round eyes.

"Don't you like women, Harnigan?"

Harnigan looked straight before him as he answered:

"About as much as a cat likes water, miss."

"Oh!"

This had needed some consideration, and a moment or two elapsed before the Little Flapper said in a small voice:

"I never liked them, either, till I came here." And she shivered as she remembered the woman whom she had known as Mother, and all the other women who had dragged round with the third-rate touring company, with their painted faces and loud voices and coarse language.

"But then," she added aloud, taking it for granted that Harnigan knew of whom she was thinking, "she isn't a woman—not an ordinary woman. She's an angel."

"She is that," Harnigan agreed. "But then," he added, "it's not every day that you meets anyone like the mistress."

The Little Flapper smiled up into Harnigan's wooden face with sudden rapture.

"And she's just the Luckiest Lady!" she said eagerly. "It's like a fairy story, isn't it? I should think she's got everything in the world she wants—at least, I hope she has," she added devoutly.

"One never knows, miss," he said at last. "Maybe there's something in the heart of us all, so to speak, that we want and never tell about."

Biddy looked profoundly interested.

"Is there something in your heart, Harnigan?" she inquired.

"There is not, miss."

"Oh!" Biddy was disappointed. "Why not?" she asked.

"'Twould be degradading," said Harnigan.

It was always his last word, always his way of definitely closing a discussion which was becoming embarrassing, and so getting beyond his powers of argument.

Biddy sighed and gave it up, but afterwards she thought about it a good deal. What could there be in all the world that her beloved Marna did not possess? If there was anything surely there must be some way of obtaining it for her?

She had a car and a lovely house, and lovely frocks, and lots of money, and many diamonds—she had shown them to the Little Flapper, all lying in little beds of white velvet and locked up in a safe—and she had so many friends that the Little Flapper got humbly confused with them all and could not remember their names—with all, that is except Hugh Hubbard, and he was different, though why he was different Biddy could not have explained. But the first time they met, the Little Flapper took him into her heart, and adopted him straight away.

He was not at all a handsome man, unless steady eyes and a firm mouth and a quick smile make a man handsome. He was rather quiet, too; especially when George Paget was in the room, hardly speaking at all unless he was spoken to, and keeping in the background as if he felt happier there. But then, George Paget was always so lively—always laughed so much. George Paget, who so the Little Flapper told herself warmly, was just a dear, although she did not love him as she loved Hugh Hubbard.

Dolly Benson, who went to school with the Little Flapper, and who had been dubbed "The Big Flapper," by George Paget, also liked Hugh Hubbard, it appeared. She was three years older than Biddy Saunders, and much older and more modern in her ways and in her outlook on life.

"When I grow up I shall marry a man like Mr. Hubbard," she announced one day to the Little Flapper.

Biddy opened brown eyes of astonishment.

"Will you?" she murmured.

"Of course." The Big Flapper was very emphatic about it. "And he's the sort of man your beloved Marna ought to have married," she declared.

"Do you think so?" Biddy said, in horror.

"Of course!" The Big Flapper was more emphatic still. "Can't you see what a lovely pair they make?" she demanded impatiently.

The Little Flapper flushed; somehow such words made her feel hurt and unhappy.

"I never thought about it," she stammered. "I—I don't think I like to think about it."

Afterwards she tried her best to forget it, and yet from that moment the thought was always coming back to her, especially when she saw Marna and Hugh Hubbard together, especially when she heard that Hugh Hubbard was soon going away again—abroad somewhere.

"Why is he going?" she asked Marna wistfully; and Marna went on hurriedly turning the pages of a book as she answered:

"His work is abroad—he lives there. He's only been home on business."
